When the North Atlantic Treaty was being negotiated in 1949 as primarily a military document, Lester B. Pearson, then Canadian external affairs minister, pushed hard for a clause that would pave the way for the alliance to get into the socio-economic area as well as those of straight defence and international politics.

Eventually, his ideas came out as Article II, which is still known as "the Canadian article." It is under this provision that NATO would act under a tentative decision taken by deputy ministers of the alliance countries at Brussels Thursday.

As agreed to by the deputy ministers, —subject to approval at a full ministerial meeting Dec. 3-5—the 15 nations would set up a Committee on the Challenges of Modern Society, so named by the spokesmen who presented the idea on the initiative of United States President Nixon.

This sharp swerve from the normal practices of NATO up to now would bring investigations into such things as air pollution, disaster control, soil erosion, deforestation and many other problems of the environment of life in advanced countries.

All these now are regarded as coming within the Pearson-instigated Article II, which committed the partners to promoting the "well-being" of member nations as well as dealing with defence and politics.

Up to now, cold war tensions have largely kept NATO's eye on the latter two aspects. Now, as one insider puts it, "the alliance is picking up its third leg, so to speak."

If NATO seems a limited area in which to take up the problems of global society—since the United Nations has far wider scope and a host of specialized agencies—the main explanation is that NATO consists mainly of highly industrialized nations where the problems to be studied are most prevalent.

Further, it is stated, the aim is just to improve knowledge and then to pass it on to the other countries that want it. Possibly a couple of other unspoken reasons might be that this study won't be subject to any East bloc veto, and the initiative came from the U.S., which generally has its way in NATO's councils.

In any case, Canadian spokesmen at the Brussels meeting this week not only endorsed the idea, partly because Canada is wrestling with many of the problems involved in the study, in fact, there is some belief that joint Canada-U.S. action on such matters as trans-border pollution in the Great Lakes may have stimulated Nixon's thinking on the subject, although no one suggests that the NATO initiative was not all his.

"Somehow I get the impression you guys aren't serious about this!"

Sport and Apartheid

Regina Leader-Post

A South African rugby team is currently touring Britain but its first match — with Oxford University — was cancelled because of protests against the South African policy of apartheid.

The Daily Express of London denounced this as a scandalous development in British sport and quotes with approval a statement by a spokesman for the Conservative party who said playing fields were sanctuaries against a team from Red China, for example, does not make a man a Maoist.

The Scotsman of Edinburgh had another viewpoint. It said the South African prime minister desperately wants to reduce South Africa's isolation while maintaining and strengthening apartheid. He wants no barriers in International sport against South Africa, but he ought not to have his wish granted unless he starts to pull down South Africa's own peculiar internal barriers.

The Manchester Guardian there are no signs that South Africa has made any shift in apartheid policy, no matter how small. It has erected barriers in Black Africa and is not prepared to accept Maoris on a visiting New Zealand rugby team.

It said the last five years have seen a steady dismantling of the limited political rights of African and Coloreds in South Africa and the growing efficiency of the police state apparatus which holds them down. The gradual infiltration of a few more skilled non-whites to fill vacancies in the job market has been balanced by moves to make the most unlike increasingly a migrant, rootless and less cohesive population. The long term trend ahead is thus an increasingly united white electorate with a one-party system, ruling over an increasingly numerical and better-educated but treated, voteless and totally repressed majority.

Marijuana's Dangers

Brockville Recorder and Times

As the Canadian committee continues hearings into the non-medical use of drugs, it is interesting to note the lack of scientific backing in many of the briefs presented to the committee by young people pushing for the abolition of laws barring the sale and use of marijuana. Because of the lack of the weed even in this area, an article in a recent edition of "Family Health," a monthly magazine is timely.

"Most teenagers believe they know a great deal more about marijuana than their parents," the article notes. "But most of their facts are myths. While not enough scientific research has been done to be certain of all the adverse long-term effects, the majority of psychiatrists surveyed, (100 of them), believe that heavy use of the drug by people under 18, may have adverse, permanent effects on the development of their personalities.

"Used regularly, marijuana seems to blunt motivation, creativity and talent as well as cutting down on the user's ability to learn, work and the capacity to form meaningful relationships."

Voices

Chicago Daily News

If the president listens closely he may hear the voices of the American people or a substantial number of people, urging the old concepts be set aside and a new role designed for the nation in a world that is changing with bewildering speed. Mr. Nixon has said that "under no circumstances whatever will I be affected" by anti - war protests. Whatever short - range effect that statement may have served, we are confident Mr. Nixon will be responsive to the plainly expressed will of the people he serves.

Contradictory

Winnipeg Free Press

Those closely involved with political party organization and policy platforms are frequently aware of glaring inconsistencies and contradictions which are clearly apparent to even the most casual of outside observers.

This has certainly been the case in the national NDP convention which has just concluded in Winnipeg.

In varying degrees, all wings of the NDP movement express fear of American penetration in to Canadian business and rail against American ownership, investment or direction in Canadian industry.

Having recorded the party position in this regard, the delegates in almost the same breath reverse themselves and appoint 12 representatives of largely American controlled unions to the board of the United States to the national council of their own party.

NDP delegates, in retrospect, will perhaps wonder why it is that the public finds NDP deliberations and policy statements so unconvincing.

Questionable Standards

Ottawa Journal

The meeting of the Central Canada Broadcasters' Association in Ottawa recently brought home the somewhat incredible fact that radio broadcasting began only 50 years ago when the first broadcasting licence was issued to the Canadian Marconi Company's station XWA. Broadcasting — radio and television — is now so pervasive a part of life it is hard to believe that it all started only in the lifetime of persons who do not consider themselves old.

Our own thoughts on those 50 years are not all happy.

Television is driving people out of their homes — if they watch anything better than what Eugene Hallman (a CBC vice-president and general manager for English network broadcasting) calls "low grade serial fiction." Television and radio have proved to be at least as divisive as unifying in our national life. They (and newspapers most share guilt here too) have too often exacerbated relations between peoples instead of functioning as instruments of conciliation.

The obscenity of television is not the four-letter words or sexy scenes. The obscenity is the page, the trivia, the merciviousness that stalks the screen day after day in living color.

Today the prevailing error is to set broadcasting's goals too low, and this in an era when more people have more education than at any time in human history. Broadcasting has done too many blatant things in its short history for any despair over its future. But it is up to the Hallmans and those who hold similar views to lift it out of the ruck where it is 50 years on.

Fifty Years of Broadcasting

Labor and Wage Demands

Owen Sound Sun-Times

A top labor official said the other day, at the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Labor, that the government's proposals for price and wage restraints were "the slickest, most sophisticated con job any government has tried to put over on the people in my lifetime." The statement, coupled with recent inflated wage contracts, makes one wonder just who is doing the conning.

The Ontario Federation of Labor has served notice that it will fight government wage restraints. The Canadian Labor Congress has said it will refuse to go along with price and wage controls. And this week we have had yet another indication of how unreal labor demands are getting, with announcement that Hamilton electrical workers in the next year will reach a wage rate of $7.07 per hour, and will get double time for all work done after Friday noon. Under this contract electricians in the Hamilton area will have a basic income of nearly $15,000 a year for a 36-hour week and, with overtime, should have little difficulty reaching $20,000. This is two to three times the national industrial average. Its effect on the rest of the construction trades in such a city can be imagined.

Labor officials have stated that government and employers are "assuming" that wages and prices are to blame for inflation. They assert that this is "impossible to justify, either in theory or in practice."

By the same token, how do these same officials justify a 48 per cent increase for electricians? It will be difficult to justify a salary of $15,000 to the average Canadian earning $5,000 to $7,000 for a 40-hour week. It is doubtful that his credibility will stretch far enough to accept it as a non-inflationary move.

Many, Agree

London Times

A Gallup poll, finding that 57 per cent of those interviewed agreed with U.S Senator Goodell's call for the return of all servicemen from Vietnam by the end of 1970, suggests that the revulsion against the war extends far beyond the following Senator Eugene McCarthy and other liberal leaders who inspire the peace movement. A conversion of Middletown conservatives, who have hitherto backed the requirements of peace with honor, to unconditional disengagement from Asia's entanglements, is a real possibility in America's present mood of frustration. It could be a dangerous one.

New Route To Improve Santa Parade

TRENTON (Staff) — Here comes Santa Claus! Here comes Santa Claus — right down Santa Claus lane!

When Santa visits Trenton Saturday, Nov. 22, he'll have a new lane or two to travel along.

That's because of a new parade route, designed to cover more of the town's downtown area and include a section of the residential area on the east side of the river.

Jack Wilson, manager of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the annual Santa Claus parade for the fifth year in a row, reported that the marshalling point for this year's parade will be Coach Crescent and the parking area in Centennial Park.

The parade will assemble at noon and move out to Campbell Street at 1:30 p.m. The procession will head north on Campbell to Dundas Street East and west on Dundas to Marmora Street.

Then the parade will proceed north on Marmora and cross the James MacDonald bridge and head south on Front Street to Dundas Street West then down Dundas Street West to Queen Street.

A northerly direction on Queen Street will take the procession to St. Peter's School where the parade will disband.

All parking meters on the parade route will not be used from 12 noon on to enable onlookers to get a better view and also to allow more room for the procession.

Mr. Wilson pointed out that the use of the new bridge (with no overhead obstructions) is a definite advantage over the use of the town's much older swing bridge.

"We've passed the half-way mark in floats and bands already with 17 having committed themselves for the Santa Claus Parade as compared to the 31 entries we had last year," Mr. Wilson added.

Among the entries received to date are five bands — the Versatile Drum and Bugle Corps and majorettes, the Quinte Highland Pipe Band, the Trenton Citizens' Band and two bands from CFB Trenton, the Brass and Reed Band and the Pipe and Drum Band, as well as two majorette groups headed by Valerie Smith and Dorothy Dickey.

Many groups have already signified their intentions of entering floats. Some of these are the Belleville and District Kennel Club, Trenton Kiwanis Club, CFB Trenton Sing-out group, 704 Air Cadet Squadron, Parents Without Partners Club, Trenton Rotary Club, Batawa Public School, Rocky Ridge Riding Stable and the featured CFB Trenton Santa Claus Float.

Additional floats are expected as are antique cars and horseback riders and 11-year-old Lynne Bailey of Brighton, who will perform a majorette solo.

Lone snag in the proceedings so far, according to Mr. Wilson, is a delay in receiving contributions. The annual parade is financed by contributions from local industry and commerce and Mr. Wilson expressed the hope that these businesses would respond quickly and send in their donations to the Santa Claus Parade.

Trucks Crush Two Injured

TWEED (special) — The construction area on Highway 7 between Madoc and Marmora was the scene of still another accident Saturday afternoon as a half-ton truck and the tractor section of a large highway trailer collided.

As a result of the mishap three persons were admitted to hospital, one at Belleville and two others at Oshawa. Property damage amounted to $3,500.

Arthur Thomas Stevens, 22, of Oshawa, was the driver of the half-ton pickup while William Sargent, 44, R. R. 3 Tweed, was driving the highway tractor.

Mr. Stevens and his passenger, Joseph Kaleman, 29 also of Oshawa, were taken to hospital in Oshawa, while David Sargent, 9, who was riding with his uncle in the other vehicle, was taken to Belleville hospital with a concussion and a broken collar bone.

YARMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Capt. Robert Porter and his crew of the herring seiner Tommy and Arnie lost about 50 tons of herring, they say, when a whale invaded their net. Trenton Tots Aid UNICEF

TRENTON (Staff) — Many of the children who went trick-or-treating here on Hallowe'en had more on their minds than satisfying their sweet tooth.

They carried orange and black UNICEF boxes for penny collection. The total in Trenton was $1,480 and $393 in the outlying areas.

The UNICEF penny-collection idea was conceived by children in the United States in the early 1950s and has since become tradition in many parts of North America.

This year the collection was marked by an increased involvement of children through the co-operation of the public and separate school boards in the area.

Ten public and separate schools in Trenton and five in the outlying area were made distribution and collection. All but one school Umuinv centres for the UNICEF boxes. All but one school was shown a UNICEF film which revealed some of the problems faced by other children in the world.

Mrs. Madeline Magnus, chairman of the Trenton campaign, noted that 50 adults helped in organizing the campaign here this year and said that stress will be placed on distribution of the money in the Nigeria-Biafra region.

"The remarkable thing about the UNICEF penny drive, now in its 13th year in this district, is that it's the only charity by children for children," asserted Mrs Magnus.

"Another remarkable thing is the spontaneous reaction of the children and their initiative," added Mrs. Rose Tagwood, the campaign chairman in the area surrounding Trenton.

Perhaps most remarkable is the amount of money collected by the children.

The biggest single contribution of the $1,873 total came from the Senior Breadner Public School in Trenton, where the children amassed a total of $229.

Last year the total for Trenton and district was $1,087 and the $1,480 collected by the school children in Trenton represents a 37 per cent increase over 1968.

Adding to the total was a contribution of $25 by the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 110 and $25 raised through a sock hop held Wednesday, Oct. 29, at Trenton High School.

The public and separate schools which took part in the Hallowe'en drive were: College Street, Queen Elizabeth, V. H. Cornell, Dufferin Street, Prince Charles, Marmora Senior School, Sedar Breadner, St. Peter's and St. Mary's; as well as public schools in Smithfield, Batawa, Carrying Place, Glen Miller and Stockdale.

Picton Crime Wave Probed by Police

PICTON (Staff) — Last weekend a "crime wave" swept Picton keeping members, of the town's seven-man police force constantly active.

At 12:15 a.m. Saturday, Scott Vader, RR2, Bloomfield, was assaulted in Picton by two unidentified youths. He was walking past the corner of King Street and Downes Avenue, when approached by two youths, one of them armed with "a long flat, hard object." Vader's attackers struck him on the face, chest and hands before a motorist stopped, frightening them away. The assailants fled behind a nearby supermarket and into a vacant field.

Picton police are still investigating the incident.

Fifteen minutes after the attack a Picton man, Burton Reid, 78, of Union Street was assaulted as he walked home.

Mr. Reid's attacker was frightened off by a Bridge St. resident who shouted when he saw Mr. Reid struck and dragged to a vacant lot.

Town police were called and a full description of the assailant was provided to them. Mr. Reid was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital for treatment of cuts and bruises.

Police believe robbery was the motive behind both assaults, although nothing was taken from the victims.

Saturday morning police were notified of a break - in at Prince Edward County Centre. It was the third in three months. Members of one of the county's intermediate hockey teams frightened off the intruder when he returned from a game in Wellington and was preparing to store hockey equipment in the County Centre.

Police investigation disclosed that the person responsible for the break-in had gained entrance by cutting a chain at the rear door of the centre. Once inside the building, attempts were made to enter the canteen, Bolts securing the wooden window panels foiled the effort.

A brace and bit left in the arena by a workman was used by the burglar to bore a hole in the window of the canteen.

Police are still investigating the breakin.

During the weekend Roblin Motors, King Street, reported the theft of three batteries and a carburetor from their show lot, across the street from the police station. The loss was estimated at $40.

Friday afternoon police recovered a car reported stolen by its owner, Raymond McNalley, Picton.

Mr. McNalley had left his car parked at the rear entrance of the Royal Hotel, it was last seen at 3:15 p.m. Friday.

Police recovered the stolen vehicle late Friday evening, parked on King Street.

Mr. McNalley had told police that his gas tank was approximately half full. When the car was found the gas gauge registered a quarter tank, indicating, according to police, that it had been driven for some distance before being parked and abandoned.

Annual Silver Cross Mothers' Tea Hosted by Ex-service-women

"It was all worthwhile," stated Belleville Mayor J. Russell Sebit, as he summed up his address Sunday afternoon to the Silver Cross Mothers at a tea held in their honor at the Branch 99 Royal Canadian Legion Hall, sponsored by the Ex-Servicewomen Branch 587.

The Mayor spoke as a medical officer who had served in the Armed Forces, expressing his personal feelings and extending civic greetings to the women who wear silver crosses to indicate they have lost a son while serving his country.

A special guest from Toronto Mrs. Elsie Garry, who has been president of the Silver Cross Women of the British Empire for 16 years and an active member of the IODE told the Mothers of the great pride she felt to be with them. Both Mrs. Garry's husband and brother did not return from World War I. On Tuesday, Armistice Day, Mrs. Garry will represent the Minister of Mines laying the wreath at the cenotaph at the Toronto City Hall.

The women were welcomed at the door by Branch 587 president Mrs. R. Rollins, while tea was poured by Mrs. R. Jamieson and Mrs. E. Lowden. Mrs. W. Embury expressed thanks and grateful appreciation on behalf of the Silver Cross Mothers.

Silver Cross Mothers who attended the tea included: Mrs. F. Bedell, Mrs. E. Hall, Mrs. F. Dainard, Mrs. W. Embury, Mrs. L. Gray, Mrs. T. Holland, Mrs. A. Howe, Mrs. F. Parsons, Mrs. W. Price, Mrs. M. Robeson, and Mrs. F. Shoemer.

The cake was cut by Mrs. T. Holland, who had been appointed by Branch 587 as Member of the Year.

Representing other veterans organizations were Mr. and Mrs. James Lynch, RCAF Association, Mrs. H. Northey, ANAF Ladies Auxiliary and Mrs. E. Semark the Branch 99 Ladies Auxiliary.

Ann Landers

Womens Institute Blocks Mother System

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to add my words of praise for the kind woman who let those three teen-age girls into her home when they pounded on her door, frightened to death by a deranged man who exposed himself.

These days it takes courage to open one's door — to anybody. We, in Emporia, Kansas, hit on a solution to the problem. Perhaps you'd like to pass it on to your readers in other cities: We have implemented a plan to help children who might run into trouble on the way to and from school. It is the Block Mother system. These women are selected by the home room teacher from kindergarten through grade 12. The mothers have placards in the front window — one on every block. The children are instructed to go to these homes if they run into trouble.

ANN LANDERS

If you use this letter, Ann, please don't credit me — give the credit to the Emporia Board of Education. — MRS. L.

DEAR MRS. L.: It's hard to believe that in America we need shelter stations where kids on their way to and from school can run when they need protection. But it's one of the tragic realities of our time and we must face it. My thanks to you for writing and a garland of roses to the Emporia, Kansas, Board of Education.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 28-year-old bachelor of average looks and personality. I have an average position and I live in an average apartment. My problem is women.

I am taking out five different ones at present. They all have the same goal in mind — marriage. Three are not silly, frivolous girls. They are between 32 and 45 years of age. I am happy in my present state and have no desire to settle down. I might reconsider one day, but for the time being I want no ties.

In case you think I am imagining things, I'd like to give you a few sample sentences. Miss A said to me after two dates: "You'll be 40 in two years — and that's no kid anymore. You need to settle down." I'm willing to give up my freedom and marry you," Mrs. B. (a widow) said after four dates. "If we were married, our combined incomes would enable both of us to live a lot better than either of us is living now. How about it?" Miss C (a career girl) said after two theatre dates and one concert: "I am not a loose woman, but I would consider going to bed with you if you told me you had marriage in mind."

I hate to come right out and say, "I am not interested in marriage." I said that once and the woman bawled for two hours. Please tell me how to make my position clear without hurting anybody's feelings. — NO STRINGS MONROE.

DEAR NO STRINGS: Any guy who can juggle five women at a time and has managed to avoid foreign entanglements for 28 years doesn't need any advice from Ann Landers. The Monroe Doctrine, as you practice it, seems to be extremely effective.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My cousin, with whom I have never been very close, is dating a man I know has served time for armed robbery. He has been married twice and has a 9-year-old son.

I cannot believe my cousin knows of his past. She is a fine person, but very naive. Shall I tell her, or would it be better to mention it to her family? — CONCERNED NOT.

DEAR CONCERNED: Are you absolutely certain of your facts? If so, ask your cousin if she is aware of her friend's history. If she is, offer no comment. Merely say, "I just wanted to make sure you knew." Do not tell her family.

Successful Living

A Successful Family

By DORIS CLARK

A recent book about family living reports research about the characteristics of a "successful family."

These are some of the facts: The husband is the chief breadwinner, chequebook balancer and central source of discipline. When asked to rank characteristics of a happy and successfully functioning family, all husbands and wives placed first, the feelings and expression of love and affection between family members; second, understanding and respect between family members.

Other factors were: husbands were masterful but flexible and wives were devoted, but strong and equal. Husbands and wives tended to be truthful about their feelings relative to love and sex.

Parents evoked strong taboos on smoking, drinking and unsupervised dating behavior. There were never serious family disagreements over problems; solutions were sought and achieved in a rational manner.

Family members held flexible roles and were very active in community voluntary groups. Extended family ties were maintained.

Look in me as if the family way of life is here to stay!

Dear Doris: In the spring I wrote to you about an orphanage in Viet Nam which was greatly in need of used clothing. The nurse who made the original request has not written to say she received a great many parcels.

However, due to severe bombings, the area in which she was located became extremely dangerous and transportation to the orphanage difficult. As a result, she left Viet Nam in September.

I would like to express my appreciation to those who were able to help out and for their concern for these unfortunate people.—American Nurse

Dear Nurse: On behalf of the generous readers, you are welcome. We are all sorry that the nurse in Viet Nam has had to withdraw from her post.

* * *

Dear Doris: My problem is nerves. When I get excited over something, or mad, I just shake and don't dare pick up a pencil to write, or pour tea or coffee, for it becomes quite embarrassing.

Please tell me what I could do to have a steady hand again. It would mean the world to me. — Broken-Hearted

Dear Broken-Hearted: You can learn to take hold of yourself. Children — the fortunate ones — are trained to control themselves through the loving discipline of parents. I grant you it is not as easy if you have to learn it your self after you have grown up.

When a small incident upsets you, take a minute to get yourself in hand. Say to your self: "Steady! It's not really that important." If you aren't under a lot of strain, bring your doctor into the picture and get his help with your nervous condition.

You have the most important key to the whole situation. You can learn relaxation and self-control. Sort out the important things in life from the unimportant, and treat them accordingly.

Oven-Braised Steaks

By MARY MOORE

There is more than one way to cook a leg of lamb. You do not always have to roast it, although a roast fresh leg of lamb is one of my greatest favorites.

But after reading the weekend advertisements I found frozen lamb legs were selling anywhere from 59 to 79 cents. So I went to the store where they were 59 cents per pound and casually asked the head butcher to slice it for me on his electric saw into ¾" slices. He complied as if it were an every day service.

Two of these thick slices I kept frozen for future use. The remainder I prepared as follows:

OVEN-BRAISED LAMB STEAKS

2 to 2¼ lbs. sliced (¾") frozen lamb leg steaks
1½ tbsps. margarine
1½ tbsps. flour
1¼ cups hot water
1 tsp. Bovril
1 tbsp. thick part mint sauce
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¼ tsp. savory
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar

Trim all fat from slices of lamb. Arrange them in a single layer on shallow baking dish. Melt margarine and stir in flour and when blended stir in hot water until slightly thickened and boiling. Add all remaining ingredients and pour evenly over lamb steaks. Cover casually with foil, folding it around edges of pan and bake at 275 deg. Fahr. 2½ hrs. Tender and good.

I made a semi-oven dinner of this by washing a small pepper squash and putting it in the oven whole and baked it along with the lamb steaks. I served fried green tomato slices with it and dessert pears with Edam cheese and crackers and thought it an easy meal to prepare.

Paris Furs Reaching New Extreme

PARIS (Reuters) — While fashion is tending to quieten down in other fields, furs in Paris are reaching new extremes with effects that make conservative fur coats look almost as stale as last week's bread.

French designers—no longer consider that a fur coat is a classic investment to wear for years, though the purchase price in Paris is higher than ever.

Massive labor costs are involved in making strips of fur together to resemble grandmother's patchwork quilt, one of the favorite new designs.

Even the "fun furs" of recent years have been eclipsed by widely unconventional treatments that frankly set out to be a joke—witty, imaginative coats, scarves, and fur trimmings evolved with real throwaway detachment.

Yves Saint Laurent personifies the trend toward humor with a group of eight coats in art patchwork in mink, otter, and broadtail, often trimmed with braid.

The season's real winner is Yves' black otter coat with an entire Somalia panther skin appliqued across the back. The animal's head makes a hood, with the paws and tail angled round toward the front, rather like a caveman wrapping himself in his latest trophy.

Chombert goes in for tiny multi-colored tufts of mink worked in giant chevron and totem pole strips or alternate scallops of black and white mink, among other lively models in the new collection.

Christian Dior, once the champion of conservatism, now features pop art furs. There are mink ponchos made in tricolor stripes, and a group of long straight mink stoles in checks, harlequin diamond, or "parquet floor" inlays with a giant C.D. monogram on one end.

Fur worked like tweed appears everywhere, in rabbit, beaver and mink.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "When you cleaned out the garage, why didn't you move the bikes and sweep out the debris in the corner? It's a mess back there."

Son: "I never get any thanks for working around here. All you notice are the corners I didn't do."

Father: "Thank you for cleaning the garage. You really worked hard on it and I appreciate it. The first time you have a few minutes, why don't you move the bikes and clean those leaves so they won't blow and clutter up your clean garage."

The teenager should learn to do a job right, but he's just as likely to learn if parents emphasize the honest effort made, even when they must point out the flaws.

Science Council Has Plan

Vast Communications Network Is Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — A vast communications network in science and technical information is being proposed to the government this week by the Science Council of Canada.

Planned expansion of the national science library includes a $12,000,000 building to be started here next year as a key element of the network.

The science library is the only national one in the world embracing all branches of science and its 750,000 volumes are to be expanded to about 2,000,000. Provisions are to be made for computer and telecommunications links strengthening the library's ability to spread information to industry, other libraries and users in Canada and abroad.

Dr. O. M. Solandt, science council chairman, confirmed today that the library expansion, planned for some time by the National Research Council, has been examined specifically in relation to policy recommendations to the government on dissemination of technical and scientific information.

NRC was given approval within the last few weeks to begin the expansion program next year with construction of the new building.

The science council is scheduled Wednesday to deliver formal recommendations to Prime Minister Trudeau on dissemination of technical and scientific information.

The science council is expected to recommend that a national scientific and technical information network be established with maximum accessibility by users, cutting across existing barriers among present special, academic, public and school libraries.

Ellis Juniors Gain First Point, Lose Fuller's Services

By GREG McLEOD
Staff Sportswriter

Belleville Ellis Juniors might have made their debut in the point column of the Eastern Ontario Junior B Hockey League standings during weekend action but, they lost star forward Ron Fuller.

Fuller who was playing out his last year of Junior Hockey with the Belleville club accounted for 12 goals while assisting on 13 others in the 1968-69 season, but left Loyalist College and the Juniors to work in the United States.

"We offered to help him find a job here in Belleville," said coach Floyd Crawford, "but it seems there is something in Rochester Ron likes. The club is going to miss him."

The Ellis Junior managed to pick up their first point of the season with a 6-6 Sunday tie with the Oshawa Crushmen.

"The boys played a good game of hockey tonight, said Crawford. "We should have won it, they got a couple of cheap goals on us."

"Our fellows made a 100 per-cent improvement, commented Manager Jim "Snipe" Matthews. "Our lines were clicking tonight."

"I wasn't happy with the way our boys played at all, was Oshawa coach Bob Dionne's reaction. "They weren't skating anywhere near par. They were letting Belleville come out of their own end with the puck."

John Mulvihill and Al Jones played a solid game on the blue line for Belleville while Danny Lopenette and Teddy Waite showed excellent back checking ability.

Belleville held the margin in goals and play up to the five-minute mark of the third period but Belleville got the go-ahead goal before the period ended.

Belleville scorers were Dentils McCormack with two while John McConnell and Brian Coughlin and bantam graduates Danny Lopenette and Kevin Dockrill adding single goals.

Wayne Robson with a hat trick and Eric Howard, Len McAvoy and Lee Neatie were the goal-getters for Oshawa.

A dispute arose late in the first period when Danny Lopenette, Teddy Waite, and Brian Coughlin executed a perfect three-way passing play with Lopenette putting the puck past Oshawa goalie Randy Dittmar. The goal was disallowed when referee Pat Haggerty ruled that Waite was in the crease while screening Dittmar.

The Ellis Juniors outshot the Crushmen 33-27.

Belleville's next game is Friday night at the Memorial Arena with the Trenton Golden Hawks supplying the opposition. Game time is 9 p.m.

Then on Saturday the juniors travel to Oshawa with an 8 p.m. game against the Crushmen.

Friday night's contest against the Golden Hawks will be Nicholson Catholic College night at the Memorial Arena. All Nicholson students with a student's card will be admitted into the game for 25 cents.

Mo-Hawks: 3-1

No More Road Jinx

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

KINGSTON — If they were going to break a jinx, there's no hockey team Belleville-Mo-Hawks would sooner have done it against than Kingston Aces.

A good sprinkling of Belleville fans roared their approval, playing-coach Davey Jones bobbled with enthusiasm, and Mo-Hawk trainer Ron Fralick hummed "To Dream the Impossible Dream" all the way home on the bus from Kingston last night after the Mo-Hawks whipped the Aces 3-1.

It marked the first time since three seasons ago either OHA Senior A club had won a game on the other's ice.

Their win, courtesy goals by George Godson, Gary Dalliday and Lorne O'Donnell, also gave the Mo-Hawks a three-game winning streak and a fourth-place tie with Barrie Flyers, whom the Mo-Hawks tangle with on the road Friday night.

There couldn't have been any more than 50 or 60 Belleville supporters in the crowd of 2,000, but they gave the Mo-Hawks more vocal encouragement than the 1,800 who watched the Mo-Hawks blast the Aces 5-3 in Belleville Friday night.

Charlie Convery drew first — and only — blood for the Aces as they swarmed around Steve Rexe in the opening minute of the second period. A scoreless first period before the season's largest crowd whet their enthusiasm.

George Godson, wearing a protective helmet for the first time, gave the Mo-Hawks their first glimmer of jinx-breaking hope just past the six-minute mark of the second.

Godson slid one defenceman, then watched his low shot rebound off Bob Olajos' leg over a frustrated Tom Mercer's shoulder.

"Keep on top of them," Jones hammered at his players in the dressing room. "We'll get the breaks.

The first one came with the final period barely seven minutes old. Gary Dalliday rapped home a goal from the edge of Mercer's crease with Kingston's John Ford about to step on the ice after serving a holding minor. Lou Kazowski's low point shot gave Mercer trouble, Jones took the first whack at the rebound, and Dalliday popped it in.

Five minutes later, O'Donnell polished off an outstanding two-way evening by taking George Godson's pass to hammer the third nail into Kingston's coffin.

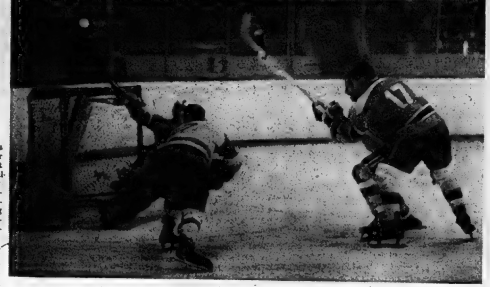
With "Wiener" Brown last to shutdown and "Shaker" Baker absent due to a family bereavement, Bill Armour again moved back in pair with Greg Marchen on defence and junior B grad Ray Summers made only his fourth appearance in a Mo-Hawk lineup.

Summers played a steady centre between Ralph Plane and Jack Wilton. The second line of Jones, Dalliday and Wayne McConnell was also effective in giving the Aces more to worry about than the potent Godson-O'Donnell-Ferguson combination.

Their four points Sunday gave the "Bread-and-Butter" threesome a healthy 35 in their first 10 games.

It was goalie Steve Rexe's turn to cuddle last night. The object of much derision from Kingston players, fans, and reporters after allowing seven goals in a 7-3 exhibition loss in Kingston, Rexe was a key last night as the Aces outshot Belleville 33-26.

Next home action for the Mo-Hawks comes Sunday afternoon when Woodstock is in Belleville for a 2 p.m. game. The Mo-Hawks are eager to avenge the fact that they provided Woodstock with their only win to date.



Breaking the Spell

This third-period goal by Belleville Mo-Hawks' Gary Dalliday (7) proved to be the winner as Belleville won its first OHA Senior A hockey game in Kingston since three seasons ago. Linemate Davey Jones and Kingston Aces' defender Ed Long (17) watch Dalliday jam the puck past Aces' goalie Tom Mercer. The Mo-Hawks won 3-1.

COSSA Opposition Tough

Quinte, Moira and Nicholson high school football teams are going to have to be on their toes when they meet three Peterborough teams.

The Thomas A. Stewart Griffins who won Quinte Zone for Saints for the "AA" title walked through all opposition without too much trouble this year. They received a bye into COSSA after defeating PCVS Raiders and Cobourg East for the Kawartha District crown. They will be trying to give the Saints their first setback after eight victories, including an exciting 9-8 semi final win over Oshawa Eastdale Thursday.

Tuesday's COSSA Senior 'AA' game will be played at Quinte at 1 p.m.

The Moira junior Trojans, highest scoring football team in Bay of Quinte senior or junior groupings this season with 306 points, clash with the Quinte Secord junior Lions for the junior 'AA' portion of COSSA in Peterborough to morrow at 1:30 p.m.

Adam Scott Laughton, the defending COSSA champions, will be putting an 18-game unbeaten streak on the line. The Trojans will be hoping for the ninth straight victory after beating Oshawa Central 21-0 last week to earn the right to bid for COSSA honors.

In the third game on Tuesday's COSSA agenda, Nicholson Catholic College tackles St. Peter's High School juniors for the junior 'A' title at Albert College, game time 1 p.m.

Nicholson played only three exhibition games all season and earned their berth in COSSA by defeating Bowmanville 14-13 Thursday.

The Kinsmen Bantam All-stars meanwhile skated to a 5-4 victory over Peterborough. Grant Goegan had two goals, Steve Kirby, Kevin Lundy and Mark Coates added singles.

Playoff Birdies Give Bowerman Card

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (CP-Special) — Thanks to Gary Bowerman, Belleville can now claim a representative on the illustrious United States Professional Golfers' Association tour.

The 28-year-old city native needed to win a three - way playoff Saturday to grab the last of 12 tournament tickets handed out after competition in the PGA approved players' school.

"I played better in that playoff than I did all week," Bowerman told pro Jay Sigel and Steve by telephone last night.

A pair of Bowerman birdies in five playoff holes ousted New Zealander John Lister and New Yorker Ralph Johnston after the three had tied with 287 totals for the four - round event.

"I had to drop a 15 - foot putt on the 18th in the last round to even make the playoff," Bowerman said. An assistant club pro at Toronto's Maple Downs C. C., Gary led the field of 47 aspiring young pros for the first two rounds, shooting a sizzling opening 68 and a second-round 75. He ballooned to a pair of 77s on the last 36 holes Friday and Saturday.

Karl Olson of Oregon won top spot, firing a final-round 67 for a 286 total. The only Canadian besides Bowerman to qualify for a berth on the lucrative 1970 U.S. pro tour was Toronto's Ben Kern, who shot 71 Saturday for a 294 total.

"I was trying too hard," Bowerman told his parents last night. "Then I made the playoff, I just kept telling myself what Knudson and Baldinelli always told me: "Hit it hard as you can and keep it down the middle."

A PGA member in Canada for six years now, Bowerman learned his golf on the Bay of Quinte club's fairways and his 66 on the lengthy par-71 layout is the course record.

He will now return to Sarasota Springs where he spends his golfing winter before making his debut on the rich pro circuit after the New Year.

Learn's Late Interception Insures Argos' 'Sure Thing'

TORONTO (CP) — The game that was billed as a sure bet for Toronto Argonauts came close to becoming the upset of the season Sunday.

The Argos did pull it out of the fryer, injuring two Hamilton Tiger-Cats quarterbacks and gaining a 15-9 victory that placed them in the two-game total-point Eastern Football Conference final against Ottawa Rough Riders.

But it was no tension-packed with defensive action that coach Leo Cahill said he didn't "even think about Ottawa" until Toronto's Ed Learn intercepted a touchdown-bound pass on his own goal line on the final play of the game.

The Argos now meet the Rough Riders in the first game of the final here next Sunday. The second game is scheduled for Ottawa Nov. 22 with the winner advancing to the Grey Cup final Nov. 30 in Montreal.

Toronto went into Sunday's sudden-death semi-final eight-point favorites after defeating the Ticats twice in three regular-season meetings. Toronto won its last game 31-8 over the Ticats.

Hamilton's defence was superb throughout the first half and held the Argos to 13 yards in the first quarter and 54 in the second.

It was the Toronto defence, however, that set the stage for 10 of Toronto's points by recovering Hamilton fumbles and leaving the Argos in scoring position.

Toronto's points—all in the second half—came on two field goals and a convert by Tom Johnansen, a touchdown by quarterback Tom Wilkinson and two punt singles by Dave Mann.

Meanwhile, John Manel, one of three Ticat quarterbacks, scored Hamilton's only touchdown and Tommy Joe Coffey kicked a field goal.

But the Toronto defence knocked Ticat quarterback Joe Zuger unconscious in the third quarter and sidelined substitute Manel with an eye injury just minutes later.

Zuger, sidelined most of the season with hand injuries, made his first start in more than a month at quarterback with a plastic protector covering the injured little finger of his throwing hand.

He completed eight of 23 pass attempts for 136 yards and had three intercepted before Wilkinson Blum and Learn tackled him on the Toronto 45-yard line after he had taken the Ticats 36 yards on five plays and lost 10 yards on penalties.

Manel then took over, took the Ticats to the Toronto two-yard line on two plays and a 15-yard penalty against the Argos and drew over the line for the touchdown.

He suffered the eye injury the next time Hamilton got possession of the ball.

John Eckmann, who has been substituting for Zuger, took over and completed four of eight pass attempts and had one intercepted.

Zuger returned to punt for the club but was semi-conscious throughout the remainder of the game and was still uncertain of his whereabouts a half-hour after the contest ended.

Toronto, alternating Wilkinson and Frank Cosentino at quarterback, gained 15 first downs to Hamilton's 16 and was held to 73 yards in the air.

The Argos gained another 156 yards along the ground with halfback Jim Symons accounting for 82 on 18 carries.

The Ticats gained 205 yards in the air and 136 rushing.

Wilkinson completed seven of 10 attempts for all 73 yards, while Cosentino had two of his seven intercepted with the other five incomplete.

So edgy was the Hamilton defence that it trapped Toronto in its own end through most of the first 30 minutes and the Argos never got inside Hamilton's 31-yard line.

Meanwhile, the Argos' defence and a 45.1-yard punting average by Mann, who was called out of retirement, kept the Ticats outside field-goal range until Coffey finally booted one from 40 yards early in the second quarter.

A Hamilton fumble on Mann's punt in the third quarter finally gave Toronto possession of the ball on the Ticats' 47. A 15-yard penalty against the visitors and five yards rushing on two plays put the Argos on the Hamilton 27 and Johansen kicked a 32-yard field goal to tie the score.

An interception by the Argos stalled Hamilton's next drive at 24 yards, Toronto gained 11 before the Ticats intercepted and Hamilton started its next possession down march from its own 39.

Coffey's convert was nullified by a penalty against Hamilton and Johansen kicked a 44-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter.

Wilkinson then gave Toronto a 12-9 lead, sneaking over from the Hamilton one-yard line, and Mann punted two singles.

Finally, with enough time to complete one play, Eckmann aimed for Garney Henley in the Toronto end zone but three Toronto defenders got under the ball, bobbled it and finally Learn hauled it in to insure the victory.

Aussie Whips Nick

HONOLULU (AP) — It was a long, tough struggle for Bruce Crampton, five years of frustration that came to an end Sunday with his victory in the $125,000 Hawaiian open golf tournament.

"It's been a long time since I've been here, in the winner's circle," the 34-year-old Australian said after a four-stroke victory over Jack Nicklaus.

Crampton, on tour regular since 1957, came from eight strokes off the pace to establish a one-stroke lead over Nicklaus at the end of three rounds Saturday.

Then he birdied his first two holes Sunday and won it going away. It really wasn't close. Bruce had a final 67, five under par on the 7,029 yard, par-72 Waialae Country Club course, and finished with a 274 total.

Nicklaus closed with a 70—never really getting untracked—and finished second at 278. He was followed by rookie John Schroeder and Chi Chi Rodriguez, tied at 280, with Jack McGowan and Tom Weiskopf at 281.

Stamps Devastate Lions With Keeling's Air-power

CALGARY (CP) — Quarterback Jerry Keeling turned Bjilish Columbia's dream into a flying nightmare Saturday and led Calgary Stampeders to the final of the Western Football Conference.

Keeling gained 322 yards in the air, passed for two touchdowns and scored one himself as the Stampeders downed the Lions 33-21 after British Columbia had ridden a late-season drive to the WFC playoffs for the first time since 1964.

The Lions clawed out of the conference cellar with four wins in their last six games.

But the victory trail ended before 22,133 fans at McMahon Stadium and Calgary moved into a best-of-three conference final against Saskatchewan Roughriders. The first game of the series is scheduled for Regina Saturday.

But the Stampeders collected most of the bruises during the contest.

"Our training room is full," coach Jim Duncan said after the game.

None of the injuries, except that to the knee of defensive tackle Don Luzzi, appeared serious. Luzzi, coming off an extended period on the injured list, was blocked at the knees in the second half and had to be helped from the field.

Keeling aggravated an ankle injury and tight end Herm Harrison twisted his knee two weeks before in the first half contributed to their defeat.

But the big man up the middle, Larry Robinson converted four times and added two field goals and a single on a field goal attempt that went wide.

The Lions got two touchdowns from quarterback Paul Brothers and another from defensive halfback Rich Robinson. Ted Gerela converted.

Robinson's touchdown came in the second quarter when he picked up a blocked punt and ran 32 yards. Jim Furlong, kicking from about the Calgary 40, booted the ball into his own backers as they faded under a determined Lions rush.

The Stampeder defence also came up with a couple of important plays, including the recovery of a B.C. fumble on the Calgary 15-yard line.

Calgary made two interceptions, the first one by Frank Andrush on Ted Gerela's opening play. Larry Robinson turned it into a field goal from 13 yards and added another from 17 before the Lions got on the scoreboard. Brothers scored from the one and Gerela converted to give the Lions a brief 7-6 lead.

Keeling rallied Calgary with passes to Ted Hendlin, Shaw, Harrison, Rudy Linterman and Evanshen before carrying the ball over from the one.

Cleveland Whipped 51-3

Vikings' Binge Cripples Browns

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An emotional binge—helped along by Joe Kapp and Gene Washington—sent Minnesota Vikings stumbling to a 51-3 romp over Cleveland Browns in a match-up of National Football League Century and Central division leaders Sunday.

The Browns, of course, know all about the emotional things. They enjoyed one of their own a week ago Sunday when they ran over Dallas Cowboys 41-10.

Coach Blanton Collier can only hope that Cleveland bounces back as well as the Cowboys did. Dallas showed little effect Sunday of last week's Browns binge. The Cowboys whacked off New Orleans 33-17 to remain comfortably in front of the NFL's Capital Division.

In other NFL games Sunday, St. Louis Cardinals walloped New York Giants 42-17, Philadelphia Eagles and Washington Redskins battled to a 28-28 tie, Los Angeles Rams ripped San Francisco 49ers 41-30, Detroit Lions took Atlanta Falcons 27-21, Baltimore Colts dumped Green Bay Packers 14-6 and Chicago Bears defeated Pittsburgh Steelers 38-7.

Kapp, former star with British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League, and Washington teamed for three touchdown passes—one of them on a play changed at the line of scrimmage which surprised not only the Browns, but the Vikings as well. Kapp finished with 18 completions in 24 attempts for 223 yards.

Kapp capped a sensational first half performance with his third touchdown pass to Washington—a one-yard scoring flip which only the quarterback and his wide receiver knew was coming.

There were 16 seconds left in the half and the Browns threw an 11-man rush-line at Kapp. The quarterback looked over to Washington, who was flanked wide, waved to let him in on the play and hit him.

Coach Bud Grant called the Vikings' show an emotional thing. "I don't think you ever expect a game like this," said Grant. "Next time it could happen to us. It kind of scares us going against Green Bay next week."

The Packers fell two games off Minnesota's pace when they were beaten by undermanned Baltimore.

The Colts looked without tight end John Mackey and lost his replacement, Tom Mitchell, as well as wide receiver Tommy Orr with injuries in the course of the game. But quarterback Johnny Unitas resorted to a ball control offence that kept the Packers at bay.

For the first time all season, the Bears won. Gale Sayers scored a pair of touchdowns and carried 28 times for 122 yards—his third straight 100-yard game. Rookie quarterback Bob Douglass passed for two scores and completed nine of 18 for 123 yards.

Jets Stampede Buffalo 16-6 For Club Record Sixth Straight Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Jets downed Buffalo Bills 16-6 Sunday, a club-record sixth straight triumph for the New Yorkers, for a 2½-game lead in the American Football League's Eastern Division.

Kansas City Chiefs maintained their half-game edge in the Western Division by dumping San Diego Chargers 27-3; second-place Oakland Raiders ripped Denver Broncos 41-10; Cincinnati Bengals tied Houston Oilers 31-31 on Horst Muhlmann's 38-yard field goal with 22 seconds left, and Miami Dolphins nipped Boston Patriots 17-16.

Bill Mathis bulled one yard for the Jets' only touchdown in the second quarter, while Jim Turner, the AFL scoring leader, kicked three field goals—from 37, 25 and 47 yards.

Bruce Alford connected on a pair of field goals that provided all of Buffalo's points.

Halfback Warren McVea surprised San Diego with a 50-yard scoring strike to Frank Pitts in the third quarter, then scored on a two-yard plunge early in the final quarter as the Chiefs, 8-1, all but eliminated San Diego, 4-5 from the Western Division race.

Daryle Lamonica and Fred Biletnikoff teamed up for three touchdown passes—covering 52, 28 and 15 yards—as Oakland turned back Denver to raise its record to 7-1-1.

It gave Lamonica a league-leading 25 touchdown tosses this season, while Biletnikoff's catches gave him 10 for the year, also tops in the AFL.

Cincinnati quarterback Greg Cook fired four touchdown passes, then guided the Bengals 69 yards in 10 plays to set up Muhlmann's tying boot.

Rookie Roy Gerela, who had kicked a 50-yard field goal with three minutes left to give Houston a 31-28 lead, missed a 60-yarder with only two seconds left.

Larry Csonkas 54-yard touchdown run with 2½ minutes left and Karl Kremser's conversion earned Miami a rain-soaked victory over Boston.

Black Hawks:

'We'd Rather Do It Ourselves'

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chicago Black Hawks may bring Bobby Hull back into the fold this week but they proved during the weekend they can score a few goals without him.

While hockey's Golden Jet brushed up on his skating in Elmhurst, Ill., the Black Hawks downed the Penguins 4-1 at Pittsburgh Saturday and trounced Toronto Maple Leafs 9-0 at Chicago Sunday to move out of the National Hockey League East Division cellar.

Hull said Sunday his lawyer would meet today with lawyers for the Hawks and he hoped they could resolve his contract dispute.

In the one other Sunday game, Oakland Seals and Philadelphia Flyers played to a 2-2 tie. Saturday, Montreal Canadiens defeated the Leafs 6-3, New York Rangers downed Los Angeles Kings 4-1, Detroit Red Wings edged Boston Bruins 3-2 and Minnesota North Stars beat St. Louis Blues 5-2.

The Black Hawks' Sunday victory came with an assist from a fog that socked in the Chicago airport, forcing the Leafs to take the train from Montreal after their game Saturday. The Toronto club arrived just half an hour before game time Sunday night.

Lou Angotti started the scoring for Chicago at 10:34 of the second period.

Dennis Hull and Pit Martin added second period goals and Stan Mikita scored three in the third to lead a six goal attack.

Angotti added another while Jim Pappin and Howie Menard rounded out the Hawks scoring. Rookie Jim Wiste assisted on all of Mikita's goals and added another point on Pappin's score.

The victory moved Chicago one point ahead of Toronto into fifth place.

Wayne Muloin scored for Oakland midway through the second period at Philadelphia and goalies Charlie Hodge for the Seals and Bernie Parent for the Flyers kept the score at 2-2 the rest of the way.

Ted Harrison got the other Oakland goal with Earl Heiskala and Garry Peters scoring for the Flyers.

Jacques Lemaire got his first three-goal game in Montreal Saturday night, scoring once in each period.

Murray Oliver of the Maple Leafs answered Lemaire's first goal about a minute later and centre Norm Ullman gave Toronto a 2-1 lead on a power play early in the second period. Lemaire's second goal tied it up and Ted Harris put the Canadiens in front to stay.

John Ferguson and Bobby Rousseau also scored for Montreal in the third period while defenceman Jim Dorey added a late goal for the Leafs.

The Canadiens and Red Wings, with 17 points each, are one back of New York in the East Division.

The Rangers held first place with their victory at Los Angeles in a game rescheduled to the afternoon from 8 p.m. PST. New York had protested the time change because they had played at Oakland Friday night, but general manager and coach Emile Francois said he preferred to win on the ice rather than by default.

Had New York refused the time change, put in because Kings' owner Jack Kent Cooke had booked a music show into his Forum Saturday night, the Kings would have forfeited the game.

The Rangers built a 3-0 lead after Wertowich's marker and Mikita got the winner with 38 seconds remaining in the first period.

Chicago captain Pat Stapleton and Pappin also beat Penguins goalie Les Binkley.

Bill Goldsworthy put the puck behind veteran goalie Jacques Plante to lead the Minnesota attack.

Danny Grant and Danny O'Shea also scored against St. Louis while Jean-Guy Talbot and Camille Henry replied for the Blues who remain in the West Division lead, three points ahead of Minnesota.

Gary Unger's fourth goal in as many games gave the Red Wings their victory over the Bruins.

Billy Dea and Nick Libett gave the Red Wings a 2-0 first-period lead.

Garnet Bailey and defenceman Dallas Smith scored for the Bruins.

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — New Zealander Bruce McLaren is in Indianapolis today, $158,750 richer and looking for new worlds to conquer in auto racing. The 33-year-old McLaren, one of the most respected race car builders and drivers in the world, began a week of testing his new McLaren car at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in preparation for an assault on the Memorial Day 500 next May. McLaren won the final race of the season in the rich Canadian-American Challenge Cup road series at College Station, Tex., Sunday. His first place finish gave him his second Can-Am driving title in three years and a bonus of $50,000 from the series championship point fund. In all, McLaren took home $158,750 from the 11 race series. His driving partner, Denis Hulme, collected $156,350 despite the fact that he had to leave Sunday's race because of mechanical problems. It was the first time this season that Hulme failed to finish a Can-Am race.

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (AP) — South African Gary Player shrugged off protests by demonstrators against his country's racial policies and won the Dominion Sunday Times challenge golf series Sunday. Player, who has been the target of demonstrators during tournaments in the United States, fired a four under par 68 on the final round and beat Bob Charles of New Zealand by seven strokers. Charles had a 70 on the final day. A large group of demonstrators stood outside the Grange course, but about 15 rioted security guards and invaded the course. They stood on one fairway, shouting and waving banners. Player, unperturbed sank a 30 foot putt on the 12th hole, brinning a roar from the golf crowd that drowned out the demonstrators.

Rangers Win Regardless Of Manager's Resignation

By The CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener Rangers lost their manager just before their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game Sunday night, but found the correct formula for drowning their sorrow.

The Rangers went out and defeated Peterborough Petes, one of the top teams in the series, 5-4 almost immediately after Brent Maguire announced that "pressure of business" had forced his resignation.

In other games, Toronto Marlboros and Montreal Junior Canadiens battled to a 44 tie, St. Catharines Black Hawks downed Ottawa Generals 4-2 after defeating Oshawa 4-2 Saturday night, and London Knights beat Hamilton Red Wings 6-3.

Coach Gerry Forler will handle the manager's duties at Kitchener until the three-man hockey committee finds a replacement for Madill.

Gerry O'Flaherty led the Rangers with two goals, while team-mates Bill Barber, Ray Underkirk and Ted Sichart added the others. Jerry Andreatta, Craig Ramsey, Bruce Abbey and Ron Plumb replied for Peterborough.

The victory lifted the Rangers into first place and dropped the Petes to fourth in the 10-team series.

Darrel Dionne took advantage of Oshawa to score three goals Saturday night and another Sunday for St. Catharines. Doug Rombough also scored in Saturday's game for St. Catharines, while George Ferguson and Bob Kelly replied.

Pierre Guite and Dennis Giannini each scored twice for the Black Hawks Sunday and Al McDonough got the other. Mike Fox and Pete Sullivan were the Ottawa marksmen.

Jocelyn Guevremont and Bobby Lalonde scored two goals each for Montreal, but singles by John French, Graham Wise, Steven Vickers and Mike Murphy gave the Marlboros a tie.

Darryl Sittler with two goals and Bob Roselle, Gerry Bradbury, Brian Chinnick and Clyde Simon looked after the London scoring. Buster Harvey, Ron Climo and Gary Coalter replied for Hamilton.

Businesses Pay Taxes Where Rate Is Lowest

MONTREAL (CP) — A Pittsburgh university professor said Saturday world-wide businesses are costing some nations more than they can afford.

Professor David Rutenberg, of Carnegie-Mellon University told the French-Canadian Association for the Advancement of the Sciences, world-wide firms cut down on paying taxes by showing profits earned in countries where the tax rate is lowest.

But in contrast the world wide firm uses the whole of one country as testers of a pilot-product, he said.

He said that such corporations escape production losses caused by strikes, wars, nationalization by acts of sabotage.

Fire Chief Resigns

WELLINGTON (Staff) — This village's fire chief for the past six years, Jack Ogilvy, resigned early this month.

His resignation was accepted at a special meeting of the fire department and Wellington village council.

Mr. Ogilvy's reasons for resigning — stated in his letter to council — centres on the fact he is now employed in Belleville and must spend much time away from the village. However, he said Sunday he would make no comment for publication concerning the reason for his resignation.

Acting fire chief is Otto V. Bowerman.

Search For Plane Called Off

TRENTON (Staff) — CFB Trenton's Search and Rescue Unit has called off its search for a missing plane, believed down in the Gananoque area.

The Gananoque detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police is continuing the ground search.

The air search for the red and white single engine Champion was called off Friday evening, after some wreckage was found washed up on a beach near Gananoque. The fragments have been sent to the aircraft's manufacturer for identification, but officials do not yet know if the parts are from the missing plane.

It has been learned that the occupants of the plane were Pierre Gladu and Paul Dubois both from Montreal.

The plane left Kingston airport Monday, Nov. 3, on a two-hour flight to Bainsville, near the Quebec border, and relatives of the two men reported the aircraft missing last Wednesday.

County Man's Body Identified

PICTON (Staff)—Provincial police here today confirmed the identity of a man who drowned off a sand - sucker near Niagara, Ont., last winter.

He is Earl Rornbeck, 23, of Prince Edward County.

His body was recovered last month near Toronto and police since then have been attempting to establish identity with laboratory tests.

Harry, Julie Sparkle

NEW YORK (AP) — An Evening with Julie Andrews and Harry Belafonte on NBC Sunday night was a grat special—two talented performers rarely seen on television singing their best songs in effective style against colorful and imaginative backgrounds.

Solo and in tandem, they tackled the old and the new, the Schillar and the novelties, touching a little calypso. The comedy was gentle—perhaps the slightest bit was a map showing Julie's idea of the United States when growing up in England—and New York, Washington, cowboys and Hollywood.

Hornets Successful

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Galt Hornets, one of the few senior teams to compete successfully against Hockey Night in Canada, continued to sting their opposition in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series during the weekend.

The Hornets, who have been competing against the National Hockey League club, played games each Saturday night for a number of years, defeated Owen Sound Crescents 4-2 before 2,119 fans.

Anything over 2,000 is considered a good house and the Hornets also stretched their unbeaten string to eight victories and is after losing their first game of the season.

Meanwhile, Belleville Mohawks defeated Oshawa Aces 3-1, their first victory in Kingston in over two years, Orillia edged Oakville 4-3 and Barrie dumped Woodstock 3-1 in Sunday action.

Bruce Reier led the Hornets with two goals, while teammates Bill Hway and Howie Dietrich added the others. Ken Abbott and Keith Smeltzer, replied for the Crescents.

Moe Garland, George Westfall, Clare Alexander and Gary Mirry were the Orillia marksmen. Brad Bellchie accounted for both Oakville goals.

Jon Weeks, Peter Panagakis and Peter De Onge were the Barrie scorers. Dave Hunsky was the lone Woodstock marksman.

Albert College Grads Hold Reunion Banquet

They came from far and near.

Albert College graduates of 1969 came "home" Saturday evening to a reunion banquet in Ackerman Hall to receive their diplomas and awards. Proud parents were also invited but although distance prevented a few from attending, many were on hand to enjoy the occasion.

Valedictorian Rhonda Ferderber of Val d'or, Quebec, spoke of the sound preparation for life's challenges received at Albert. Headmaster L. L. Stewfell reviewed his plans for a greater Albert and challenged the grads to do their part in the building process.

The annual award presented by the Rotary Club of Belleville to the student from outside Canada who made the greatest contribution to International Goodwill went to Allan Trew of Bermuda. Top award for the best representative lady student was won by Rhonda Ferderber the valedictorian, while Dean Ayoub of Timmins won the Marsh Award for the best male student. Margaret Mowbray of Asbestos, Quebec, now at Queen's University, won the Governor General's Medal.

Choose Wisely-Valedictorian

PICTON (Staff) — Addressing fellow graduates Saturday, Prince Edward Collegiate Institute Valedictorian Paul Heath emphasized, "It's a time when even more emphasis has to be on the quality of teachers; a time when the very purpose of education is being questioned."

"Not only at PECI — the winds of change are blowing in education everywhere. Look at the universities today. Somehow there's a day when it was an honor to live within a stone's throw of a university.

"Today it has a different meaning. Even high school students are willing to strive for change, to demand freedom. We're not gone through a war, we're not fought for freedom, thus we're not sure we have freedom.

"I'm not here to say that the youth of today will do a better job of running this world.

"I am sure no one here will tell me we are living in the best of all possible worlds. The question is, can young people of today make the right choices when it's their turn to run the world?"

"It could well be that the job of education should be to teach them to make their choices wisely, not to hammer facts into them, but to give them a chance to handle this concept called freedom."

He referred to the much publicized school walkouts, saying this type of thing had never happened at PECI. Change, he noted, has occurred in the school and he attributed it to a competent staff willing to listen to students' ideas.

Offsets Drinking
Smoking Stimulates Hormone Production

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A St. Louis University doctor says nicotine retards production of a hormone the body needs for chemical and emotional balance, while smoking stimulates production.

As a result, heavy drinkers are likely to be heavy smokers.

Dr. B. D. Bhagat, associate professor of physiology and pharmacology, said laboratory tests on rats and interviews of alcoholics tend to support his contention.

Bhagat said nicotine in smoke stimulates production of norepinephrine, which governs an individual's emotional characteristics. He said the body begins to depend on nicotine for production of the hormone; the smoker becomes physically addicted to nicotine and has a psychological need for tobacco.

Rats injected with nicotine had increased production of norepinephrine; a group given alcohol had decreased production and a third given both nicotine and alcohol showed a slight increase in the hormone level, Bhagat said.

"It is possible that the changes in the rate of production may explain the common association of heavy drinking and heavy smoking," Bhagat said.

The physician said he used the word "possible" because personality and environmental factors may affect the relationship between drinking and smoking.

But, Bhagat said, interviews of 62 alcoholics disclosed that 58 smoked about three packages of cigarettes a day.

It is not necessarily true, however, that heavy smokers are heavy drinkers, the doctor said. Of 48 heavy smokers interviewed, 31 were heavy drinkers.

Truck Burns

WELLINGTON (Staff) — A truck owned by Quinte Roofing of Belleville caught fire on Highway 37 Saturday.

Wellington fire department answered the alarm but the vehicle and its load of tar paper quickly burned out of control.

Deputy Fire Chief Doug McFaul said the blaze broke out in the back of the truck, but its cause is unknown.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Emphysema Possible at 45; To Stop Smoking Essential

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am only 45. Is it possible for me to have emphysema at such an early age? I thought just old people got it.

I've been very short of breath lately. At first I thought I had heart trouble, but my doctor says no. I smoke only a pack a day. Is that harmful?

He prescribed a cough medicine and told me it take it easy. Is there anything else to do? Will you explain what emphysema is all about? Thank you. — Mr. O.

Comment: Whether or not you need more medicine or other treatment I can't say. But if there is any doubt, it is important enough to ask for consultation with a chest specialist. Meanwhile, there are a few things I can tell you here.

My first suggestion is that you put out your cigarette while you read this column. Unless you resolve to make it your last smoke, your emphysema is not likely to improve. It is even bad for you to be in smoke-filled rooms, or to expose yourself unnecessarily to fumes and pollluted air.

Emphysema has no specific age limits. I have seen it in a number of patients as young as you — and younger. But it usually occurs between 50 and 70 years of age.

Sometimes we don't know the real cause. At other times the patient gives a history of frequent colds, allergic reactions like asthmatic attacks, also bouts of respiratory infections causing chronic bronchitis.

Like yourself, Mr. O., many emphysema patients at first believe their shortness of breath is due to lack of condition or to heart trouble. But the culprit turns out to be damage to many of the millions of air sacs in the lungs.

Their thin walls break down and there is less surface left for exchange of carbon dioxide and oxygen. The branch i a l tubes fill up with mucus which the patient expels with difficulty. If untreated for years there is a likelihood that heart weakness (or pulmonale) may develop to complicate the condition and make the shortness of breath worse.

Therefore, I repeat, you will need more than just taking a cough mixture to help yourself. Here are some suggestions it is likely a consultant will consider.

1. Antibiotics to help clear up underlying infection in the lungs.

Taking influenza vaccine every autumn to guard against serious complications.

3. To loosen and thin out the thick secretions, perhaps he will advise you to drink m o r e liquids and take special medicine with expectorant action.

4. If you also have asthma or some other allergy he will prescribe desensitization treatments. He will teach you how to breathe better, using diaphragm rather than your chest.

5. He may have you take exercises helped by inhaling oxygen from a portable container.

6. Spray devices called "nebulizers" will bring special, bronchial-dilating medicines to the bowel for quick and sure action.

7. If necessary, you will use equipment for intermittent positive pressure breathing."

8. The doctor will teach you how to use postural drainage.

Each patient requires special management, because each has his own individual problems. But remember what you had rather forget — smoking will get you nowhere, however well you are treated otherwise.

Your first important step in what is sometimes a long, frustrating journey, is to throw that last cigarette out of your hand and out of your mind. I have never seen an emphysema patient improve while continuing to smoke.

Council Furthers Plans For the Winter Carnival

TWEED — At the meeting at the Hotel Tweedsmuir, held recently, the directors of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce discussed to make plans for the annual Winter Carnival, to be held February 13, 14 and 15, 1970.

The directors decided to approach the Tweed-Stirgerford High School, the S. S. Crawford Public School and the St. Cuthbert's Separate School with a view to enlisting the support of the students and staff in preparing for the coming carnival. This is a community effort, with the proceeds going to advertise and promote Tweed and district, therefore, the directors felt they should make an effort to obtain the greatest possible public involvement. The schools were the logical place to begin, the directors felt.

Committee members Barry Hunter, Rob Bleecker and Bill McGuire reported that the draw tickets for the snowmobile, generously donated by the Tweed Kinsmen Club and the Chamber of Commerce had been distributed and were selling well.

A publicity committee of Mrs. Kenneth Little, Clyde Bell and Bob Hanna was appointed at this time. The committee will be responsible for the obtaining of carnival buttons, and otherwise advertising the Winter Carnival.

Program plans included a Saturday afternoon matinee, with figure skating and hockey, as well as the Saturday night Review (Tue), which has become one of the feature attractions of the Winter Carnival.

The possibility of holding a parade to welcome Santa Claus, on his annual visit to the children of Tweed and district, was discussed.

In view of the number of parades held in the district, the directors of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce felt that Santa should be welcomed this year in some manner other than with a parade. They will give this matter further thought, and will report at the next meeting.

Secretary Bob Hanna reported that he had received a letter from the Students' Council of the Tweed-Stirgerford High School, requesting support in their efforts to retain the school in its present form.

The secretary was instructed to write the students advising them that the Chamber of Commerce was prepared to give them financial support in their campaign to prevent the planned closing of the school.

The secretary was also asked to write the Hastings County Boards of Education and express the C of C's wish that the Tweed High School be continued as at present, and to write the Ontario Chamber of Commerce to request information on the economic effect the closing of schools in other towns and villages may have had on the communities involved.

Remembrance Day Observances Planned Throughout District

Those who gave their lives in the service of their country in two world wars will be remembered at observances Tuesday in Trenton and Belleville.

Parades and wreath laying ceremonies will be held in the two centres in the morning, and the annual remembrance day banquets will take place at night.

In Belleville, the Salvation Army Band will play for the service at the Cenotaph and Envoy Bram Humphreys will give the address. Bandsman Douglas Mason will sound Last Post.

Belleville veterans organizations will sponsor the annual Remembrance Day dinner at Ben Bleecker Auditorium at Exhibition Park at 7 p.m.

Lieut.-Col. F. A. Tilston, V.C. will be the guest speaker.

A bus will leave the market square at 5.45 p.m. Tuesday to transport veterans without cars to the Exhibition Grounds.

The parade will fall in at the Armories and proceed down Pinnacle and Station Streets to the Cenotaph. It will return by Station and Front Streets to the Armories. Sid Scott will be parade marshal.

In Trenton, veterans will fall in at 10.15 at the Legion to parade to the new Cenotaph at Centennial Park for the 11 a.m. service. Marching with the veterans will be the brass band from CFB Trenton, a flight from the base, Scouts and Air Cadets under the direction of parade marshal Robert Wigmore.

Rev. James Payton will direct the service at the Cenotaph, assisted by Msgr. W. Lynett and Rev. C. Roadhouse.

The salute will be taken by Col. H. A. Carswell, officer commanding CFB Trenton. The saluting base will be opposite the Town Hall.

Rev. Wilfred Dunphy, Batawa, a former RCAF padre, will be the speaker at the annual banquet at the Legion Hall in Trenton at 7.15 p.m.

Trenton Legionaire paraded to King St. United Church Sunday to attend the regular service.

There will be no special services at CFB Trenton to mark Remembrance Day, but personnel from the station will take part in observances in Trenton and Belleville.

Aging Process to Be Reversed And Only Cancer Not Curable

LONDON (AP) — Spare parts surgery for all but the brain and spinal column, complete cures for most known diseases except cancer, and reversal of the aging process—all this and more within the next 20 years was predicted today in a report to the British pharmacy industry.

The report, Medicines in the 1990s—A Technological Forecast, was prepared by 40 experts of the Office of Health Economics, a research organization set up in 1962 by the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry.

The report predicted that during the next 20 years animals will be bred specifically to provide organs for transplanting to humans and humans will be injected immediately after birth, perhaps even before, with extracts from the animals to prepare their bodies against rejection of transplants.

Only brains and spinal columns will remain outside the field of transplant surgery, it said.

The report added that the making of "social drugs" designed to "speed learning processes, to improve co-ordination and dexterity, to counter stress and fatigue and to influence or modify man's perception of his surroundings" will be widespread by as early as 1975.

These drugs probably will replace tobacco and alcohol and will be welcomed by society as safer alternatives, it said.

By 1990, the report said, the aging process will be slowed and even reversed in some cases to prolong the average span of life. There will be medicines to make the aged look younger.

Philip Broadcasts in U.S.

Quebec Makes All Difference To Monarchy's Role in Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prince Philip, speaking Sunday on a prerecorded television program, set Canada's view of the monarchy apart from the rest of the Commonwealth because of her bicultural character.

On the NBC radio and television program Meet the Press, which was recorded Wednesday, the prince said Canada "is in a totally different situation" than some other Commonwealth countries.

"As you know," he replied in reporters' questions, "it has the added difficulty of having the state of Quebec, or the province of Quebec, which is French-speaking and Roman Catholic and really in a sense different in many respects from the rest of Canada."

Prince Philip, who arrived back in Britain by air Saturday after a three-week visit to Canada and the United States, was questioned here about his statement in Canada that if, at any stage, "people feel the monarchy has no further part to play, then for goodness sake let us end the thing on honorable terms, without having a row."

On other subjects, the prince said:

—Because of the high cost of royal living, the Royal Family "may have to move into smaller premises . . . and "I shall probably have to give up polo fairly soon, and things like that."

—The British monarchy remains strong in, Britain despite the fact that so many monarchies in Europe have died, because "I think the British are more liberal in their outlook."

—He thinks the Beatles "make very good music" and what they do with their private lives "is really largely their business." As for their effect on youthful attitudes toward drugs and sex, "I think that insofar as they encourage people to do things which are perhaps not in their best interest, I would deplore it."

The Queen's Christmas broadcast was cancelled for this year only. "To sit in front of a television camera and just deliver a message simply doesn't get across. . . . So we thought we would take this year off and scratch our heads and see if we can't do something better."

Tiny TV Camera May Give Sight To Blind Persons

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A tiny television camera worn like a miner's headlamp to give sight to the blind should be ready for testing on human beings in three to four years, an eye research scientist says.

Physicist Herbert Schummel of Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York told a seminar for science writers Sunday that miniaturization of equipment will permit fabrication of a prototype device next year.

"Tests with animals should come in 1971-72," he said, "followed by tests with humans in 1973-74."

Development of a television camera small enough to fit in the eye socket might come within five to 10 years, Schimmel said.

He said the artificial eyes would work this way:

Electronic signals from the cameras would be transmitted to tiny wires implanted in the brain in an area known as the visual cortex, which normally receives impulses from the eye. The brain would translate these signals into images which should show motion, depth and even color, Schimmel said.

Another speaker at the seminar, sponsored by Research to Prevent Blindness, Inc., a philanthropic organization, demonstrated a wheelchair with a television attachment which enables occupants to "see" through their skins.

FQF Advances Alternative To Bertrand's Language Bill

MONTREAL (CP) — The Front du Quebec Francais, formed last month to protest the government's proposed language bill, Sunday adopted an alternative proposal.

The alternative, called Bill 1 by FQF organizers, calls for French as the only official language in the provinces and the gradual elimination of all English-language instruction in government-supported schools, colleges and universities.

The proposal would make French the mandatory working language in Quebec, including the areas of administration, internal communications, collective negotiations and labor contracts.

It also stipulates that any employee who deals with the public must learn French within 18 months of starting work.

Bill 1 forbids recognition, by the government or any professional group, of a school certificate or university degree unless the bearer can speak and write French.

French would be the language of the courts, but an interpreter would be provided to anyone whose mother tongue is not French.

Delegates to the 18-hour meeting unanimously condemned the city's proposed bylaw forbidding demonstrations and marches in public places if officials feel there will be violence.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market posted one of its best first-hour advances on record in mid-morning trading today in response to the federal government's white paper on tax reforms.

On index, industrials rose 3.46 to 184.36 and western oils .54 to 201.58. Golds slipped .29 to 103.05 and base metals .36 to 113.47.

Gains outnumbered losses by about two to one but trading was light.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 690,000 shares compared with 678,000 at the same time Friday.

Banks, pipelines and utilities led the industrial advance.

In banks, Canadian Imperial jumped 1¼ to 21¼, Toronto Dominion 1¼ to 23¼, Bank of Montreal ¾ to 16¼, Royal ¼ to 23 and Bank of Nova Scotia ¼ to 24.

Among pipelines, Interprovincial was up 1¼ to 23 and Trans-Mountain 1¼ to 17.

Bell led utilities, jumped 3 to 45 after a brief trading halt at the open to match orders.

Inco was up ½ to 43¼. Steelworkers at Inco who walked off their jobs July 10 and the company reached a basis of settlement Sunday.

Hudson Bay Mining was up 2 to 84½, MacMillan Bloedel 1¼ to 35, Electrohome 1¾ to 35¼ and CPR 1¼ to 74¼.

Five Probers Into Drug Use Surprise and Delight Young

MONTREAL (CP) — Reality, for a government inquiry, can be losing sleep, eating irregular meals and consistently confronting body extreme emotion and extreme pomposity.

In the case of the federal commission on the non-medical use of drugs, it also means the surprise of hundreds of young persons that Ottawa bureaucracy would send somebody to "rap"—talk—with them on their own terms.

This showed clearly during the inquiry's three days of hearings which ended Saturday in Montreal.

A doubtful group of 150, mostly students, in a coffeehouse were so won over that at the end of an emotional three-hour session they applauded the five commissioners.

Young people say it is the willingness of the commission to be human, to contact drug-users on a personal level, that causes new hope when the alienation of their government from them is taken for granted.

Gaining the confidence of youths embittered by what they consider unjust laws against marijuana and skeptical of a system which encourages underground drug detectives is not easy. But even hardened young cynics have been startled by the apparent sincerity of the commissioners.

One long-haired 21-year-old who had been jailed for pot possession summed it up when he told the commission: "You're all we have. We're for you."

Another youth said: "You're the best thing any government in North America has done for a long time."

Mrs. Marie-Andree Bertrand, a commissioner, was referring to the extraordinary level of communication at the hearings when she said in Montreal they have veered from a simple inquiry towards a social study of unexpected dimensions.

As well as hearing 500 invited submissions from groups and individuals, the commission constantly tells drug-users they can be met on their own ground. Commissioners visit coffeehouses, jails and pads of "acidheads" and "potheads".

Undoubtedly aiding their success are their personalities.

"For official people, they're absolutely out of sight," said a young girl at McGill University. Her views were apparently common.

So far, Dean Campbell estimates, he has talked to "four or five hundred" drug users.

"I have taken Dean Campbell to visit kids in their homes," said Dr. J. Robertson Unwin, director of adolescent services at Allen Memorial Institute in Montreal. "The problem wasn't to convince them that he isn't too straight to talk to, but rather to get them to allow me to drag him away at 3 a.m."

Prof. Bertrand, criminologist at the University of Montreal, added a woman's flair to the hearings.

"She's got soul that you can see instantly," said one youth.

Chairman Gerald Le Dain, dean of the Osgoode Hall law school in Toronto, uses a quiet wit and lawyer's skill at questioning to keep testimony tidy.

Award-winning psychiatrist Dr. Heinz Lehmann, 58, clinical director at Douglas Hospital in Montreal, adds medical expertise and generates a kind of father image.' His queries prod professional views into black and white from grey.

With casually-combed dark blonde hair, 32-year-old Vancouver social worker J. Peter Stein provides a visual informality heightened by occasional sandals or turtlenecks.

The commissioners have demonstrated an unusual capacity for tolerance, tested when speakers use them to focus anger and frustration, especially against marijuana laws.

Several times they have been the object of shouted obscenities. Casually-used four-letter words, one in particular, are so frequent they accept them as inevitable.

The inquiry hearings resume in Winnipeg Thursday and Friday and in Brandon Saturday. More are scheduled in Ottawa for mid- December. As well as in Montreal, they have been held in Toronto, Vancouver and Victoria.

Clutch-rider Can Cure Woes With Automatic Transmission

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"When I retired three years ago I bought a new six cylinder compact with standard transmission. In just 18,000 miles it has been necessary to replace the clutch three times. On the first occasion, while the clutch was not covered under warranty, the dealer sold me the parts at cost and discounted the labor. For second and third clutch I had to pay the full rate. While the dealer was sympathetic he claims that this premature wear is caused by my riding the clutch.

"In heavy traffic I do find myself subconsciously resting my foot on the clutch pedal and I can't seem to overcome this nervous habit. I am thinking of trading and was wondering if an automatic transmission would be the answer. Is an automatic more expensive to maintain than a clutch?" — Mr. T. B. Hamilton, Ont.

The clutch compares with a tire — both wear away as a result of friction. If we corner savagely at high speed and burn rubber during accelleration, the tire treads are soon scuffed off. If we ride the clutch and hold it in the partially dis-engaged position for longer periods than necessary, it quickly overheats and fails.

However, whether abused or not, like tires, a clutch eventually wears to the point where replacement is necessary. Proper clutch adjustment is essential, and the more a clutch is used or abused, the more often it must be adjusted. While it only costs a dollar or so, seldom do motorists a... have the clutch inspected for proper adjustment. More than half the clutches that are replaced fail as a result of this oversight.

Every clutch requires "free pedal" — which means the pedal should move down freely and with little effort for about 1". It should then require much more pressure to push it the rest of the way down when disengaging the clutch. Without free pedal, the clutch is partly disengaged at all times and the excessive heat build-up due to slippage burns out the clutch facings, the clutch release bearing and other parts.

Most domestic cars sold today are equipped with the manual transmission, and whether standard or optional equipment, for the average driver I strongly recommend its use. Apart from the convenience of clutchless, automatic gear shifting, when trading or selling, you will find that with the exception of the sports-minded set there is little demand for the standard transmission.

If not abused, and when maintained according to manufacturers' specifications, the automatic transmission will usually provide many years of trouble - free service.

Imports Improve Language

By SYDNEY . HARRIS

ust after I wrote that piece on the new American Heritage Dictionary a week or so ago, I saw a front - page story in the New York Times about the latest edition of the Petit Larousse," the most widely used dictionary in France.

The new Larousse includes for the first time many Anglicisms and Americanisms which infuriate French purists — a number of years ago, with a "corruption" of the French language through invasion of these barbarous words and phrases.

Among the Americanisms are happenings, poster, riot and campus. The news item didn't mention hippie, but this is another of our neologisms that is spreading fast all over the world.

To my mind it is absurdly rigid of French professors and linguists to object to such a normal pollination of words which in the long run strengthen a language, not weaken it. The real criterion is not where a word comes from, but whether it fills a linguistic need better than some native word.

After all, words are inventions, and no nation relishes a new and handy device simply because it was invented in some other country.

English is dotted with Gallicisms for which there is no convenient domestic equivalent — phrases like savoir faire, and bon mot and rendezvous and garage and chauffeur and boutique and a propos and bon voyage and haute cuisine and avant garde and hundreds of others that have been unconsciously absorbed into the bloodstream of the English language, improving and fortifying its expressiveness.

What shouldn't the French like wise adopt our weekend, which is so much briefer and more recurrent than fin de semaine, or our kitchenette, for their clumsy un petite cuisine, or snack-bar or parking or lookout, for none of which they have any single words? (Incidentally, it's hard to believe that weekend is only about 100 years old in English; before then, it was commonsensically called Friday-to-Monday.)

I am all for maintaining standards in a language, and not permitting sloppiness and illiteracy to pass under the name of popular usage — but since about two-thirds of English is made up of loan-words from other languages, and this hybridization is one of the main causes of the strength, variety and suppleness of English, we should welcome, not resent, any cross-breeding that fills a genuine lack.

Besides, if the French gave up cocktails, half the bar signs in Paris would have to come down. And what a French word to put up in its place.

Quick Change in Laws Needed To Avoid Alienation of Youth

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal psychiatrist said Saturday it is critical that the federal government mould future laws promptly on findings of its inquiry into the non-medical use of drugs.

If it doesn't, Dr. J. Robertson Unwin told the inquiry commission, alienation of the nation's youth from society may be complete.

"I desperately hope that your findings and recommendations will not suffer the same fate as those of the recent committees and task forces on drugs in the United States and England," he said.

Dr. Unwin, director of adolescent service at the Allan Memorial Institute and author of a Canadian Medical Association paper on effects of drug use given to the inquiry earlier, stressed he was speaking as an individual.

He suggested the commission attach special urgency to a review of the marijuana laws. This could be submitted as an appraisal separate from reports on drug use in general, thus affording possible new laws more rapidly.

"Marijuana has become a focus point for many of the anxieties, uncertainties, hopes and opposing factions so evident in contemporary society. It has become symbolic of the "generation gap," said Dr. Unwin.

He described the effect of jail sentences on those convicted under the Criminal Code for only smoking what was a non-narcotic drug.

"These include incarceration in our penitentiaries, with almost certain homosexual rape, exposure to hardened criminals and to users of true narcotics."

Earlier, the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal in a brief called for school boards across Canada to adopt formal programs which would include drug education starting at the junior high school level.

Dr. Maimon Cohen, a geneticist from Buffalo, N.Y., who received wide-spread publicity when he linked usage of LSD to possible mutations, explained his findings to the inquiry.

"Any agent that shows chromosome breakage in any kind of substance is suspect," he said. "Studies on animals indicate this drug can cause malformations in the offspring of its recipients. We have to be very, very careful with chemicals like this."

Overseas Workers To Avoid Politics

STE. ADELE, Que. (CP) — Delegates to the annual meeting of Canadian University Service Overseas Sunday rejected political action as a means of generating greater involvement in underdeveloped countries.

A proposed constitutional amendment called on CUSO to operate a Canadian program which would promote public awareness of the social, economic and political issues of development—and take political action over such issues.

Introduced by a group of "cooperants"—a new CUSO term for volunteers—returned from overseas—the resolution was rejected by a vote of 71 to 30.

The 138 voting delegates then approved an amendment "to pursue a program of increasing public awareness of international development and of Canada's foreign relations" which would "encourage Canadians to act on that awareness."

CUSO, a semi private development organization with 1,300 co-operants in 45 overseas countries, raised about $3,300,000 in Canada last year to finance its operations. More than $3,000,000 of this was in federal grants.

Ken Stickland of Edmonton, a CUSO executive board member, told the meeting it didn't have to go far to find organizations suffering crises because of political involvement—an apparent reference to the troubled Company of Young Canadians.

'Former Speed Freak' Claims Mafia Handles Ontario Drugs

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A University of Western Ontario student who described himself as a "former speed freak" said Sunday the Mafia is behind the distribution of illegal drugs in London, the "main distribution centre for drugs in Ontario."

Clive Hitchon, 20, told a church panel discussion on drug taking that, after he reformed, he told the Royal Canadian Mounted Police that he was willing to tell them about the Mafia in London.

The RCMP "wouldn't listen to me," he said. "I was willing to tell them things that could have got me shot. . . .

Now, Hitchon said, "I'm not going to say anything."

In an interview one RCMP officer he mentioned said he had "never heard of Hitchon."

Hitchon said he started smoking marijuana in 1963 and then went to amphetamine drugs or "speed." After watching a friend die from "speed" and spending a brief period in jail he stopped taking drugs.

Crosbie Still Fighting Joey

CORNERBROOK, Nfld. (CP) — The story of Johnnie and Clyde may not yet be over in Newfoundland.

In a speech Saturday, defeated Liberal leadership candidate John C. Crosbie said he and Clyde Wells, independent Liberal member of the legislature for Humber East and Mr. Crosbie's campaign manager in the leadership race, are not accepting defeat.

He said they would go on fighting for a change in Premier Joseph Smallwood's Liberal leadership.

Mr. Crosbie said last week's leadership convention was not an ordinary one where the loser joins with the victor for a united party. He and his supporters will go on fighting.

Quebec Blackout Is Record

MONTREAL (CP) — A short circuit in a lightning protector system near Quebec City caused the most widespread Quebec blackout in living memory Saturday, a Hydro-Quebec spokesman said Sunday.

In a chain reaction, the fault overtaxed one part of Quebec's power network after another and halted electrical service for up to 90 per cent of the province's 6,000,000 population around noontime.

The power failures, lasting between half an hour and two hours, spread from the Laurentian area north of Montreal down the St. Lawrence River to Gaspe fishing villages at the eastern tip of Quebec.

Power went off in Montreal at 11:44 a.m. and was restored at 1:28 p.m. Saturday.

Huge traffic tieups were caused as signals failed but some citizens helped direct traffic.

CBC Men in Montreal Seek More Insurance for Riots

MONTREAL (CP) — Camera and soundmen for the CBC have asked the corporation to purchase additional insurance to protect reporters covering riots in Montreal, it was learned Sunday.

The CBC's film crews did not provide film coverage of Friday night's demonstration in Montreal's financial district, which incurred $50,000 damages.

A spokesman for the Crown corporation said that under normal insurance company standards, Quebec would be considered a disturbed area whenever the riot act is read. Consequently, personal insurance—medical and life—would be considered void, leaving the reporters uninsured.

Friday afternoon, just hours before the demonstration, the employees and the corporation could not reach agreement on the matter.

Denis Vincent, president of the Syndical General de Cinema et de la Television (General Union of Cinema and The Television workers CNTU), said in an interview Sunday the corporation has $25,000 insurance to cover reporters reporting from the three recognized war zones in the world: Vietnam, Biafra, and Gaza Desert.

Mr. Vincent said no such similar coverage exists for reporters, camera and sound men, covering the domestic scene.

By contrast, CFCF television, a CTV outlet, has a $50,000 policy covering death or loss of an arm or a leg, a spokesman said.

CFCF embarked on the policy as a result of a demonstration at Sir George Williams University last February when the computer centre was occupied.

Some of the reporting staff could not leave the building and were left to face the elements, he said.

Ontario Ready for Breathalyzer Tests

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario police are well prepared to enforce a new law providing for compulsory breathalyzer tests for drivers suspected of drinking.

The law comes into effect in mid-December, and 400 policemen have been specially trained to operate the 83 breathalyzer machines available to Ontario police departments.

The driver won't be helped by holding his breath either, because the Criminal Code amendment provides for a $1,000 fine or six months in jail for drivers refusing the test.

"We are ready for the new law," says Ronald Hallett, a chemist with the toxicology branch of the centre of forensic sciences in Toronto and supervisor of the breathalyzer training courses for policemen.

"Since 1967 we have trained 850 policemen in the use of the machine, but not all are active today," he said in an interview Saturday.

"Municipalities with small police departments and limited budgets may not be as advanced in this field as the large urban areas, but on the whole, we are ready to administer the new law, probably more so than the other provinces."

Fifty-five of the 73 machines in Ontario belong to the provincial police. The remainder are spread over the province's municipal forces. Toronto police have five.

Breathalyzer machines are no novelty in Ontario. Starting with three machines in 1956, when breath tests were first accepted in courts as evidence, police had 32 in use in 1964 and 83 at the end of last year.

However, tests have been voluntary.

Mr. Hallett said police last year questioned 16,100 Ontario drivers suspected of drinking. Of these, 12,429 volunteered to submit to tests and charges against 811 were dropped.

He said he does not believe the breathalyzer will be a cure-all for the drink-and-drive problem but he thinks it will result in fewer drinking drivers.

Motel Approved For Waterfront

OMB Gives Quick Ruling

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Following an unexpectedly brief sitting lasting just over three hours, the Ontario Municipal Board yesterday approved the city's application for rezoning of waterfront property to allow construction of the proposed Four Seasons Motel and Bell Telephone training school.

And; also unexpectedly, the decision was given immediately by OMB members A. R. Arvel, QC and J. V. Lodgzie, who didn't follow the normal procedure of deferring ruling on the case.

Written reasons on the Board decision will be given later, said Mr., Arvel, acting as hearing chairman.

City solicitor E. Gous Porter presented the city's case for the rezoning application, while Don Templeman, acted as counsel for Ian Morch, owner of the subject property on Belleville's waterfront.

Mr. L. H. Tepper, of Kingston, acted as counsel for Sam Goodman, Belleville motel operator, who was the sole objector to the re-zoning application.

Nine witnesses were heard in the three-hour hearing, seven of them called by counsel supporting application.

Four Seasons' Calls Tenders

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Construction of the two-and-a-half million dollar Four Seasons motel on Belleville's waterfront will commence within a month and will be completed by September of next year.

This was stated by Fred Eisen, company official in charge of development, following yesterday's Ontario Municipal Board approval for a zoning change to allow construction of the motel complex.

"Tenders have already been called for the construction," Mr. Eisen told the Intelligencer.

Testifying earlier at the OMB hearing, Mr. Eisen said that the motel complex would cover about two and a quarter acres of the eight acre site.

He said the complex would include 125 motel rooms, dining room, lounge, and both inside and outside recreational facilities.

Excluding living accommodation, there would be 25,000 square feet of space reserved for a Bell Telephone training school. This would consist of eight classrooms, computer room, library and study area and projection rooms.

In the opinion of Mr. Eisen, the Four Seasons motel operation would not interfere with the operation of any existing motel in the city.

Ninety per cent of the motel's business would be from the "captive" Bell clientele.

L. J. Lugsdin, regional counsel for Bell Telephone, told the hearing that Bell now operated a training school in Belleville for about 45 technicians and 20 marketing personnel.

The school for marketing personnel was held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn and that for technicians at a Bell-owned building, with students living at the Hotel Quinte.

However, Bell was anxious to put all training facilities at one location and it was for this reason the company had entered into an agreement with Four Seasons Hotels Ltd.

He described the training classes, lasting up to 21 weeks, as a "harrowing" experience for the students and the company was desirous of having the best facilities available.

Mr. Lugsdin said one of the reasons that Belleville had been chosen by Bell for its training school was that for its purposes it was considered the geographical centre of Canada.

Under cross examination by L. H. Tepper, counsel for Sam Goodman, Belleville motel operator who lodged the only objection to the rezoning, Mr. Lugsdin said if the zoning was refused, Bell would have to carry on its training school — but not necessarily in Belleville.

However, he said there would be no need for emergency action as Bell already has training facilities in the city.

Three Blasts Set Off

NEW YORK (AP) — Bombs exploded in three Manhattan skyscrapers early today, slightly injuring one man and causing limited damage.

About six hours later a news agency received an unsigned special delivery letter saying: "During this week of anti-war protest, we set off explosions in offices of Chase Manhattan, Standard Oil, and General Motors."

The letter, blaming "the giant corporations of America" for the world's ills, was in the same literate, press-release style as similar letters sent to news agencies after a bomb exploded outside U.S. Army and draft offices in the Manhattan federal building last Sept. 19.

Police said they were investigating the letter.

The new blasts occurred about 1:03 a.m., minutes after telephoned warnings. The letter claiming responsibility for them bore two separate postmarks, one at 11:10 p.m. and another at 12:02 a.m. It was sent to United Press International.

Wilson Plans Committee To Study Queen's Pay

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson today confirmed that the Royal Family's finances are running in the red and said Parliament would appoint a committee to consider an increased stipend for the Queen.

The announcement followed Prince Philip's outspoken comment on the royal finances in a United States television interview, although Wilson told Parliament the decision to consider an increase had already been taken before Philip spoke.

Philip's remarks on the drain in the Queen's wallet set off a clamor between royalists and anti-monarchists in Britain.

But there was no clear sign that the Queen can expect an early pay raise — to stave off a "cash crisis" discussed by Prince Philip in a taped U.S. television interview broadcast Sunday. Philip said the royal household will go into the red next year.

Wilson said that from 1951 to 1961 the Queen's allowances as a whole showed a surplus, despite rising wage and other costs.

"From 1962 inwards deficits were incurred, small at first, but increasing steadily each year."

Wilson said that last year it became clear the annual royal grant was "falling far short of the total cost for which it had been provided."

It was estimated that reserve funds would be exhausted and the Queen would move into a deficit on her state allowance by the end of 1970, he said.

In a separate move, Buckingham Palace entered a parallel controversy — on the chances of the Queen, 43, handing over the monarchy to her son and heir, Prince Charles, 20, while he is still a young man.

The palace said the question of the Queen's abdication never has arisen.

A spokesman was commenting on a second U.S. television interview by Prince Philip broadcast Monday in which the possibility of the Queen's abdication was mentioned. Philip with a chuckle said he thought it was a rumor. "I mean, it has its attractions, obviously," he said. "But, no, I don't think it's been thought about seriously."

Servicemen Who Wear Uniforms In Anti-war March Face Arrest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army says servicemen who wear their uniforms in this week's "march against death" demonstration in the capital will be arrested, turned over to their commanders and perhaps court martialed.

This warning came as the Pentagon placed several thousand troops on the alert outside the Washington area for possible duty should violence erupt at the war protest demonstration.

"Army personnel who participate in these activities while in uniform will be in violation of department of defence and department of the army directives and regulations," the army said.

"Violators will be subject to apprehension and referred to their commanding officers for appropriate action."

Maximum punishment for "violating or failing to obey any general order or regulation" is two years at hard labor plus a dishonorable discharge.

The armed forces police detachment of the military district of Washington has been assigned to watch for violations during the scheduled activities from Thursday through Saturday.

Need Great For Old Virtues

By HARRY MULHALL

Society needs traditional human virtues as never before in history, Bellevillians were told at yesterday's memorial services this morning.

The Remembrance Day reminder came from Salvation Army Envoy Bram Humphries, theme speaker for this year's city tribute to Canada's war dead.

Despite social sacrifices of the past symbolized by Remembrance Day of humanity today is being called on to assume "still greater responsibilities," said Envoy Humphries.

"Never in the history of the world has courage, truth and righteousness been more in demand than it is today," he cautioned.

Veterans and army, airforce and navy cadets paraded from the city armory through downtown Belleville for the service — traditionally observed on the anniversary of the World War I Armistice Day, 1918.

Tonight members of the city's two veterans' organizations — the Canadian Legion and the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans Association — mark the occasion with a combined banquet at Bleecker Auditorium.

Federal Tax Changes May Let Ontario Avoid Levy on Incomes

TORONTO (CP) — Treasurer Charles MacNaughton said Monday the federal government's proposals for tax reform may make it unnecessary for Ontario to impose a provincial income tax.

In a statement to the legislature on the federal government's white paper on taxation, he gave qualified approval to the proposals and said he hoped federal-provincial discussion of them would be held as quickly as possible.

He said it now was hoped Ontario "can become an effective part in one properly reformed tax system across Canada."

Mr. MacNaughton stressed that the province has some reservations about the federal proposals and that the white paper would be examined closely before a definitive position is taken.

He expressed reservations about the method of providing relief through increased basic deductions for single and married taxpayers, saying these would be costly in terms of revenue and of no value to persons whose incomes fall below the exemption level.

He also expressed disappointment that the white paper proposes to increase federal revenues from income tax and that the gains would accrue almost entirely to the federal government.

Pupils Moving to Avondale

Retarded Children's School Unfit, Hastings Trustees Charge

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
(Staff Reporter)

The Belleville and District School for Retarded Children on John St. was declared unfit for future use last night and steps were taken to provide suitable accommodating for the pupils by Sept. 1, 1970.

By adopting a building committee report presented by trustee John O'Flynn of Belleville, the Hastings County Board of Education set in motion a chain of events designed to put the retarded children into Avondale School in west Belleville.

The board's plan is to move the retarded pupils to the five-room Avondale School and build an addition to Sir John A. Macdonald School to accommodate the 100 pupils now in Avondale.

The target date for the change over — September, 1970 — was questioned by Donald Williams of Stirling.

"Can you visualize the necessary construction being completed by that time?" he asked superintendent L. A. Kells.

Mr. Kells said the early target date could be met if a decision on the change were made immediately and if government grants and approvals were not delayed.

"Sir John A. Macdonald School was designed to take an addition and the necessary services are already on the site," commented MacDonald Smith of Belleville. "This should cut down on the building time."

Mr. Kells said the present school for the retarded could not be expanded and enrolment is now close to maximum capacity of 40 pupils, with increased attendance expected in the near future. The five classrooms at Avondale School could be broken into nine separate units to fit the needs of the retarded pupils and enrolment could be doubled.

The John St. school, once private house, then a Catholic high school, was taken over nine years ago by a group of parents who had started a school for retarded children. They ran the school, with financial assistance from the Lions Club, until the provincial government took over operating costs of schools for the retarded in 1965. In January of this year the school came under the jurisdiction of the newly created county board.

OMB Gives Quick Decision

Mr. Tepper called only one witness, Allen Brass, town planner with Procter, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon, who within the past year did an urban renewal study for the city's downtown area. Mr. Goodman had objected to the Four Seasons motel on the grounds that it might interfere with future downtown development.

Mr. Porter termed the Goodman objection "frivolous and vexatious" and intended to do nothing else but embarrass the city and Four Seasons Hotels Ltd.

Mr. Porter noted that Mr. Goodman was the operator of the largest motel in Belleville which at present enjoyed a certain amount of patronage from Bell Telephone through its local training school.

Witnesses called by Mr. Porter included city clerk Adam Stalker, city planning director Bert Emery, city engineer Wilbur Purcell, utilities manager E. L. Burnham, Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. official Fred Elsen, and L. G. Tuggin, regional counsel for Bell Telephone.

Also heard were parks superintendent Lloyd Syer and Mrs. C. Patterson, Dundas Street West property owner.

Mr. Kenny said no objection had been received by various city boards or commissions against the Four Seasons motel, and neither had objection been raised at a public hearing called by the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board.

He said the planning board had recommended to council that the subject property be rezoned C-1-A to allow construction of the motel.

As a planner he felt that the proposed Four Seasons motel would be good use of the subject land.

He didn't feel there was any other site in the city which would be equally suitable for the type of facility proposed.

Questioned by Mr. Templeman regarding present zoning in the area, Mr. Kenny said if the asked for zoning was turned down any type of industry could be constructed on the land.

Strong emphasis was placed on the intended use of the property which, it was claimed, would fit in well with recreational and park land in the Zwick's Island area.

City engineer Purcell and utilities manager E. L. Burnham said they envisioned no problems regarding provision of sewer, water or electrical service to the site.

Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. development officer Frederick Elsen said his firm had considered Belleville's downtown area for its proposed motel but had decided on the waterfront location, as it wanted to take advantage of the recreational facilities available and also of the Bay of Quinte.

Under cross examination by Mr. Petter, the witness said the Four Seasons Motel would not compete with other facilities and would, if anything, stimulate downtown business.

"In my opinion it is the most desirable location," he said.

Mr. Lagadin explained the operation of the present Bell training school, which was carried on at two different locations. He said Bell wanted to put all training facilities at the one location and fully approved of the waterfront site.

Parks Board superintendent Lloyd Syer said Procter and Redfern, in planning Zwick's Island park, had recommended a marina development for the proposed Four Seasons site.

He deemed the Four Seasons proposal as desirable and said it would tie in well with the park area and existing marina facilities.

As the only opposition witness called for the objector, Allen Brass, town planner for Procter, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon, Mr. Allen Brass, said his firm had conducted an urban renewal study for downtown Belleville which had been terminated by the city early in October.

He felt the Four Seasons motel proposal would have been appropriate for the downtown use but said he had not been approached with the view of having it placed in the downtown area.

Asked under cross-examination by Mr. Porter if there was anywhere in the downtown area where the Four Seasons motel with its boating and recreational facilities, could have been placed, Mr. Brass said it might have been possible to find such an area.

"I don't know," he admitted.

Mr. Templeman asked if the proposed site on the waterfront was appropriate for the motel including all its ancillary uses, Mr. Brass replied, "yes."

In his summation, Mr. Porter pointed out that the proposed rezoning is based on planning; there is no valid objection and it should be approved."

In his reply summation, Mr. Templeman pointed to the danger of some kind of a factory being erected on the site should the requested rezoning be refused.

He said the future of Belleville was at stake.

Mistakes (in planning) have been made in the past; the railway was allowed to spoil much of our waterfront. Belleville should not be forced to go backward.

Mr. Templeman said a great deal of planning and forethought in recent years had gone into plans for the city's waterfront.

Mr. Tepper in his summation said the question was whether private interests should be allowed precedence over the public good.

He said, in fact, what was whether an apparent immediate advantage might turn into a long term disadvantage.

He asked whether the Four Seasons proposal was in accordance with a comprehensive plan such as would come out of the urban renewal study.

Referring to the termination of the urban renewal report, Mr. Tepper said city council's decision had been irresponsible and arrogant.

"The city needs downtown renewal," he said.

Labor Chief Cunningham Council's Official Candidate

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Gerald Cunningham has been endorsed by the Belleville and District Labor Council as the official labor candidate in next month's city council elections.

The move coincided with Mr. Cunningham's election last night as the council's new president.

"I am not centring my interest on labor entirely," Mr. Cunningham warned the council during his appeal for endorsement at its monthly meeting in Club Canara.

"I think when a person runs for alderman he must devote himself to the best interests of the entire city."

But, he emphasized, there was a need for labor to be represented in Belleville's city government.

"There has never been anybody on council who is representative of the so-called working man and we are in the majority — as we are in every other city.

Mr. Cunningham, a railroad engineer who has twice contested civic elections, succeeded Ray Bradshaw as labor council president. Mr. Bradshaw also i s an aldermanic candidate, but did not seek the labor endorsement.

This is Mr. Cunningham's second posting as labor council president. He held the position in 1964 - 65 and has been an active executive member of the organization, representing the labor on Belleville General Hospital board of governors and the United Appeal.

Council Vetoes Press Blackout

The Belleville and District Labor Council last night turned down two motions that would have excluded reporters from its session.

The first move came at the start of the regular Club Canara meeting from Frank McKay, delegate of United Automobile Workers Local 1538.

Mr. McKay recommended that reporters be excluded from all meetings of the council and that a public relations committee handle all news releases.

The delegate said he was "not against the press."

However, he said, he objected to "procedures at these meetings where nothing has been used for individual advantages."

An amendment also moved by other delegates, suggested reporters be excluded from last night's meeting and their future presence made subject to a recommendation from the council's executive.

Neither proposal drew majority support from the council and reporters sat through the remainder of the three hour meeting.

Brett Joins Gananoque Newspaper

PICTON (Staff) — Jack Brett, former news editor of the Picton Gazette, has joined the staff of the Gananoque Reporter.

Mr. Brett resigned his job with the Gazette last month after refusing to print a retraction of a news story concerning the firing of a Picton cab driver.

William Bross, a driver for Rea's Taxi, operated by Ronald Canahan (doing business as), fired because he asked Mrs. Harvey McFarland Sr. to move her car from an area reserved for taxis in front of the Royal Hotel. The ex-cabbie said the interference by the McFarland family led to his dismissal.

The McFarland family has denied all knowledge of the incident stating that both Mrs. McFarland Sr. and her son Harvey Jr. were out of town at the time the incident supposedly occurred.

Four Historic Books Presented to Library

TWEED — The Tweed Public Library was the recipient of four copies of four historic volumes, "The Canadian Portrait Gallery" by John Charles Dent, assisted by a staff of contributors, and published in 1880.

The books contain the biography of early Canadian statesmen beginning with the period when Canada was ceded to Britain, and continuing on past the period of Confederation and the early years of the 20th century. They were a gift from W. Clyde Bell, editor of the Tweed News. They were originally the property of Mr. Bell's great uncle, the late George Thornton of Perth, Ontario. The numerous pictures are tinted lithography by Ralph Smith and Company, Toronto, many of which are from pictures by Notman and Fraser, early Canadian photographers.

In making the donation to the library, Mr. Bell explained that he had use for the books two or three times each year. He felt, however, that by placing them in the reference library at Tweed, they would also be available to the public and to history students in particular, while he would continue to have access to needed information.

IN MEMORIAM

KEENE — In loving memory of a dear uncle and brother-in-law Cecil G. Keene who passed away 4 years ago, November 11, 1965.
Gently the hand of memory leads
Our feet to tread a sacred way,
Where thoughts of you like flowers are laid
Into bright and perfect day.
But we all must cease to languish,
O'er the grave of him we love,
Purer joys we hope await us,
In the happy land above.
—Always remembered by sisters-in-law Mabel and Irene.

But keep the one in my heart that lies.
The stars seem dim as I whisper your name,
My own darling husband, I miss you so.

Drinking Drivers Beware

Breathalyzer Squad Groomed for Action

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Drivers who are tempted to drink and try wheeling the old jalopy had better beware. Ontario policemen — especially in Belleville — are now equipped with breathalysers . . . and they know how to use them.

Of 400 police officers trained in the use of the 83 breathalyzer machines, Belleville has seven trained officers and two machines.

The Belleville detachment of the OPP has four trained officers and one breathalyzer while city police have a breathalyzer and three officers trained to use it.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said that one more city officer would be trained to operate the new apparatus.

As a result the changeover to compulsory breath tests for motorists suspected of intoxicated driving should not present any problems to Ontario police forces. The mandatory breathalyzer tests go into effect in mid - December.

The Criminal Code amendment provides a $1,000 fine and six months imprisonment for any driver refusing to take the breathalyzer test.

While many provinces have legislation making breath tests mandatory, the Criminal Code amendment was delayed by Ottawa to enable all provinces to train operators and acquire breathalyzer equipment.

Ronald Hallett, a chemist with the toxicology branch of the Centre of Forensic Sciences and supervisor of breathalyzer training courses for police officers, said police forces across the province are ready to administer the new law.

Belleville policemen received their training from the centre which is located at the OPP training college on Shorbourne Street in Toronto.

"We are ready for the new law," Mr. Hallett said. "Since 1957 we have trained 650 policemen, but not all are active today."

D. E. Wellesley, superintendent of the Belleville OPP detachment, said he hopes the new law will help to curb impaired drivers.

"This will have to wait and see," he said.

"I think compulsory testing in the United Kingdom has reduced the fatality rate," Chief Crosbie said. "It will be a deterrent."

Fifty-five of the 83 machines are used by the Ontario Provincial Police, with the remainder scattered about the province with municipal forces. Toronto police have five breathalyzers.

Mr. Hallett said the courses to train police officers in the use of the breathalyzer are held three times a year and are two-week courses.

The use of the breathalyzer has come a long way since 1956 when breath test evidence was first introduced in Ontario courts, Mr. Hallett said.

In that year there were no more than three or four machines in the province. Eight years later there were 52 in use and by last year there were 83.

Last year, law enforcement officers questioned 18,100 Ontario residents suspected of impaired driving or driving while intoxicated.

Of that number 12,429 volunteered to have their blood alcohol level tested and as a result charges against 811 were dropped. In 1964 with 52 machines operating, 1,644 drivers were questioned, of which 7,149 were tested and charges against 832 were withdrawn.

Mr. Hallett does not foresee a drastic change as a result of the laugher law. He feels if it is successful it might lower the amount of alcohol consumed by motorists and perhaps reduce the number of accidents.

"We know that alcohol is involved in 45 to 90 per cent of fatal accidents, but the extent of that involvement is not known."

'Those Were the Days . . .'

Samuel Howes, Boer War, World War I veteran who is 93 tomorrow, still uses sprightly gait that once was mark of marching soldier. Here, arms swinging, feet stepping smartly he walks five-year-old grandson, David, home from school.

Veteran of Two Wars Fought in Boer Battle And on Western Front

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The sounds of battles long ago have tragic up-to-date echoes outside the calm of history books.

Particularly if you're 93 and have one-the-spot memories of more wars than most.

Like Samuel Howes, who'll be 93 tomorrow and is probably the oldest living war veteran in Belleville.

This chilly Remembrance Day Sam's memories reach back to the dusty heat of the South African veldt and the battle columns of the Boer War.

It's a Remembrance Day with a war still being waged in Vietnam. And across the years Sam can see some similarities between the current conflict and the first of two wars he fought.

Like Vietnam, the Boer War started with plenty of assurance on the home front. It involved the world's richest, most powerful nation with what seemed a troublesome motley. A swift end was expected as the highly organized British Army went into action. But the Boers outgunned and outnumbered, fighting on their home ground outwitted their opponents.

The war against a nimble and elusive foe dragged on, taking a mounting toll of British lives.

"When they first went out there one general told they'd need three times as many men— and they laughed at him," recalls Sam. "Before it was over they needed more than that."

Sam was one of the many unexpected many needed to fight the war.

Born in England and a tailor by trade, he was in Scotland — and his early twenties — when he enlisted in 1900 in the first volunteer battalion of the Gordon Highlanders.

It took 21 days by trooper to arrive at Cape Town, before beginning the long march overland.

It was among the last great marching wars and Sam still has vivid memories of a Victorian colonial army on campaign — its columns stretching away across sunwashed landscapes.

He also made mass contact with Canadians. With his brigade was the 21st Canadian contingent ever sent to an overseas war.

Sam remembers them as "good soldiers."

But his dominant memory is typical of the many an old Imperial soldier — the heat, and the scarcity of water.

His service experience also was typical of the war.

Originally, the volunteers had been sent out for a year of service. They were retracing their battle route for Cape Town when word came they were still needed. So they marched and fought again for another year.

In 1906 Sam immigrated to Canada, coming to Belleville in 1910 where he set up a Front Street tailor shop. But another war was in the brew of events.

In 1914 he was back in England, on holiday when the First World War broke out.

This time he enlisted in a machine-gun corps and went to the Western Front.

It was a different war with little heat and plenty of water — most of it in the trenches where the armies of both sides were confined for years.

Today Sam shows little signs of his nine decades let alone his campaigns.

However, his soldiering is an era when the British revolte followed the rising sun around the world, may have left one permanent mark on him.

Now awaiting another birthday in his ninth decade, Sam still believes in foot-slogging, if only as exercise.

He makes a point of walking whenever possible.

"It doesn't do to get soft," he warns.

Remembrance Day

It is one of the ironies of human nature that men who go to war suddenly develop a great love for life. They go knowing full well that their business is to kill and that they stand a good chance of being killed themselves. In such moments of truth, the normal problems and frustrations of this world fade into insignificance.

Once again it is Remembrance Day and we do well, in the midst of the "problems" of peace — amid the disenchantment of youth, the drug cult, poverty, social protest and all those other things a war, ironically, often cures so quickly — to think of the men who gave their lives in two world wars.

If these men were here today they would be as puzzled and helpless as the rest of us at disturbing social trends that seem almost beyond human control. But they would note also there are still men who are men, who set an example of strength and endeavor when it is fashionable to side with the mob and the forces of anarchy.

They would note also, we might mention in passing, that there are still men with a sense of adventure — like New Zealander Sir Edmund Hillary who is planning to scale another Himalayan peak, and that a professional skier from Japan, Yuichiro Miura, has made the first successful run down a slope of Mount Everest.

Growing Up

This is the time many young people find themselves in the library, either for casual reading or for research of subjects they are studying at school. That this last reason likely is predominant should make the learning process no less interesting.

The library provides an atmosphere for literary and factual study more acceptable even than the home. Here there is truly something for the mind — and it is mind and heart and imagination and ability to think that is going to take them on the right course if they only let them.

Why are young people so bored on the one hand and restless on the other? It is because they fail to realize their concept of life, in the teen years for example, is too narrow and too stylized to afford them a picture of life as a whole.

That kind of perspective comes later, when they have finished their education, have discovered their vocation and are embarked on the continuing process of discovering themselves.

Meanwhile the world of books leads them into many spheres of thought and culture. It is better too that they pursue their studies with the mental equipment with which they are endowed, and not by means of artificial stimuli.

They can rail all they like against the establishment and against the hypocrisy of their elders, but their forbears it will be the process of work and economics — a job, house, car and the like — that will enable them to progress, to lead their own lives.

At the age of 16 plus they may be bored and restless by turn — but a real interest in their studies, in recreation and in their future will help them through. At the same time they can help mold the better world they seek.

One of the human tragedies of this world is that most of us see a little of it. So often we read of a person that he "lived in the area all his life." Some have never set eyes on the Rockies or the exotic lands of the Mediterranean. There is variety enough as it is on this continent, and the more young people have the desire to travel so much the better. Life is not just the local scene but the world at large.

But the local scene as we call it is home most of the time and whatever our age group we do well to make it the best of it, always striving to improve both ourselves and the community.

Price of Folly

The five young Toronto men who recently kidnapped Mrs. Henry R. Nelles are paying a heavy penalty for their stupidity. For men of hitherto unblemished characters, and good jobs, to embark on such a criminal venture, is inconceivable. Yet that is what occurred and now the men have been handed penitentiary sentences ranging from ten to 15 years. What seems to have led to their undoing was their expensive tastes; here were five men aged 23 to 30 who had a yen for the kind of life only money can provide. But it is all over now and the rest of us not to mention these five young men, are left to ponder the weaknesses of humankind.

New Book Indicts Camp and Backers for Party Debacle

OTTAWA—Remember James Johnston?

Life-long Conservative, key campaign strategist here at party headquarters in Ottawa during the 1965 election, and until just about two years ago, the Tory national director?

Unimpeach able credentials, those, as a true-blue Tory.

Well, since he was replaced as national director by Malcolm Wickson before the '68 election, he has returned to the political action from which he took leave to serve the Conservatives.

He is back in the newspaper business as president, publisher and proprietor of the Cobourg Sentinel - Star, Canada's oldest weekly.

There he might have lived quietly in that Lake Ontario-front town, facing slowly from the federal political scene — if he had not jumped right back into the still lively and sometimes livid controversy over the decline and fall of former Conservative Prime Minister Diefenbaker, the party's biggest-ever election winner.

Now with both feet, he is back in, and right up to here with his inside, behind-the-scenes story of the "knifing," as he calls it, of Dief as Chief.

He has managed this by using two columns of his editorial page for a review in black 12 point type of Maritime Conservative MP Robert Coates' equally controversial book "The Night of the Knives."

The review can be calculated to open as many or maybe more old wounds than the book itself.

The villain of his piece, of course, is former Conservative President Dalton Camp — and right here is a good place to remind you that seldom have there been two such shiny - domed look-alikes as Johnston and Camp, such physical duplicates that one frequently was taken for the other.

James Johnston writes as the then "national director of the Conservative party," and relates that "I, too, had a few holes struck between my shoulder-blades through which the wind still whistles, although the blood long since has dried, and the shirts have all been patched."

He recalls that "night of knives" when the "conspirators" on the Chalmers Lauriertown convention hall platform "sat outwardly adhering to the formalities appropriate to such occasions, and watching their followers in the audience use jeers and hoots as effectively as knives and guns to destroy the leader of the party.

"Having had to share the platform that night myself with several of these people, the memory of its sheer brutality still sends shivers down my spine. It was cold, brutal, stupid and horrible."

Now, having set the scene, listen to James Johnston speak further, as former national director of the Conservative party:

"Is it any wonder that the Canadian people decided not to entrust such a group with the government of Canada. Bad enough that these people would destroy a party. Worse what they might do to a great country."

Tough talk, what, coming from the man who less than two years ago was the Conservative national director?

James Johnston does not think so.

"A great number of Conservatives have kept their mouths shut for some time because they felt loyalty to the party to which they belong, and they did not want to appear disloyal. They wanted, also, to play fair to Bob Stanfield whom they did not hold responsible for what others had done," he goes on, explaining why, like Robert Coates, he has spoken out in such harsh condemnation.

"Now, however, they see their once-proud party shattered in the national sense. It would be difficult indeed to see it at a lower ebb.

"Canada needs a strong Conservative party. But the party has a long way to come back. The election last year indicated that strong local and regional Conservative candidates could get elected on their own merits, but on a national basis, the party was flat on its ear. Thanks to Dalton Camp . . .

". . . Camp could, Bob Stanfield a great deal of support when it most was needed, and it took still after the '68 election disaster for the new leader to get rid of him."

Even with Dalton Camp gone, it admits James Johnston, speaking from his background as the party's national organizer, "there still is a gigantic clean-up to be done before the Conservative party can regain the respect of Canadian voters."

If James Johnston has done nothing else, he has shown, as no other Conservative, just what an enormous job Robert Stanfield still faces in struggling to repair the massive damage that plunged the party into the deepest ditch of defeat in nearly 30 years.

It has been an agonizingly long night of the knives," and dawn has yet to break.

Girl Scene In Decline With Maxis

Branford Expositor

Around twilight on a dull day, anyone who has mislaid his spectacles might think he had seen some smallish bell tents going down the street under their own power. What in fact he had seen is the latest in feminine style — the mini-envelopin g maxicoat. So far there are few to be seen here, but there will be more. Wherever did a majority of women resist the pressure to be in fashion?

The first impact of the maxicoat has been mixed. One wearer admitted that they are hard to handle in a wind. Another tripped over hers the first time she wore it.

For what it is worth, (not much, apparently), male opinion is mostly hostile. There are complaints that the living scenery has been obscured by clouds of cloth and that the number of attractive women has slumped.

NDP Policy and Investment in Canada

Winnipeg Free Press

One of the purposes of a political convention is to permit the political party sponsoring it to put its cards on the table; if it should be holding office, or if it hopes to hold office by the future, to tell voters what they may expect from it. This is particularly so of the New Democratic Party because policies set at an NDP convention are binding (except, one would presume, in unforeseen and exceptional circumstances) on the party and its leader. Thus Canadian voters and other interested parties both inside and outside Canada, can look back on the national NDP convention held in Winnipeg recently with some assurance of what may be expected in the unlikely event of the NDP ever coming to power in Ottawa.

The major issue — and major debate — was concerned with Canadian independence, economic and political. And while the strikingly anti - American attack-of-arms of Professor Melville Watkins and his associates was beaten back, the resolution adopted in its stead — while it may have been more moderate in language and tone — was not greatly different in its objective. It expressed alarm at the rate at which, it said, Canada's industries and resources have been passing into foreign control and advocated immediate measures to halt this trend, including an expansion of public ownership and new laws to regulate foreign investment in this country. Another resolution dealing with the economy would limit profits of banks and other financial institutions and would require these businesses to allocate a specific percentage of their deposits to what the NDP considers socially desirable ends — low interest housing, farm, small business and regional development loans. Yet another resolution would give workers an effective say in such traditional management areas as decisions affecting prices, products, capital investment and technological change.

This must make interesting reading for investors in the United States and elsewhere (Japan, for example) who may have been considering investing capital here in Manitoba, where we have the only NDP government in Canada. Incidentally policies passed at the convention were those of the national party. A provincial government, as T. C. Douglas found out in Saskatchewan after 1944, is constitutionally limited in what it can do in the way of achieving socialist objectives. Nonetheless Premier Schreyer, who is just back from a trip to Japan where he urged Japanese industrialists to put their money in Manitoba, and Finance Minister Cherniack, who has been urging the ugly Americans to place another new home and wonder-bed how long peace could last. Today that other war has come: how long away that other justice will be, no one can tell.

Deplores Lack of Support For Santa Claus Parade

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Being one of the few volunteers working with youth in the city of Belleville, I am deeply sorry to hear that the annual Santa Claus Parade will not take place owing to lack of support from our citizens.

For many years a small group of firemen have given their time for older people's children — in a city with a population of more than 33,000 people — how can we love our children?

Will our children look up to us and say, "You helped us; when we grow up, we'll do the same for our children." Or "One day a year for us and you let us down . . ."

But don't let's stop at the Santa Claus Parade — What about Scouting, junior hockey, name any youth organization in this city and where are those members and fathers?

Out drinking, watching TV or partying, or maybe some just haven't got time for that either.

And who are the first people to complain about children being delinquents, or standing around on Front Street. Yes! the ones who do nothing, and sit back and criticize what the few volunteers are struggling to do.

Citizens of Belleville if you feel guilty, please give a helping hand to the willing few.

White Paper on Tax Reform—the Newspapers Comment

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Following are excerpts from editorial in representative Canadian newspapers on the white paper on tax reform. Except as noted, all newspapers listed describe themselves as politically independent.

Toronto Globe and Mail: The white paper projects a very comprehensive overhaul of the tax system, one which will take time to digest, and some parts of which will enrage both left and right. In essence, however, it would give a fairer deal to a lot of Canadians who have not had a fair deal. It would weigh a good deal more heavily, too, upon what the white paper authors refer to as the "well-to-do" and the "wealthy; but that is the other half of the equity coin.

Toronto Star (Independent liberal): It's a stern measure—and yet to Mr. Benson's lasting credit his proposed tax reforms stand up remarkably well.

Ottawa Citizen: It ushers in a new and just tax system through a major overhaul of existing Canadian laws . . . the offensive game of the well-to-do, which has meant a free ride on the state, should be at an end.

Calgary Herald: . . . As under any radical change in a taxation system, some people will be better off, others will be hurt. . . . The government must be reminded that, however fairly the tax load is distributed, the load itself cannot be allowed to go beyond safe limits. When too much money is drained out of the private sector of the economy, this inevitably will lead to declining initiative and effort and ultimate stagnation and decline.

London Free Press: . . . The biggest beneficiaries, of course, will be the 750,000 Canadians in the lower-income brackets who would be freed of income tax by the raising of personal exemptions.

Montreal Gazette: In some ways the White Paper proposes changes that have been long overdue. It closes many loopholes in the taxation laws . . . But in other ways it seems to increase burdens in the very areas where incentives need to be stimulated.

Saint John Telegraph-Journal: . . . Anyone who lives in a house, whether he owns it or rents it, and anyone who owns anything of value, must be made uneasy by proposals for a federal "valuation day" at which everything would be added up and put on a list in Ottawa. Experience with provincial and municipal governments has long shown that when more money is wanted, the first place tax collectors look is at handy assessment lists. The early steps may not hurt much; they are sure to be followed by worse in future years. . . .

Hastings Clerk Helps Draft Report

Special Tax Deal for Farms Proposed

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A Hastings county official had a part in drafting a proposed system of preferential tax treatment for legitimate farm lands which was tabled in the Ontario Legislature Monday by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

Carl E. Bateman, county clerk administrator, was one of the eight member special committee which has been holding meetings across the province since July.

In presenting the report Mr. McKeough said the committee recommendations seemed "a reasonable solution to serious problem of taxation."

However, no new method of attacking land speculation was proposed.

The committee report did not suggest how to get at speculative land profits other than by denying preferential treatment to farm land which is converted to urban uses, or permitted to lie idle.

It said speculation profits are likely to be covered when either the federal or provincial government applies a general capital gains tax.

Mr. Bateman said today the committee's recommendations would be applied in Peel and York counties, before a final decision is made on amendments to the assessment act.

The two above counties were considered to be under the greatest urban shadow. Generally speaking the new assessment recommendations would not apply to any extent in the more rural areas.

In effect the proposal is to put an assessment limit on "working farms" under which the proposed scale of assessment rates would be stable.

The schedule is based on soil capability ratings used by the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Administration and on the value of the land as estimated in the 1966 census of agriculture.

The maximum rate per acre in the schedule is $200 and the minimum, for wasteland, is $15 an acre.

The farm residence and buildings should be assessed in the normal manner, at market value.

The total taxable assessment for the farm should be the sum of land, outbuildings and residence.

Present legislation calls for all properties to be assessed at market value, but in the case of "working farms" special legislation would be brought in to provide for fixed assessments.

Mr. Bateman suggested that local farmers might not benefit to the extent they might hope.

Also a few speculators might have to be classed farmers but Mr. Bateman said it would be difficult to legislate against speculators as long as they were owners of "working farms."

Besides qualifying by usage, farmland must contain at least 11 contiguous acres or, if smaller, produce an average annual gross revenue from sale of eligible produce of at least $2,000 over the three years preceding the year of assessment.

The report recommends that preferential tax treatment also apply to forest lands and land required for conservation purposes.

The committee report suggests that if its formula for determining assessment is accepted there will be a shift of the tax burden in rural municipalities to non - farm properties. It recommends that the province implement a program of transfer payments to such municipalities to cushion the impact.

Mr. Bateman says this proposed shift of the tax burden to non farm properties concerns him.

"If some of the tax burden is shifted from the farms, it must be taken up somewhere else," he said.

He feels that instead of having it shifted to non-farm properties, the province should make payments to municipalities to cushion the impact rather than have the extra tax burden placed on non-farm properties.

The committee on farm assessments held 18 meetings across Ontario, one of which was held in Belleville early in October. At that meeting a number of local farmers were called in to hear the committee proposals. There were some objections voiced but no specific flaws in the proposed legislation were indicated.

Sophiasburg and Ameliasburg townships in Prince Edward county were two of the municipalities considered by the special committee in arriving at its proposed tax base formula for farm lands.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market continued to surge ahead in active mid-morning trading today.

The market posted its largest daily gain on record Monday in response to the federal government's white paper on tax reforms.

The market opened fractionally lower today but reversed direction after the first half hour as trading picked up.

Advances outnumbered declines 198 to 108 with 190 issues unchanged.

Bank issues, which led Monday's rise, were strong. Royal gained 1¼ to 25. Canadian Imperial 1 to 23½, Nova Scotia ½ to 25½, Montreal ¾ to 17¼ and Toronto Dominion ¼ to 24½.

Canada Bread dropped 1½ to 11½ and Maple Leaf Mills, which owns 51 per cent of Canada Bread, lost 1¼ to 15.

Loblaw Groceterias informed Canada Bread that it no longer will be Loblaw's primary supplier of bakery products. Canada Bread estimates the decision will mean a loss of about 14 per cent of its consolidated net sales.

Loblaw Groceterias A preferred gained ¾ to 29¾.

Southam rose 2¾ to 63¼ while Bell slipped ¼ to 45.

Farm Animals Cause Of Much Pollution

HAMILTON (CP) — George Kerr, Ontario energy and resources minister, said Monday night that Ontario's farm animals produce more than twice as much waste as all the people in Canada and they present a serious source to the pollution problem.

Speaking to the Hamilton branch of the Ontario Institute of Agrologists, he said:

"Until the recently released report of the International Joint Commission on the Great Lakes, I had thought that household detergents were responsible for almost all this pollution of lakes and rivers by nitrates and phosphates. But the report showed clearly that other factors, including agricultural run off, were contributing significantly to the problem.

"The province is involved in a program of study and direction for the farm community aimed at ultimate control of agricultural pollutants."

These pollutants included erosion, pesticide and herbicides, fertilizers and animal waste.

Hydro Asked to Justify Increase in Power Price

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro has been asked to appear before a committee of the provincial legislature to justify its six-per-cent increase in the price of wholesale power.

Arthur Evans, chairman of the standing committee on government commissions, said Monday night he has requested Hydro officials to appear Thursday morning "because I felt we needed more information on just why this increase was necessary."

Ontario Hydro's price increase to municipalities, announced Sunday and scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1, is not expected to affect consumer rates in the immediate future.

But George Gathercole, chairman of Ontario Hydro, indicated that the increase could be passed on eventually to the consumer.

Evans (PC—Simcoe Centre) said in an interview he decided to ask the power company to explain the increase on his own initiative and without consulting the cabinet.

Earlier Monday, Opposition members led by Vernon Singer (L—Downsview) had insisted in the legislature that all gas, oil or electricity price increases should have to be justified to a public board before the increases are imposed.

Energy Minister George Kerr promised to consider requiring companies fh the energy field to bring any further price increases before the energy board.

Turner Will Study Montreal Bylaw

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner told the Commons Monday he has asked to see a copy of the bylaw now before Montreal city council that would ban street demonstrations in the city.

But he said he doubts whether it is an appropriate time in rule whether the measure is constitutional.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) asked whether Mr. Turner would make a statement on the constitutional aspects of the bylaw in view of its sweeping nature, and its possible implications for freedom of speech and assembly.

Mr. Turner said the constitutional question depends on what the courts would say if the measure—when it becomes law—is challenged. At that time, he said, it could be studied by the justice department.

Plan Rejected

LONDON (CP) — A British government spokesman said today the board of trade has rejected a radical plan by Air Canada that would have dropped transatlantic air force to a low of about $165 return.

The airline had proposed to put the new structure into effect Dec. 1 for groups of 50 or more travelling on an excursion basis.

Farmers Change Their Minds, Won't Oppose Land Gains Tax

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario farmers changed their minds Monday about earlier plans to oppose any capital gains tax on land assessed at its true market value.

A resolution had been prepared for the opening day of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture's annual convention here, opposing such a tax.

But Allan Jacklin of Elmwood cautioned delegates not to pass it. He said the capital gains tax proposed in the federal white paper on taxation Friday "could be the best thing that ever happened to agriculture to end land speculation."

Mr. Jacklin said the proposed federal law would force the agriculture industry to value land for its farm productivity rather than its speculative potential.

The resolution was rejected.

The resolution was rejected. Delegates voted to oppose any capital gains tax that would bear more heavily on land than on other forms of capital.

The federation's assessment and taxation committee also reiterated that land, especially farm land, should not have to bear the cost of education.

Federation President Charles Munro of Embro criticized the industry for "relative inaction" since a special provincial committee made sweeping recommendations last January, the major one calling on farmers to unit under a single organization. The proposal was rejected by the farmers in June.

"Immediate, effective action is, indeed, in dire want throughout agriculture today," he said.

He also said the Ontario region of the National Farmers Union had practised 17 years of negative criticism.

Progress among agricultural organizations in Ontario "is threatened by certain individuals whose main interest is in continually confusing farmers on the real issues while their personal empire is fortified," Mr. Munro said.

Among other developments at the convention, Roy Coulter of Campbellville, president of a new import company set up by the federation in the last year, said farmers have saved $375,000 on machinery purchases through the company.

He said the federation wants farmers to consider Czechoslovakian tractors being displayed next month at 14 locations throughout the province. He said they are considerably cheaper than similar Canadian models.

The federation also voted support for bills before the legislature to curb the power of business societies and provide animals for research.

A resolution was passed saying the bill would ensure "every protection" for animals and pets while "providing the economic supply of research animals."

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I can't get the children to eat any breakfast. They're just like their father. All he wants is a cup of coffee in the morning. I do think they need the food—but guess they inherited his dislike of breakfast."

Children drift into the habit of skipping breakfast because mothers make it easy to do so. Though it may be an effort, try to make breakfast a desirable start to the day.

Mother: "I think if we all get up a little earlier and have a pleasant time at the table, the children may get into the habit of eating breakfast again. I'm sure they'll be less restless and tired during their morning classes."

Club Activities

TWEED KINETTE

The Tweed Kinette Club sponsored its usual (twice - yearly) rummage sale in the Hungerford Township Hall, last weekend, and as usual there was a good turn out and it was deemed a success. It was convened by Kinette Eileen Monaghan, but all members pitched in and with staggered hours, it made the task much lighter than had it fallen on the committee members entirely.

On November 5 this month eight of the Tweed Kinettes visited the Inter - Club meeting of the Picton Kinette Club. All report a gala evening.

While on the subject of Kinettes, fourteen members of the Belleville Kinette Club visited the Tweed Kinette Club at the October meeting for the 20th anniversary of the Tweed Club.

During the evening Miss Heather Grant conducted the assembly singing. Vocal selections were given by Mrs. Ross Hart, Donald Armstrong, Rev. Bruce Small and Mrs. G. F. McLaroy. A musical duet, violin and piano was given by Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Grant and a vocal duet by Mrs. Grant Richardson and Mrs. R. Hart. Over 60 people had a part in the program.

Mrs. Harry Brown contributed accordion music and Miss Joanne Hearns gave a recitation. Mrs. Craig Watson, Mrs. Philip Conley and Mrs. Arthur Pyzar provided piano selections.

Several centennial dresses were worn as well as costumes of other days. A variety of old time songs was used in each presentation and included several patriotic selections.

At the close the committee served refreshments.

The imaginary bazaar was quite successful and provided the UCW with a large amount of money.

Czechoslovakia Faced With Crucial Problem

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia's next riot, for a change, could be about underwear instead of politics.

This has been acknowledged in the censored press. Complaining about the acute shortage of women's panties, a lady reporter wrote in the daily newspaper Vecerni Praha:

"I know an intelligent young man who judges women not by their dress but by their underwear. All the more surprising that the men who rule the lingerie trade do not do something before the women begin to riot."

An unsigned letter in the newspaper demanded to know: "When shall we finally be able to dress from the bottom up instead of just from the top, down? I have been walking around without panties for a month."

The panties problem commanded front-page space even in Rude Pravo, the main Communist party daily, for three consecutive days recently. In a series of confusing reports, various branches of the textile and synthetic yarn industries complained about labor shortages, too few lingerie-machines, supply irregularities and no funds for importing such indispensible items as elastic.

Vecerni Praha said plans call for 12,900,000 pairs of women's panties to be manufactured in Czechoslovakia this year. When you divide it by the number of pantie-age women "that is not enough," the newspaper added.

Without offering immediate hope, Vecerni Praha said there is a possibility that with more initiative the lingerie industry might be able to increase production more than a third in 1970.

But the situation is getting more serious every day, especially with winter coming on.

A check of Prague stores confirmed that the panties shelves really are as bare as some of the girls. And "hootleg" panties could not be found despite the claim of two teen-age girls who wrote a newspaper that store clerks were holding them back for favored customers.

Fur Coat Trend Is Spreading

NEW YORK (CP) — The market for men's fur coats is spreading this fall, with business and professional men following the trend set by youthful swingers.

While it's part of the peacock trend in men's fashions, the bulky furs such as raccoon and wolf have a masculine look and provide both warmth and dash for casual wear. The more conservative buyers are going for Persian lamb, otter and seal.

Canada's Prime Minister Trudeau was one of the trend-setters last year when he appeared in a natural unplucked otter coat. Quarterback Joe Namath of New York Jets in the American Football League was photographed in a black mink coat. This fall auto racing champion Jackie Stewart bought a shawl-collared long-haired fur coat while in Toronto to compete at the Mosport, track.

Some furriers felt that mink might not be a men's seller with its feminine connotation as the ultimate in luxury, but the rugged Namath helped out here.

Five years ago most men would have scoffed at the idea of buying a fur coat for themselves. In those days a few New York fur houses introduced fur-trimmed parkas for resort wear, but some of the avant-garde dressers in the theatre and arts world decided to go all the way and ordered fur coats for street wear.

Actor Van Johnson appeared in seal; pianist Peter Duchin moved to the top price bracket in nutria. Singer Tony Martin appeared for a recent signing assignment in Toronto wearing a six-button, three-quarter-length black-dyed calfskin.

Now there are no holds barred. Valentino of Rome came out with a "his and hers" in twin mink coats. Dr. Zhivago coats in leather-trimmed beaver. A New York house is showing a man's suit in black-dyed broadtail processed lamb, the lamb vest hand-painted in desert colors. However, most men won't go to these extremes.

The Fashion Group Incorporated, a New York non-profit organization of women fashion executives, recently presented their first all-fur showing and included a number of men's coats.

One was a white mink of ear-coat length with a collar edged in brown snake. A black muskrat was in maxi-length and a sand-dyed seal some just below the knees.

What are the men actually buying? Lindzon Furs of Toronto says raccoon and wolf are walking out of their showroom for casual wear. Wolf especially is expected to be popular for snowmobiling this winter. Businessmen favor seal and calf, although in October Norman Reoul of Toronto sold an unplucked nutria with a finer collar to a business executive.

Regal last year made up a single breasted natural seal coat for actor Robert Harrison and later actress Zsa Zsa Gabor stepped Harrow at an international airport and she mouthed to know where he had bought it.

Fashion couturier Leo Chevalier of Montreal has designed a line of men's fur coats for a national company. He furnishes for its baby and casually-masculine look. Otter also has become popular following the prime minister's purchase.

'Travel and Learn' Expeditions

By DORIS CLARK

Between March 15, 1968 and 1970, more than 16,000 Canadians went on "travel and learn" expeditions. High school students (3,300 of them) travelled in groups of 24 during the summer months, each group with two adult escorts. Each student lived with a family in another province for a week, sharing in activities. Says one:

"My trip will remain one of the unforgettable events of my life. I have made many dear and long lasting friends and have been able to see the real beauty and breadth of this country. But, most important, I feel that, in meeting, knowing and understanding people of my age from both Quebec and other extremities, of Canada, I will be able to understand and deal with the problems of Canadians in later life."

The second century Canadian is constantly made aware of other Canadians, with their own habits, environment and culture.

To know and to understand: such is the deep motive for travel and exchange as it should be practised. "Canada 200", Department of Secretary of State, Citizens hip Branch.

Dear Doris: My daughter had a car accident and as a result has a broken spinal cord. She is in a wheelchair now and has turned to making popsicle stick lamps for her wheelchair club. She makes slippers from nylon cord, too.

She is getting very tired of doing the same thing all the time, and I wonder if there are any other kinds of hobbies that she might be able to fill in time on. She loves working with her hands and has the patience of Job. — Wheelchair Hobbies.

Dear Hobbies: Your girl sounds like a busy concern, wheelchair and all.

There are books in your library on crewel-work, knitting and cushion making; and needlework magazines. I am sending you information about getting catalogues and material for such things as evening bag making, basketry, leather tooling, felt work, bead making and hand sculptures.

* * *

Dear Doris' I am very interested in obtaining a copy of the collection of recipes from the depression era, especially the Hungarian Goulash. My Dad brought the recipe home from work for my Mom to try and I can still remember how good it was. Dear Heavens, that was 36 years ago!

Dad worked three days a week on the railroad and there were 10 of us at home to feed and clothe. How they did it I guess I'll never really understand, because we were never desperately hungry and so long as we had something to wear it didn't really matter if they weren't the latest style or even if there were patches. Everyone was in the same position and were willing to share even if it was just a recipe or an idea. — Depression Daughter

Airy Pumpkin Pie

By MARY MOORE

The compliments in yesterday's mail went to my head. Letter after letter rejoiced over my Creamy Pumpkin Pie given here on October 9th for Thanksgiving dinner.

Carried away with enthusiasm I made another, Airy Pumpkin Pie, which was immediately devoured by my son and family. The airy bit stems from separating egg yolks and whites and folding beaten whites in last. It is not a pumpkin chiffon pie. This is simply light and spicy.

AIRY PUMPKIN PIE
(Deep 9" pie plate)

Pastry:
1¼ cups stirred but not sifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt
1-3 cup shortening
¼ cup butter
2 tbsps. cold water

Filling:
4 eggs, yolks and whites separated
1 cup light brown sugar, packed
½ tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg
½ tsp. allspice
¼ tsp. ginger
¼ tsp. salt
2 cups (One 16-oz. can) pumpkin
1-3 cup cereal (10 percent) cream
½ cup melted margarine
½ cup honey
1 tbsp. corn starch

To make Pastry cut shortening into flour and salt until the size of large peas. Drizzle in water, tossing with fork until flour is dampened. Pack between palms and roll out to fit large deep pie plate. Trim and flute a nice trim edge.

To make Filling in beater bowl combine egg yolks, brown sugar, spices, salt, pumpkin, cream and melted margarine and honey. Whip the egg whites with the corn starch until stiff and fold into filling. Pour filling into prepared pie plate and bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 15 min. and about 35-40 min. at 350 deg. Fahr., or until filling is just set at centre.

CANNIFTON - CORBYVILLE WI

The November meeting of the Canniflon-Corbyville WI was held at the home of the president, Mrs. C. Ellsworth. Canniflon, with twelve members present.

The president opened the meeting by reading a poem.

During the business period it was noted that the WI is to cater to a banquet for the euchre club in December. A number of women ordered souvenir spoons.

Reports of committees were given by Mrs. Bowers and Mrs. Milton. The convener for current events, Mrs. Welsh took over at this point. She spoke about the Indians, displayed pamphlets and clippings and told about attending the reenactment of the landing of the Mohawk tribes at Deseronto each spring. Mrs. Welsh told about her vacation trip to Northern Ontario going by polar bear express to Moosonee. She also showed some souvenirs she had brought back.

Mrs. Ellsworth thanked Mrs. Welsh and Mrs. Meale thanked the hostess for the use of her home.

Lunch was served following closing exercises.

Lose 10 lbs. in 10 days on Grapefruit diet

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. (Special) — This is the revolutionary grapefruit diet that everyone is suddenly talking about. Thousands of copies have been passed from hand to hand in factories, plants and offices throughout the U.S. and Canada.

Because this diet really works. We have testimonials reporting on its success. If you follow it exactly, you should lose 10 pounds in 10 days without pills or drugs. No weight- loss in the first four days but you will suddenly drop 5 pounds on the 5th day. Thereafter lose one pound a day until the 10th day. Then you will lose 1½ pounds every two days until you get down to your proper weight. Best of all, there will be no hunger pains. Revised and enlarged, this diet lets you stuff yourself with formerly "forbidden" foods, such as steaks trimmed with fat, roast or fried chicken, gravies, mayonnaise, lobster swimming in butter, bacon fats, sausages and scrambled eggs and still lose weight. The secret behind this "quick reducing diet" is simple. Fat does not form fat. And the grapefruit juice in this diet acts as a catalyst (the "trigger") to start the fat burning process. You stuff yourself on the permitted food listed in the diet plan, and still lose unsightly fat and ever-bulky fluids. A copy of this startlingly successful diet discovery suggested menus can be obtained by sending $2 to WEIGHT-AWAY, Dept. 54-11, 1138 Sherbrooke St., Winnipeg 4, Manitoba.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

If after trying this diet you have not lost 7 pounds in the first 7 days, another 6 pounds in the next 7 days and 1½ pounds every two days thereafter, simply return the diet plan and your $2 will be refunded promptly and without argument. Tear out this message as a reminder. Decide now to regain the trim, attractive figure of your youth. Diet plan also available in French.

Wife Finds Necklace In Husband's Car

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband's best friend is a beautiful, three-strand pearl necklace in his car another date last night. Should I return it to the owner, or keep it as a little present to myself? I need no guesses. — ENTITLED

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ENTITLED: Some innocent explanation in case of infidelities is forthcoming, I find it hard to believe. Why should a woman give you one dozen reasons why you really don't want to do.

Give the necklace to your husband and tell him you found it in his car. No questions.

Suggest that perhaps it belongs to one of the girls he works with and she lost it in the car when she was visiting home. And if you know your husband's fun-loving, promiscuous wives, do him a favor and don't look at him when you provide the alibi. He might discover.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Am I a "rotten mother" at my 23-year-old daughter says? Here's the problem:

Ronda and her husband bought a home across the street. They both work the night shift — 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. every evening. Ronda hardly ever has three small children (4, 2, and 7 months old) — dressed for bed. I put the children to sleep, get them up in the morning, give them breakfast and keep an eye on them. At 2:30 I walk across the street and takes the children home. At 4:00 she's back — to have coffee or check my refrigerator to see "what's needed."

I need some time by myself and I'll explain. Now I'm going to say so? Yesterday I just wanted to be alone. When I told Ronda, she said, "I have never heard of a mother who wasn't happy to care her daughter, anytime. You must be considering wrong with you." She slammed the door and left — mad.

Ann, I am 42 — she is 23. Maybe she doesn't need a few quiet moments to renew her spirit, but I do. If I'm a rotten mother, please tell me and I'll try to do better. — THINKING IT OVER.

* * *

DEAR THINK: You are a good mother. She is a rotten daughter. Spoiled rotten, that is. But then, take a bow, dearie, you spoiled her.

Insist that Ronda respect your need for time alone. Tell her the alternative is the day shift and a hired sitter so you can have your morning to yourself. And don't allow your selfish daughter to make you feel guilty. This is the secret weapon of kids like yours.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a nurse who works in the office of a physician. Since your column seems to be the world's billboard, will you please print this so Miss and Mrs. America will see it.

Yesterday a woman nearly burst herself in the office. She was not despondent or even unhappy. She had on so much junky jewelry it was ridiculous. Mrs. Klunkhot began to unhook, unclip, undo and unwind and finally she yelled, "Help." The poor thing was choking on a chain. Her glasses were caught on her necklace and her bracelet was hooked to her belt. I had to break her out of the tangled mess of metal. It took fifteen minutes of my valuable time.

Please tell the dames out there to leave their extra fancy jewelry at home when they go for their annual checkup. We don't need that much style down here. — R.N.G.G.

DEAR R.N.: Here 'tis and you're welcome.

CARPET TESTER — Engineers at Lockheed-California Co., substituted a mechanical gadget called a "sheep's foot roller" for women in spiked-heel shoes to test flooring materials used in their jet aircraft. The sheep's foot roller can press down on the flooring material with the same 800-pounds-per-square-inch force that a woman in spike heels can do, but not nearly so nicely. (CP Photo)

Opera today is a far cry from the 17th Century court of the Duke of Florence where the rudiments of the medium had its beginnings, with philosophers and artists coming together to try and revive the religious - oriented art of early Greece.

Canadian Opera Company tour manager Leo Nedomansky sees it not as "a lot of people with loud voices out to make a lot of money," but rather as an artistic endeavor which serves the community—and in this case a host of centres across the nation.

"When 30 company members are willing to travel 15,000 miles to perform 85 times in 74 communities, I think the general directorate has achieved something."

Vienna - born Mr. Nedomansky who has been associated as a director with 38 operas in ten countries, addressed the Rotary Club yesterday in place of general director Herman Geiger-Torel who was unable to be present because of jury service.

The Rotary Club is sponsoring the comany in a performance of The Barber of Seville at Centennial Secondary School next Saturday.

Mr. Nedomansky who came to Canada in April — the result of a chance meeting with Mr. Geiger-Torel in Milan 18 months ago — said the artists on the tour are mainly Canadian.

"I know many Europeans who would be glad to sign contracts with us, but this company exists to give jobs to Canadian singers — mainly in Toronto but also in other major centres."

As well as its Toronto season the company also has a program for the schools, in addition to touring the country.

"We try to give everyone a chance to see Opera if they want to."

Mr. Nedomansky said the company is also sponsored by Rotary Clubs in Brantford, Kirkland Lake, Kenora, St. John's, Moose Jaw and Kelowna.

Resignation Changes Trenton Election

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — It appears Trenton voters will be asked to elect four councillors in the Dec. 1 municipal election, instead of the usual three.

The matter of the fourth council seat arose at Monday night's regular council session. The seat is vacant because councillor Duncan McDonald resigned Friday (with one year left on his term) in order to contest the mayoralty in the election.

It was first believed that council would have to appoint a replacement to fill the seat vacated by Mr. McDonald, but clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry dispelled that belief last night.

He said that when a councillor resigns, under section 332 of the Municipal Act, and has more than two months left in his term a replacement must be elected. Section 352 deals with a council member who resigns to seek another position in an upcoming election.

Mr. Larry said it was his understanding that the fourth ranking man in the Dec. 1 election would get the one-year term, while the others would serve two-year terms.

However the clerk comptroller stressed that all this had to be confirmed by the town's solicitor.

In addition, voters will also elect a mayor for a two-year term. However the members of council have an understanding between themselves that they will all resign next fall to enable the beginning of coinciding elections with the county board of education and the public utilities.

Frank Morrell

New City Treasurer Hired

A 38 - year - old Belleville man, Mr. Frank Morrell, presently an auditor with the federal income tax office in this city, is Belleville's new city treasurer.

Mr. Morrell assumes his new position at city hall on December 1. He will succeed John J. Grohn, who resigned the treasurer's position to go to Brantford.

A native of Belleville, Mr. Morrell is a chartered accountant, and is a graduate in business administration from Western University. Following college he worked for a year in Toronto before joining the federal tax office in Belleville 13 years ago.

In announcing the hiring of Mr. Morrell as city treasurer and tax collector, Mayor J. Russell Scott said it was good to see a local man hired as a major department head at city hall.

Mr. Morrell, married with three children, won the city hall position over 21 other applicants.

Hunters Remanded

CAMPBELLFORD — Two hunters alleged to have pointed loaded shotguns at police officers during the weekend in Ferris provincial park were remanded Monday to Dec. 8 on charges of careless hunting.

Brothers Giovanni and Gerulamo Montanari of Toronto were released on $750 bail each. No plea was taken.

The two and 15 other Toronto hunters were charged with a variety of offences after police received numerous weekend complaints from residents near the community 35 miles southeast of Peterborough.

Police said Monday the other 15 have been charged with violations of fish and game regulations and will receive summonses in the mail.

New Lights

New traffic lights to ease rush hour congestion are expected to go into operation within a week at two new eastside intersections.

Traffic committee chairman Ald. Arthur Keegan said walk lights are now being installed at Victoria and Church streets and at the College and Canniffon Road intersection. The complete traffic signals were expected to be ready in another week, he said.

Rush-hour traffic at the two intersections has resulted in increasing complaints during the past few years.

Church 'Womenfolk' Go Nashville: Shucks! A Barnyard Hoe-down!

By NANCY BARRIAGE
Staff Reporter

Shades of Hee-Haw!

If you did not attend the Eastminster UCW variety show last night you missed a big event. The talented entertainers were right at home as they sang and danced the evening away in hoe-down fashion.

The decor was the typical barnyard strewn with wagon wheels, sheaves of wheat, Indian corn and sunflowers. Opening the event were the "Hayday Singers" Charlotte Kuntze, Jean Lantz, Norma Cooper, Marion Smith, Mildred Graham, Pat Harvey and Joyce Reynolds. They welcomed all present by singing "Hi Neighbor."

Master of ceremonies for the occasion was Joan Dixon who added much humor as she impersonated Minnie Pearl.

The skit entitled "No Bazaar Jar Leaders" was rendered by the president, Evelyn Throop and group leaders Georgina Zaback, Ruth McMillan, Audrey Daniels and Jean Lantz. The scarecrow dancer in the next skit was Sylvia Henderson.

One of the highlights was the "hillbilly" band dressed in old farmers' dungarees and shirts. They provided music from a strange variety of instruments. The drums were made from pots and pans and a vacuum hose was ingeniously made into another instrument.

Linda Zaback provided a piano solo and Marion Stratton gave a violin solo.

The "Hayday" dancers were dressed in black and hot pink costumes in the style of the Parisian flappers and they were heartily applauded, especially by the menfolk.

The evening was well spent and enjoyed by all if the amount of clapping and whistling is any indication.

Refreshments were served later to all present and a singsong took place.

Director, producer and choreographer was Hilda Henderson.

Rangers' Giacomin Makes Sure His Books Always in Order

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Giacomin, the thinking man's goaltender, has some homework to do tonight.

Giacomin, who'll be in the nets when New York Rangers take on Detroit Red Wings Wednesday, will do some leisurely reading from his little black book of National Hockey League shooters with special attention paid to the chapter on the Red Wings.

"Sure, I keep a book on them," the goalie said Monday.

"Every time a guy scores against me, I write it down with a description of how the goal came."

Everytime?

"You bet. I don't want it to be a guessing game when a guy is coming in on me." Giacomin continued. "I like to know what to expect."

In a game as fast as hockey, sometimes a goalie doesn't have time to think about a shooter's style. But Giacomin believes that he still benefits from his book often enough to make the project worthwhile.

"The percentage is enough in my favor to make that book useful," said Giacomin.

The goalie said he jots down his notes as soon as he gets home after a game or back to the team's hotel when the Rangers are on the road.

"I don't want to wait till the next morning. I might forget something important."

Then, the next time the Rangers face a team, Giacomin does some heavy reading. "Goaltending takes 100 per cent concentration on the puck," he said, "but if I can get any kind of an edge, I'm going to take it."

Giacomin's book on the Red Wings is full of details on Detroit's No. 1 line—Alex Delvecchio, Frank Mahovlich and Gordie Howe.

Here are a few samples:

Delvecchio: "He always tries to fake me to the glove side. And he's always around the net."

Mahovlich: "With him, you've always got to be ready. He's a threat from the blue line in. He'll try to beat you on speed and he'll try to overpower you."

Howe: "With Gordie you have to expect a shot almost anytime. He might be looking some place else but you have to be ready because he could be in the act of shooting. When he's got the puck, be ready."

Beliveau Fit

One Less Worry For Habs' Ruel

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Jean Beliveau had coach Claude Ruel worried at the beginning of the National Hockey League season, but the little Montreal Canadiens' general can relax for the time being at least.

Ruel's captain, who went into hospital suffering from fatigue in October, scored two goals Monday night to lead the league champions back into the East Division lead on a 6-3 victory over Los Angeles Kings.

Boston Bruins also came back to life Monday with an 8-3 victory over Oakland Seals to end a five-game winless streak.

Ruel said he was extremely happy with what he considered Beliveau's beat performance this season, but he wasn't entirely happy with the rest of his team.

"We came out roaring, but gave them too many chances to catch up," Ruel said.

The Canadiens took a 5-1 lead into the third period at Los Angeles and Mickey Redmond made it 6-1 at 2:27 of the period. Montreal then relaxed to allow Ed Joyal and Leon Rochefort to score on goalie Rogatien Vachon.

Beliveau started the Montreal rush with his third goal of the season at 1:16 of the first period, but Ted Irvine tied it up just nine seconds later.

Beliveau waited only another 29 seconds before putting Montreal ahead to stay.

The big Canadiens captain, who now has four goals and eight assists for the season, kept going and added an assist on the next scoring play by Bobby Rousseau. Henri Richard beat goalie Gerry Desjardins to wrap up the first period.

Jacques Lemaire took a pass from Richard to score his eighth season goal in the second session.

The crowd of 10,734 saw the Kings lose their fifth out of eight games on home ice. They start a nine-game road trip Saturday at Pittsburgh.

At Boston, Bruins defenceman Bobby Orr assisted on three goals to regain the league scoring leadership. Veterans Johnny Bucyk and John MacKenzie scored two goals each as the Bruins moved up to a tie with Detroit Red Wings on 17 points each. The Canadiens lead the East Division with 19 points, followed by New York with 18.

Other Boston marksmen were Fred Stanfield, Jim Lorentz, Dallas Smith and Jim Harrison. Gerry Ehman, Mike Laughton and Ted Hampson scored for the Seals.

The 14,831 fans saw the Bruins break out their biggest attack of the season with 43 shots on the Oakland goal.

Dozen Games Could Cost Hull $17,500

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bobby Hull has agreed to return to Chicago Black Hawks.

Agreement was reached between representatives of Hull and the Black Hawks late Monday after a day-long conference. Hull, who attended part of the session, still had to sign papers.

Informed sources said there was no doubt that he would accept the terms and be ready to join the team immediately.

Hull, who signed a four-year contract estimated at between $85,000 and $100,000 a year last season, refused to report earlier this year on the grounds that the Black Hawks did not carry through on all phases of their agreement.

It was likely that he would lose part of his salary for failure to report and participate in the Hawks' first 12 games. He probably would lose about $17,500.

Hull, who spent most of his time this hockey season on his Picton, Ont. cattle farm or on cattle inspection tours, has been at his suburban Chicago home for the past week and has skated alone to begin to get in shape.

It was uncertain whether he would be on the ice for the Hawks' next game, Saturday, since coach Billy Reay and general manager Tommy Ivan might not believe he was in condition to compete.

It was learned that the protracted negotiations finally were worked out to Hull's satisfaction yesterday, and it is likely the Black Hawks agreed to some type of additional compensation to make up for what Hull charged they failed to do last year.

Hull set the National Hockey League record of 58 goals last season, even though the Black Hawks finished last in the league's eastern division, the first time they had missed the Stanley Cup playoffs in 10 years.

The Hawks this year lost their first five games without Hull, but since then have turned about, winning five of their past six.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London businessman Colin Brown has returned from Yugoslavia with 95 other businessmen who flew there to arrange building that country's first golf course. Canadian designer Robert Trent Jones has begun designing the course to be financed by North American investors and to be located at the foot of a mountain facing the Adriatic Sea near Dubrovnik. The Yugoslav government has indicated they would like to see a $3,000 per person limit on investment, Mr. Brown said. He hopes development will begin in the spring of 1970 and "all we want now is is for the Yugoslavian government to guarantee that they will return our money within 10 years."

Facts of the Matter

Riders Beat Argos... On the Average

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Canadian Football League finals erupt this weekend in Regina and Toronto and the league head office has come up with some figures which might help you pick the winners.

Greg Fulton, the CFL's human computer, makes no allowance for sentiment—he just gives the cold, hard facts and lets you make up your own mind.

The facts in this case comprise the season records of Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts in the East and Saskatchewan Roughriders and Calgary Stampeders in the West.

During the 14 game eastern schedule, Toronto won 10 and lost four; Ottawa was 11-3. Toronto averaged 29 points a game to 28.5 for Ottawa, while allowing an average of 20 points against to 21.3 for the Rough Riders.

Toronto outrushed Ottawa, averaging 109.7 yards a game to Ottawa's 103.1. However, the Argos rushed more, an average of 29.3 times a game to 25 and came out with a 5.8-yard average a rush compared with 6.3 for Ottawa.

In passing, however, the Riders had it over the Argos by an average of 30 yards a game, completing 14.6 passes a game to 13.3. Although Ottawa passed more, the completion percentage was almost identical—53.1 for the men of Frank Clair to 53 for Leo Cahill's warriors.

The average yards per-pass was almost identical, 10 for Ottawa and 9.6 for Toronto.

Regardless of the statistics, however, Toronto still is looking for its first victory after meeting Ottawa three times this season.

Out West, the statistical difference is wider although in head-to-head encounters Saskatchewan is 3-0 over Calgary.

The Roughies scored an average of 24.5 points a game and allowed 16.3; the Stamps' figures were 20.4 and 18.6.

The green-and-white rush averaged 154.9 yards during the 16-game western season to 130.4 for Calgary. The average rush for Saskatchewan was 5.1 yards, compared to 4.6 for the Stamps.

Argo Passing Attack Has Nowhere to Go But Up

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts quarterbacks may be suspect after gaining only 73 yards by passing Sunday against Hamilton Tiger Cats but Argos' coach is not giving up on them.

Coach Leo Cahill ignored his quarterbacks' performance in the Eastern Football Conference semi-final and claimed that Tom Wilkinson and Frank Cesitano are "universally capable."

"Wilkinson is still the same guy who won a lot of big games throughout the season," Cahill said in an interview Monday.

"He hasn't changed. Remember, we had the biggest offence in the league. We didn't do it with mirrors.

"People forget about our injuries. Wilkinson was hurt for a few games. Also, he's almost a rookie, he's still learning.

"We lost Dave Raimey, Bill Symons isn't right. He has pain from that toe injury and maybe he's not in the best of shape because we haven't been running him in practice."

Cahill said he could not understand why a lot of people complained because Argos defeated the Ticats 15-9 mainly by defensive play.

"What's wrong with your defence winning a game once in a while? I remember Hamilton used to go to the Grey Cup every year with a tough defence and an offence that was suspect. Well, we have a good, tough defence and the best offence in Canada."

Despite the loss, Ticats' coach Joe Restic said after the game Sunday he was not impressed with either the Toronto defence or offence.

He said if Argos play defence against Ottawa like they did Sunday, "Jackson will pick them to pieces," referring to quarterback Russ Jackson of the Rough Riders whom Argos meet here Sunday in the first of the two-game total-point EFC final.

Restic said the Argos' defence allowed Ticats receivers to get open all day.

Tarp Ordered For Autostade

TORONTO (CP) —There will be a cover to protect the Grey Cup playing field this year, no matter who has to pay for it.

John Gaudaur, commissioner of the Canadian Football League, said Monday the CFL has ordered a plastic cover to protect the field at the Autostade in Montreal, site of the Grey Cup East-West final Sunday, Nov. 30.

Gaudaur said: "Who will pay for it? I'm not worried about that at this time. The important thing is to have the protection for the field. Who pays for it can be an internal matter and nothing is likely to come out about that."

Under CFL rules, one of the conditions under which a Grey Cup game is awarded a city is that proper field protection be provided as a responsibility of the stadium concerned.

Only 125 To Go!

MONTREAL (CP) — Esposito, a name synonymous with a potent offence in the National Hockey League, has become the bulwark of a tight defence.

Tony Esposito, Chicago Black Hawks goalie and younger brother of Phil, who last season with Boston Bruins established a scoring record of 126 points, has jumped into a spotlight of his own today.

Tony, 26 and a southpaw netminder, recorded his second shutout of the young season during a convincing 6-0 win over Toronto Maple Leafs in Chicago —a win that saw him jump into the goaltending lead.

Esposito was beaten only twice in three games in leading the hawks to a four-game winning streak and out of last place into fifth in the East Division. In his first two games this season, Esposito, who was drafted by Chicago from Montreal Canadiens last summer, had 11 goals against him.

In his last six games he has had only five against and the Hawks won five of those six games. For the season he has a goals-against-average of 2.00, which, combined with teammate Denis DeJordy's totals, gives the two an average of 2.33.

Also, Tony is one up on his brother now. Phil, being a forward, can never get a shutout like his brother. But Tony was credited with an assist against Toronto Sunday, which leaves him only 125 points short of Phil's record last season.

REAL ESTATE

HOW EFFECTIVE ARE "FOR SALE" SIGNS ON YOUR PROPERTY?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney Realty Ltd.

Very effective. They are second only to newspaper advertising and in some areas can outpull all other methods.

Prospective buyers often drive through an area they would prefer to live in just looking for such signs. Once an interest in buying, they are invariably a much better than average prospect through having seen the property at their own leisure under unhurried conditions.

Will such prospects bother you at the door? Seldom. And if you should receive a direct inquiry, a supply of your realtor's cards on hand is a simple answer to all questions.

It is unwise for owners to become involved in a discussion of prices or terms, or show the prospect around. Your realtor is an expert at this and you will serve your best interests by referring all inquiries to him.

The neighbors will know you are selling? Of course. But they will know anyway as soon as the realtor brings prospects around. And neighbors are an abundant source of goodwill word of mouth advertising, which is next to the value of the sign themselves, accounting for 16 percent of all valid sales leads in home sales.

A "for sale" sign is a silent salesman working for you around the clock.

Planned New Golf Course Has Duffers Buzzing

For those who don't know "where it's at," the newest area golf course will be 10 miles east of Belleville.

Burlington landscape architect Karl Johnson's recent announcement that he is building a championship 18 - hole layout in the Quinte area has the local golfing fraternity buzzing.

The facts are these:

The Belleville Golf and Country Club will be located on the north side of Number 7 Highway about 10 miles east of the city on the former McCambridge property across from the Catholic Church.

Measuring 6,800 yards from championship tees, the course will play to a par of 71.

The 18 - hole layout, extending north to front on the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway, has a tentative opening date set for the summer of 1971.

Owner - designer Johnson is using the natural resources of the Marysville Creek to make water a prominent feature on many of the 18 holes, including a tricky 200 - yard par - three ninth that requires a carry of 175 yards over a pond to the green.

Fringe attractions of the course include a planned swimming pool, driving range, and chalet - style clubhouse and proshop.

The club will be operated on a semi - private basis, catering to the green fee as well as the membership golfer.

In connection with his landscape architects and consultants firm, the 32-year-old Mr. Johnson has designed and built championship golf layouts in Durham (Homestead C.C.) and Ben Mills (Flemingdon Park Golf Club).

Belvedere Hotel goalie Dave Hicks makes a key save on Central Taxi forward Paul Fleming in Quinte Hockey League action last night. The game ended in a 1-1 deadlock.

Belvedere Yet to Lose In Quinte Hockey Action

It looks like nobody is going to make the Quinte Hockey League a one-horse race.

Last night Stinson Construction defeated Aluminum Stars 3-1 while Belvedere Hotel and Central Taxi battled to a 1-1 tie.

Belvedere, last year's fourth-place club is leading the pack as the only undefeated club with three points while Aluminum Stars and Stinson Construction deadlocked in second with two points. Central Taxi's tie gave them their first point. Belvedere is the only undefeated team to date.

All the scoring in the Stinson and Aluminum encounter came in the last ten minutes of the game with Rick Denard slapping Stinson's first goal home with Dave Symons and Jim McGuire getting assists. Bill Genereaux slammed Stinson's second goal-behind Aluminum Stars' goalie Vern Fraser playing his first game in the league with Brent McBrien receiving an assist. Stinson's third goal was scored by Dennis Ray with Wayne Tuman and Bob Ellis receiving assists.

Aluminum Stars' lone goal was scored by Bill Rushlow with G. Cameron getting the assist.

There were five penalties in the game with Stinson players getting the gate for four.

In the Belvedere Hotel, Central Taxi encounter, Alymer Cain scored Belvedere's goal with Larry Stewart getting the assist.

Centre Dwight Rathwell earned Central Taxi a draw with 15 seconds remaining and goalie Ken Genereaux removed for an extra attacker. Larry Soule and Paul Fleming drew assists.

The teams split eight penalties.

Next Monday's Quinte Hockey League action sees Stinson Construction battling Central Taxi and Aluminum Stars going against Belvedere Hotel. The first game is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Memorial Arena.

Pre-Game Steak on Way Out!

EDMONTON (CP) — The ritual of the pre-game meal may not be as beneficial as most coaches would like to believe, and should be disregarded in all sports.

That is the opinion of Dr. Bert Taylor, a research in the fitness unit of the University of Alberta, who says:

"There are no benefits physically, or psychologically either, to my mind.

"I may get an argument on the psychological end, but I can't see it. They'll say that by having the team together it helps with the comradeship and the old rah, rah win-one-for-the-old-alma-mater thing."

Dr. Taylor, also head wrestling coach and an assistant football coach at the university, says steak is one of the worst things you can have as a pre-game meal.

"It takes about four hours for the body to digest a steak. The pre-game meal should be quickly and easily digested. In other words eggs and hamburger."

Dr. Taylor said he eliminated the pre-game meal from his wrestling team "and if I had my way I'd say forget the pre-game meal in all sports."

He said research indicates that a player would probably be as well off to stick to his normal diet on game days as long as he eats it far enough ahead of the game in order that it be digested.

"Many swimmers will drink orange juice and eat honey just before they jump into the water. It's ridiculous. All it does is slop around in the stomach while you are swimming.

"If they did the same thing about 1½ hours before the event, it would do some good."

Dr. Taylor said carbohydrates are the easiest to digest and the quickest form of energy.

"If a meal is to help endurance, there is no question that carbohydrates are the answer."

Clyde Smith, formerly with Oregon State University and now a member of the Alberta football team, says:

"We had one track star at State who kept giving his coach a rough time about eating steak for a meal before each meet.

"Finally, the coach gave up and told him to eat whatever he felt like eating. The guy had three jelly sandwiches and went out and set his best time ever in the half-mile."

But UC of A trainer Ray Kelly says:

"If you put some artificial coloring in water, put a fancy name on it and tell a player it is good for him, he'll buy that and think it improves his play."

60 "FORDS" GO TO THE CLASSROOMS

To further "Ford Has a Better Idea", Roy Stevenson, centre, has an idea that is welcomed by Belleville's Safety Officer, Robert Hall, left, and Constable Bob Willis of the Ontario Provincial Police Accident Division, right. Thirty of the scale model Galaxie and Torino cars being presented above will be used by Safety Officer Hall to further driver education in the classrooms of Belleville. The other thirty will be used by Constable Willis in schools in Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox & Addington, and Frontenac Counties.

Mr. Stevenson is very safety conscious and believes that early training in this field is essential.

Along with the sixty scale model cars given to the police department to be used in the public schools, Stevenson Ford Sales Ltd. has also donated four Ford Galaxie Sedans to Belleville Secondary Schools for actual driving instruction — one at the Ontario School for the Deaf, one at Centennial Secondary School, and two at Quinte Secondary School. Mr. Stevenson states that Ford's "Better Idea" is more than just a slogan as his new car sales are 14 % ahead of last year. Last year was a record year in the automobile industry.

Hudson's 57 Ties Pettit's Atlanta Mark

Lou Hudson tied Bob Pettit's Hawks' club record of 57 points Monday night to spark Atlanta Hawks to a 125-122 National Basketball Association victory over Chicago Bulls. The Hawks won the game in the final second when Bill Bridges tipped in a shot by Walt Hazzard. Hudson logged his 57th point and 25th goal with 20 seconds left. A fast break layup brought the Hawks from behind and put them ahead 131-130. Chet Walker hit a pair of free throws for the Bulls, and with nine seconds left the stage was set for the Hazzard-Bridges game winner. In another game, San Diego Rockets, sparked by Elvin Hayes, edged San Francisco Warriors 106-98.

Lunch, Talks with U Thant Follow PM's Date with Barbra

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau moves from the gossip columns to the news columns today when he visits Secretary-General U Thant for luncheon and discussions.

The prime minister turns to international business after a secret weekend in New York during which he dated entertainer Barbra Streisand twice.

He slipped into town Friday night and his arrival was only announced in Ottawa Monday. But two New York Post columnists spotted him, first dancing with Miss Streisand Friday night and then taking her to the theatre Sunday.

Today Trudeau will spend about an hour at the Canadian consulate in New York starting from about 10 a.m. At 11 a.m. he will go to the UN to meet members of the Canadian mission.

He meets Thant at about 12:30 p.m. and lunches with him on the 38th floor area of the UN Secretariat where Thant has his office.

At about 2:30 p.m. he will meet briefly with the press and then attend a reception given him by some 175 Canadians and former Canadians now employed at the UN.

After that he will fly home in his government plane.

Main topic of discussions with Thant is expected to be environment control, particularly Trudeau's idea of an international regime in the aretl.

Canada has expressed considerable interest in the whole question of environment, and Trudeau in a recent speech in Parliament emphasized Canada's concern about Arctic pollution.

Other subjects to be discussed will include disarmament, the Nigerian civil war, peacekeeping and aerial hijacking.

Trudeau topped off his private weekend visit by attending the "publisher's luncheon" at the New York Times Monday. This is a daily affair given by top management of The Times to which national and international figures are invited on an off-the-record basis.

Canadian officials, insisting that the prime minister is entitled to his private life, refused to give any particulars of his New York visit from Friday to Monday. But they did confirm facts that became known.

The prime minister arrived here Friday night and had dinner with Miss Streisand—who is separated from her husband—at a restaurant called the Casa Brasil. Then the couple went to a nightclub called the Raffles where they were spotted by Post columnist Earl Wilson, Wilson.

The two met last year in London at the premiere of Funny Girl, which starred Miss Streisand.

Trudeau's second date with Miss Streisand—actually one Canadian official said the meetings could hardly be called dates—was disclosed by Post columnist Leonard Lyons. He said Miss Streisand gave up tickets to go elsewhere to date Trudeau.

Ottawa Rejects Provincial Status For Yukon, Northwest Territories

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Rejection by Ottawa of provincial status for either the Yukon or Northwest Territories surprised nobody Monday when announced by Jean Chretien, minister of northern development.

Also rejected was a suggestion by Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia that provinces annex neighboring parts of the two territories. Ottawa is to retain control of the North's natural resources.

Mr. Chretien said he would propose changes in the Northwest Territories Act that would increase the number of elected members in the territorial council to nine from seven and retain five appointed members.

The changes would also lower the voting age to 18 from 21, lengthen the council term to four years from three, reduce the period Ottawa may disallow territorial ordinances to one year from two and allow council to decide if their $5,000 annual indemnity should be increased.

The territorial council, headed by Commissioner Stuart Hodgson, has most of the powers of a provincial legislature with the exception of autonomy over its natural resources—potentially lucrative in view of recent petroleum discoveries in Alaska.

Chartrand Remanded On Sedition Charge

MONTREAL (CP) — Michel Chartrand, president of the Montreal council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, was released on bail Monday after appearing in provincial court on sedition charges.

Bail was set at $2,000 cash of $5,000 property. Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 18.

Chartrand also was ordered not to participate in any demonstration and to make no declaration except in connection with his work.

Chartrand was arrested Monday on a warrant charging him with "seditious utterances" in Quebec City Oct. 29.

Police said the radical union leader was arrested in a downtown Montreal restaurant on charges arising from his statement that English language high schools and universities "are going to explode with dynamite" if the national assembly adopts the Union Nationale government's language bil.

ANAF Weekly News Notes

It will be a quite busy time for the members of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit. Wednesday finds the mixed bowling enthusiasts gathered at the Bowledrome between 7 and 9 p.m. to resume their contests. They sure have a lot of fun and the chairman would like to see a few more teams come out. Why not join them? A very important general meeting on Thursday evening commencing at 9 p.m. The quarterly financial report will be up for discussion along with several other important items on the agenda.

Friday evening, another enjoyable evening can be spent at the social evening with the Canoes and their delightful dancing music together with some fine entertainment. Remember that winter draw is now in effect so please follow the rules laid down in the quarterly bulletin. The Mr. and Mrs. contestants will be happy to start their fall and winter activities on Saturday evening.

Chairman of the sick committee reports that Cdr. R. Mondeville has been transferred to the Napion General Hospital for further treatment, Cdr. W. J. Cumbley, R.C.N., room 613 while Cdes. B. Feather, J. McNaught and R. Workman are resting at home. All have been visited and looked after.

The poppy and wreath sales were very good and once again these gallant boys of the Air Cadets were out in full force doing their usual excellent job of selling, together with the old faithful, who turn out year after year.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I know you are not a politician and can't do anything about helping the sick folks get enough dollars to enjoy ourselves while we stay alive.

I do not consider social security payments do more than just give us enough so we exist. Not really live. You try to solve so many medical problems for us. What do you suggest for this one? — Mrs. O.

Comment: I agree. In spite of the welcome help from social security benefits and medicare, millions of old people are struggling to stay alive. As you say, Mrs. O., they exist, they do not live.

What is the answer? I think it is so incredibly simple it amazes me it has been overlooked these many years.

Isn't it time to consider carefully a "human depletion" allowance?

As human beings, we grow old and gradually become depleted. Our "rate of earning" at last yield less and eventually dry up.

According to a recent newspaper account, "the theory of depletion allowance is that they allow mineral producers to recover capital they have invested in assets — oil deposits, for example — whose value diminishes as the mineral is produced and the remaining reserve is reduced."

After working men and women reach the age of 65, why not allow them a human depletion allowance yearly which would automatically put aside the money thus saved until they reach retirement age of 65? Like an enforced annuity, it would provide a cash bundle on which they could live rather than exist.

They might even-require less in social security payments. How this will work out is the problem for government economists and accountants. Whether or not it is a practical suggestion, Mrs. O., I do not pretend to know.

But what I do know as a doctor is this: The hard-working human being deserves a "human depletion" allowance long before he reaches the age of 65.

Allowances Are Suggested For 'Human Depletion'

For Mr. A.: There's always hope for improvement even though you stop smoking after all these years. For example, here's a note received today:

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 84 years old, born in Denmark. I started smoking cigars at age 14 and have smoked them ever since at the rate of 10 to 20 big, strong cigars every day.

More than a year ago, I went into the hospital for treatment of bronchitis and emphysema. On the doctor's advice I made up my mind to quit smoking. I haven't touched a cigar since.

After 14 months I am feeling fine, and have not had any bad after-effects. This is a voluntary statement and you are free to use it if it will be of any value to anybody else. — Mr. W.

* * *

Tip for TV Directors: Dear Dr. Steincrohn: You had a recent column about people tasting and not putting the spoon or fork back in the serving dish. You wondered how readers felt about this. I, for one, do not do this and I think it is a disgusting habit. I do not want to eat after others, and I do not expect them to eat after me. I have seen this so many times by actors on TV. Why don't directors do something about this nasty habit!

Let a SPECIALIST Do It!

Church of Redeemer Celebrates Anniversary

DESERONTO — The celebration of the 100th anniversary of the forming of the congregation and the re-dedication of the restoration of the Church of the Redeemer (Presbyterian Church of Canada) in Deseronto will take place at a service to be held in the church next Sunday afternoon, November 16 at 2.30 p.m.

Officiating ministers will be the Rev. Rex Putnam, the Rev. D. A. Wilson and the Rev. Robert C. Jones, minister of the church. The junior and senior choirs of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Belleville and their organist, Mr. Frank K. Martin, will be guests for the service.

No services have been held in the church since the end of July. It was closed during August in order to permit the minister to go on holidays, then during the decorating first, T. Grant Browne of Willowdale, was not available until September. Extensive repairs were necessary before the work of restoration of the decorating was made. The congregation is now small, and it has been a heroic task for so few people to begin and carry through such an expensive project. A walkathon this summer added a substantial amount to the fund which has been building up, a few dollars at a time, over the years.

Pickersgill, Transport Board Come Under Blistering Attack

OTTAWA (CP) A Winnipeg MP flailed the Canadian transport commission Monday for its record "of complete failure in protecting the interests of the people of Canada."

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) delivered his blistering attack as the Commons debated a bill amending the Railway Act to increase the commission's regulatory powers over telecommunication companies under its jurisdiction.

He said the commission's head, former transport minister J. W. Pickersgill, was "highly priced and highly influential but in my opinion hardly objective."

"Whether you look at the failure of the regulatory commission to protect the interests of the people in respect of railway services or whether you look at its complete failure to protect the interests of the ordinary people in respect of telephone rates, it is a history and a record of complete failure."

The Commons later gave the bill second reading and sent it to a standing committee for closer scrutiny.

The House is recessed today, Remembrance Day. Wednesday it is to consider amendments to the Canada Student Loans Act, which would extend the right to grant loans under the act to trust, loan and insurance companies as well as banks.

Monday, the Commons began and then adjourned debate on a bill which Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford said will help increase public confidence in securities industries.

He said the bill, amending the Canada Corporations Act, will considerably improve the quality and range of corporate and financial disclosure. All federally-incorporated companies with assets or annual income exceeding $3,000,000 would be required to disclose their financial situation in annual, public statements.

The government would also have greater powers on inquiry into company affairs. The restrictive trade practices commission could investigate suspected fraud or mismanagement.

In the Railway Act debate, Mr. Orlikow blasted the former board of transport commissioners which preceded the Canadian transportation commission and said he fears the commission "will behave as its predecessor and will serve largely as a police boy for the companies it is supposed to regulate, the CPR, Bell Telephone and the CN-CP Telecommunications."

Communications Minister Eric Kierans led off the debate and said that under the Railway Act the commission lacks authority to set rates for what are known as "private wire services"—TV networks, telex, data transmission for computers, air traffic control voice circuits and the like.

These wire services had been growing at a rate of up to 20 per cent a year and those under federal jurisdiction constituted a $80,000,000 operation.

General networks were regulated, private ones were not. The bill would bring the private networks under commission regulation.

"The same communication companies operate both regulated general networks and unregulated private networks. In the case of CNCP, for example, close to 75 per cent of the revenues of this company derive from its private wire offerings."

"It is inherently unsatisfactory for a body, such as the CTC, to be charged with regulating only one portion of a particular company's business."

The charges levied by broadcasters and cable TV companies were excluded from transport commission regulation. They are regulated by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

Jack Marshall (PC—Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe) said the transport commission continues to "treat with apathy the services they are charged to provide for my province (Newfoundland)."

"In this age of the satellite, Mr. Speaker, the government does not hesitate to spend millions upon millions of dollars to communicate around the world, but they evidently are not aware of the denial of the rights of many thousands of Newfoundlanders who do not have the basic necessity of the telephone."

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) said the bill is a "piecemeal beginning" and there is a "crying need for a more thorough-going operation in the realm of regulation in the whole field of telecommunications."

Rail Union Official Hits Reduced Service

OTTAWA (CP) — A railway union official Monday said proposed reductions in rail service were "inexcusable" and "short-sighted."

D. N. Secord, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, in a statement from the union's Ottawa office, said:

"It is folly even to consider such drastic cuts in train passenger runs at a time when our highways and airways are becoming dangerously overcrowded."

Commenting on CNR and CPR plans to apply to the Canadian transport commission for permission to eliminate some passenger services, Mr. Secord said public attention was focussed on the Canadian Pacific Railway application but the Canadian National Railways application was equally disturbing.

"The CNR dropped over 2,000,000,000 passenger miles last year. What would be the effect on our roads and air travel facilities if all these people had to go by car, bus or plane?"

He said decisions on abandoning passenger trains should be made in the context of overall transportation needs of the country.

Strictly Personal
All Nations Diverse

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Other people, in other countries, always seem more "monolithic" than the American people seem to themselves. Living in the U.S., they can easily see the vast diversity of citizens, in their habits, attitudes, ideas and beliefs. It would be hard, if not impossible, to define "the American."

Yet they ascribe to other peoples a uniformity they know does not exist among their own. They speak of the British" or the "French" or the "Russians" as if they were some huge robot with interchangeable parts.

This is one of the great dangers in what the social psychologist call "block-thinking." There is no such entity as "Russia" in the abstract: there are Russian leaders, and factions, and bureaucrats, and workers, and youth, and intellectuals, and farmers, and scientists.

And there is every reason to believe that, despite government repression, they are as diversified as we are. Some fear us, some hate us, and some admire us. Some are belligerent, and some are pacifist. Moreover, the Establishment figures in Russia are going to have as hard a time keeping their young people in line as we are having — no matter how much "Party discipline" is exercised at the top.

No government, or system, has ever been able to clamp a cast-iron conformity on its people in the face of changing times and needs.

In point of fact, the more tightly any regime tries to apply such a clamp, the more severe and prolonged becomes the reaction. Hitler indoctrinated a whole generation of German youth into militarism and chauvinism — but young people in Germany today are among the most internationalist-minded and war-hating in the world.

This is because Germany lost the war; you might say: but we won the war, and our youth are repudiating all the old shibboleths just as vehemently. There is a new spirit abroad, and while it may manifest itself differently in the U.S., Germany, and Russia, what it has in common is a hard-refusal to be manipulated by the people in power.

One of the main reasons that enmities are perpetuated by governments is their way of wanting us to look at other nations in terms of solid blocks — so that we react to the "French" or the "Russians" as if they were some unified piece of machinery, instead of a collection of individuals of varying attitudes, ideas, and beliefs, with the same vague good will and the same nagging fears that we have.

When Eisenhower was President he started the kind of person - to - person movement, which was at the time merely abortive and sentimental: but the phrase is a good and necessary one. It is the way to resolve national differences without armed conflict, it will have to come about on a person-to-person basis, not government - to - government.

Seal Slaughter Just Postponed Says U.S. Body

NEW YORK (CP) — The Friends of Animals, a New York humane organization, said Monday the Canadian government had issued a misleading statement when it said it would "ban the killing of baby seals in 1970."

The organization said the new Canadian rulings on the East Coast hunt, in which no seal pups can be killed until they are at least three weeks old, would "merely . . . postpone the slaughter for about two weeks."

"And this delay will apply only to the Gulf of St. Lawrence," the organization said in a statement. "Along hundreds of miles of the Labrador front, Canadian and Norwegian hunters will be free to kill seals of any age, including newborn pups."

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds the healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "dramatic healing improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

Ask for Preparation H. to relieve pain, itching, swelling, and shrink hemorrhoids. Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoidal pain.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

U.S. Veteran's Day Sees Nixon Backed

Party Ousts India's PM

Sentiments Revealed By 'Silent Majority'

By The Associated Press

Hundreds of Veteran's Day ceremonies, many aimed at giving President Nixon's so-called "silent majority" a chance of piping up, drew thousands of flag waving citizens in cities and hamlets across the United States Tuesday.

Some of the larger crowds — estimated by police at more than 10,000 each — were in Washington, Boston and Tallahassee, Fla.

Massachusetts Gov. Francis W. Sargent led 11,000 marchers in Boston. The Tallahassee parade featured traditional floats and civic displays.

In the U.S. capital, organizers of the Veterans Day Freedom Rally at the Washington Monument could claim success as the estimated turnout matched their predictions.

The mostly white, neatly dressed gathering in Washington applauded and shouted approval during the 2½ hours as speaker after speaker attacked leaders of the war protest movement.

Some 35,000 persons were on the same ground Oct. 15 for music, speeches and the beginning of a candlelight march the night of the Vietnam Day Moratorium. And it was as an answer to this war protest and others that the "freedom rally" Tuesday was declared to make something extra of the Veterans Day observance.

Not far away, President Nixon and Mrs. Nixon paid a 45-minute visit to a Veterans Administration hospital. Their daughter, Julie, and her husband, David Eisenhower, observed the day in the same fashion by touring a hospital in Northampton, Mass.

Mrs. Eisenhower called the war a "terrible tragedy," and said she believes her father is trying sincerely to end it and that she hopes it is settled before next June when her husband graduates from college.

Although the day was dedicated to honoring members of the U.S. armed forces of past and present, many citizens who back Nixon's Vietnam policy and oppose war protests took advantage of the occasion to show their feelings by showing the flag and driving with their car lights on.

In Pensacola, Fla., after a "biggest ever" Veterans Day parade, program chairman Clarence Morrow said: "The silent majority showed their respect for the president, this country and the flag today."

Weather Good For Moon Trip

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — While others looked approvingly at weather forecasts for Friday's launch, the Apollo 12 astronauts today concentrated on weather for a different purpose: They went to do some sunbathing before leaving for the moon.

Like fighters who train to a peak and then taper off for the bout, astronauts Charles Conrad, Alan Bean and Richard Gordon are spending their last days doing the things that are leisure to them.

Conrad spent 40 minutes aloft Tuesday in a T-38 jet, doing a few rolls.

"I did what I wanted to do, which was acrobatics," said the man who next Wednesday will guide the lunar module to a landing on the moon's Ocean of Storms. "If I have time I'll fly some more."

The space agency said all three astronauts planned to go to the beach today if the weather permitted. Despite a bright sun, temperatures have invited only the hardiest swimmers to try the water.

All three plan to relax in their crew quarters today as Gordon and Bean did Tuesday. The only set item on their schedule was a luncheon with space officials and some other astronauts.

Kingston Youths War On Drugs

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — About 175 Kingston youths, 80 per cent of whom have experimented with drugs, have formed an organization to warn teen-agers of drug dangers.

Michael Mahoney, a research technician with Queen's University, said the youths formed the group two weeks ago and soon will begin public speaking engagements in high school students in this area.

"They've got a pitch which will make the kids sit up and take notice," said Mr. Mahoney. "Adults just can't get the message across—the youths turn us off."

A Day for Memories

War Hero Meets Nurse Who Tended Wounds

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Remembrance Day 1969 in Belleville forcefully brought back warm personal memories for one Belleville area woman.

For Dorothy Howes, those memories marched into last night's Remembrance Day banquet at Bleecker auditorium with the heroic figure of one of Canada's VCs — Fred A. Tilson.

The last time Mrs. Howes had seen the warrior she was nursing the Canadian officer in recovery from the heroic action that cost him both legs and won him the Victoria Cross. And he was in a wheelchair.

That was 24 years ago. Lt. Col. Tilston is now president of a drug company in Western Ontario. Mrs. Howes, living at Corbyville, is a mother of five.

As Lt. Col. Tilston strode toward the head table with the guests of honor, Mrs. Howes broke down and wept.

"I'd never seen him walking before until tonight," she said later. "It was tremendous for me to actually see him walking. Here I was crying with big tears rolling down my face."

The warrior also added a personal touch to the little reunion between them both on the banquet floor. He insisted on signing his autograph as Major Tilston — the rank he held during his convalescence from battle.

Mrs. Howes, a graduate of Belleville General Hospital, was a lieutenant nursing sister when they met at a hospital centre in England. The Canadian received his VC while leading his men in repeated charges, while wounded against enemy posts in Germany's Hochwald Forest.

But the past found no place in Lt. Col. Tilston's speech to last night's banquet.

Instead he scanned the future of Canada for assembled veterans and came up with optimistic predictions.

Despite the various pressures on modern Canadian society, the war hero indicated the future state of the country would confound today's pessimists.

"If one were by instinct a Jeremiah, he might well ask 'Can this country of ours survive against all the pressures —

Letter to Santa Can Open Door to Christmas Wonderland

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Santa and The Intelligencer are getting together.

It's something more than five weeks to Christmas.

But, already The Intelligencer has gift-wrapped a glittering bonus for Quinte families.

It will be individually unpackaged for three lucky families in Belleville and district.

Now getting underway is The Intelligencer's Santa Write-In contest.

Its winners soon will receive a glamorous seasonal treat-trats to Toronto's Christmas Wonderland.

Details of the contest will be formally advertised in the Quinte district's newspaper Friday.

But, it works something like this:

Youngsters are asked to forward letters to Santa care of the Intelligencer giving reasons why they would like to visit Christmas Wonderland.

Santa will choose the four most interesting messages to catch his fancy. The winning youngsters — and all members of their families — will spend a whole day at Christmas Wonderland courtesy of The Intelligencer.

Now a traditional set piece of the Ontario scene, the Christmas Wonderland is open from Nov. 23 through Dec. 23 at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds, Toronto.

The winning Quinte families will be among the more than 1,500,000 visitors who have absorbed its glitter and fun since 1963.

Once a fantasy spectacular for youngsters, the show has gradually changed to a production of interest to the whole family.

With nearly 30 separate visiting areas housed in the CNE's Automotive Building, Christmas Wonderland this year provides a day full of excitement for visitors of all ages.

Among other attractions, the families will:

Visit Santa in his ice palace; ask the Fairy Princess for a wish; take a train ride to an enchanted mountain; race in a mini Grand Prix; chat with a "talking" police car; drive an electric automobile through the streets of a real town; lunch with Snoopy, of Peanuts fame, or one of his friends; marvel at the skeleton of a large dinosaur.

And it's all on The Intelligencer, rides, souvenirs, meals, refreshments, even the trip to and from Wonderland.

All that's necessary is to write Santa Claus, courtesy The Intelligencer, and tell the jolly great himself why you'd like to go to Christmas Wonderland.

Combines Community Recreation

Mott Plan for School Use Endorsed By Hastings Board

Hastings County Board of Education has agreed in principal with the proposal to establish a pilot community school project in conjunction with the Quinte District Community Committee and the separate school board.

The move is the outcome of the "Flight to Flint" last March to study the use of elementary schools for community recreational programs in the Michigan city.

The City of Belleville has given its official approval of the scheme," Director of Education Eric Runacres told the board, "if you agree to give your approval, you are committing yourself in principle only."

The director said establishment of a community school program is something a small community without a recreation department could do, provided there were an expressed desire and community leadership available.

"This is the great advantage of the program," he said.

No location has been chosen for the pilot project, but with the board's approval in principle now granted, any community in the county can apply to set up a pilot project. Only other requirements are municipal approval and provision of leadership for a full recreational and extra - curricular educational program.

Better Library Facilities Among Future Priorities

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Long range planning entered the picture at the Hastings Board of Education meeting Monday night as the building committee's report was adopted in full.

Items to be considered by the board in future discussion are the provision of adequate administration offices library facilities in all elementary schools for enrichment and institution of senior elementary schools in north Hastings and Trenton.

Trustee Donald Williams of Stirling called for a plan to build additions to replace the large number of portable classrooms in the county. He was assured by Director of Education Eric Runacres that plans to phase out portables were under way.

Emerson Robinson of Marmora remarked that the requirement that schools must have an enrolment of 300 before a library room could be added would exclude libraries from all elementary schools north of Highway 7 except Sancourt Public School.

Mr. Runacres said libraries must be put in all schools, only those accommodating 300 or more pupils will have a separate room for the purpose.

"We must have resource areas," added MacDonald Smith of Belleville. "But in the smaller schools, b a s ements and halls can be pressed into service."

The senior schools for Grades 7 and 8 pupils in North Hastings and Trenton, if built would include home economics and industrial arts rooms. Consultations with the area superintendent will be held to decide on the feasibility of this plan.

The building committee, composed of John O'Flynn, James Clarke and J a m e s Spry also called for a review of all board-owned properties to determine if any might be considered for disposal. Proceeds of their sale would be used for any additional accommodation required.

Veterans Fear NATO Cuts

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

Canada's veterans are concerned over reductions in the nation's armed forces, Belleville's Remembrance Day banquet was told last night.

The caution came from a top executive of veterans' affairs — Jack Lundberg, the Bellevillian who is dominion president of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans Association.

Mr. Lundberg made the statement as he proposed the traditional toast to the armed forces at the dinner, reuniting veterans of two world wars at Bleecker Auditorium.

"We're deeply concerned over the fact that the forces of Canada are being reduced to such a level — a level we do not feel is safe," he said.

"We are deeply concerned also with the reducing of Canada's militia regiments," he added, pledging support of the veterans to the active services.

Mr. Lundberg's remarks drew thanks from Lt.-Col. Ross Allen, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Lt.-Col. Allen said however, the historic Quinte area regiment "looks to a future that will continue undiminished."

The banquet, a climax to annual Remembrance Day events in the city, drew close to 300 veterans and invited guests.

economic, regional and ethnic — which confront us," he said. "My answer is yes — a resounding yes.

"All these things I leave to the sob-sisters, to those who look for negatives, when there are dynamic, positive things to be seen everywhere.

Among the current issues in the Tilston review:

U.S. Economic Ills — Problems and differences exist, but the issues are not in the open for re - examination. "We have the opportunity to discuss and debate them and, in due course, resolve them. I would worry about Canada if we didn't or couldn't."

Provincial - Federal contests— "It's the most natural phenomenon in a federal country like ours."

Quebec — Quebec is embarked on a renaissance without losing its own special identity. "To bring this about is no easy task . . . Nevertheless, as I see it, given good leadership, it's the healthiest thing which could possibly have happened to our country. The changing Quebec scene is a movement we should all welcome, not condemn, looking at its many pitfalls, not at the negative difficulties . . . bound to happen . . . we work out our mutual destiny."

A dual society — "Canada's duality is not a liability. If we are men and women of commonsense, we shall see it for what as the great national asset it actually is, an asset which makes our country unique in this hemisphere."

A nation with problems is a country "ripe for accomplishment — and "that's the role I see as Canada's," said Lt.-Col. Tilston.

"It's the most alive country I know, not even excluding the great neighbor next door," he added.

Trenton Remembers Its War Dead

Peace--Remembrance Message

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Remembrance Day services were held Tuesday in Trenton under a cold, grey sky reminiscent of the shadow cast in many homes by the effects of war.

Branch 118, Royal Canadian Legion, honored the war dead with a parade to Centennial Park where Legion chaplain the Rev. J. A. Payton, delivered a Remembrance Day message.

In front of the monument commemorating great human sacrifice, Rev. Payton said: "Your comrades being dead yet speak: we don't want attractive memorials and things commemorating our sacrifices — we want peace and brotherhood for which we sacrificed our lives.

"The only satisfactory peace is world peace — that is the only environment that is acceptable," he asserted.

"Those who don't come here today don't realize the price others paid for the freedom we have today," he continue.

"But to sentimentalize once a year for the sacrifice of others is not enough — from the rising of the sun to the falling of the sun daily let us remember the cause for which they were sacrificed.

"It's not just the respect of the government or a few that is required, but yours and mine — we're not keeping the faith of the honored dead unless we work for a better world," he concluded.

In a brief address Lou Knack president of Branch 110 of the Royal Canadian Legion, noted that 2000 yellow tulips with red streaks — to symbolize the blood Canadians shed for Holland — will bloom next spring in two flower beds, one on each side of the cenotaph at Centennial Park.

The tulips were a gift of the Dutch community and on May 25, 1970, a service will be held here to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the liberation of Holland by the Canadian Army.

Veterans, the Canadian Forces Base A.M.D.U. Brass and Reed band, service personnel and service cadets took part in the service and parade which formed up at Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 118.

The Remembrance Day service is held annually on the anniversary of the World War I Armilice Day, 1918, as is the Legion's annual Remembrance Day banquet which was held Tuesday night at the Legion hall.

Most local businesses closed between 10:30 a.m. and noon to allow their employees to mark the occasion and Tuesday was an official school holiday, allowing both students and teachers to honor the war dead.

Fallen Comrades Are Not Forgotten

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — "Remembrance Day will bring the names of the fallen trooping into the minds of the veterans, if you remember them as companions of your youth. A younger generation will pause with you to honor their memory. They are our benefactors."

Yesterday morning, Picton and district residents gathered at the War Memorial where Salvation Army Captain Ray Piercey urged the assembly to remember our benefactors, those who paid the supreme price for freedom.

Addressing the group standing before the cenotaph Capt. Piercey observed, "There have been bitter days since these men died; global conflicts that seemed to mock their sacrifice — almost to suggest that their death was in vain. We do not gather on this Remembrance Day to justify war or to condone any of its wickedness. We simply seek to say that we honor them — the known and the unknown soldier."

He mentioned the grave of the unknown soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

"Fallen, but not forgotten; unidentified, but lying among the celebrated; single but symbolizing thousands — this is the unknown soldier. On his tomb there is no name but an inscription. It reads 'Here lies in honored glory an American soldier unknown but to God'. Thus the nations have sought to salute the sacrifice of their sons, splendid men uprooted like strong oaks in some ruthless gale, many mutilated beyond recognition ,some of them missing without a trace."

At 11 a.m. the Last Post was sounded and the flags of the color parties slowly lowered to the ground. The Canadian flag flew at half staff during the two minute silence saluting the fallen soldiers of Picton and Prince Edward County.

Following this tribute to the war dead, wreaths were placed at the foot of the War Memorial. Placing the wreath for the province of Ontario was Norris Whitney, MPP Mayor H. J. McFarland laid a wreath for the Town of Picton while Warden George Foster placed the wreath for Prince Edward County.

Assisting Captain Piercey in yesterday's brief service was Rev. Robert Sherwin of Picton United Church and Rev. Peter Breedveldt of the Christian Reformed Church, Bloomfield.

Veterans paraded from the Legion Hall to the cenotaph for the Remembrance Day Service with representatives of the Boy Scouts, the Legion Ladies Auxiliary and other groups. Members of the Odd Fellows band and the Picton Junior Band played for the parade of Picton's "Old Sweats" and World War II veterans.

Earlier this fall, managing editor of the Picton Gazette, Lindley B. Calnan paid tribute to World War I veterans with a special issue marking the 50th anniversary of the "Old Sweats" return to Prince Edward County.

Included in this memorial edition were photographs of "the fighting boys of Prince Edward" and many of their recollections of the war and its impact on their lives.

Loses Finger

An accident as a result of an explosion yesterday has prompted a warning about chemical experiments from Belleville City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

The warning surrounded the highly volatile nature of potassium chlorate which does not need to be fused to explode.

"It's extremely danger ous stuff," Mr. Crosbie said. "I would urge chemistry students to stay away from it."

David William Brown, 18, of Plaza Square and his brother Glen were making bone - made gunpowder with potassium chlorate As they were inserting it into a tube behind a pressboard, the material exploded.

David lost a finger and sustained cuts to his hand.

Thurlow Remembers

THURLOW —The Thurlow Remembrance Day service at the cenotaph at the township hall in Carrolton was well attended Tuesday morning.

Rev. J. W. Hobbs of Carrollton United Church was in charge of the service. Rev. Leucesta Bigby of Plainfield gave the address and the lesson was read by Reeve Horace Casey.

The provincial wreath was laid by a mother who lost her son in the Second World War. Other wreaths were placed by the reeve, Corby's Ltd., Canada Cement, Local 219 of the Paint Anne cement workers, and the Hansey family.

Responsible Approach

Trenton high school valedictorian Kathleen Milligan's address at the recent graduation exercises was in keeping with the times.

No longer are such occasions a time for platitudes, but rather for student participation and comment in the contemporary vein. For example, Miss Milligan suggested her generation is one that "really cares," and went on to remind her audience "there is still too much stress on exams and marks and not nearly enough emphasis on preparing students to face the realities of life."

For all their new-found awareness, young people still need adult advice, and who better to give it in this case than Prince Edward Hastings MP George Hees. A man of wide experience of the world and politics, a former Toronto Argonauts footballer who knows the value of an academic education tempered by recreation, Mr. Hees told the students to never stop learning and observing, and to take life but not themselves seriously.

The adult world, he said, needed the ideas of youth, but he reminded the young people they must protest not in the manner which has become so popular today, through violence and destruction, but "with your brains and your powers of expression."

It was good advice. It calls for the young to make themselves heard, but in a responsible manner. That is the way it is in the majority of our places of learning, at both the high school and university level; and that is the way which must prevail.

Area Mishaps

Last weekend's rash of accidents and break-ins in the city area is a matter for concern.

With Christmas approaching this is a time when particular care is needed on the part of drivers and homeowners. Weather conditions and fewer hours of daylight militate against the driver and it also seems to be a season favored by those who indulge in petty crime.

Anyone planning to be away this Christmas should make sure his home is properly secured and arrange for neighbors to make occasional checks.

The death of a city woman in a car accident and of a man who drowned in the Bay of Quinte while duck-hunting are also matters for regret. There is also the six-year-old hit in the eye by a BB gun pellet in a patch of woods between Rollins and Lambert Drives. Apparently it is not known who was responsible for firing the shot, but this and the incidents involving a party of hunters in the Campbellford area are eloquent of the carelessness that is rampant in the handling of guns during the hunting season.

The Campbellford affair reveals a particularly dangerous situation, involving a party of foreign-born hunters from the Toronto-Scarborough area who were either completely unaware or heedless of hunting regulations. Charges have been laid or are pending against no fewer than 17 men, and involve careless hunting and discharging of firearms within town limits and hunting in a provincial park.

At least nobody was hurt, and the incidents cannot compare with the tragedy that befell a Ridgeway, N.Y. family last Sunday. A father, attempting to scare trespassing hunters off his property, accidentally shot and killed his 17-year-old daughter who had gone to look for him.

The keen hunter of course is not to be deterred. The trouble is there are far too many who disobey the rules; trigger happy hunters are a menace to anyone who happens to be in the area.

Joins Pro Tour

If you want an enjoyable, outdoor profession that also pays well according to ability, you can't beat professional golf. This is the happy prospect that lies ahead of Belleville's Gary Bowerman who has just won a place in next year's lucrative U.S. golf circuit. Bowerman is 28 and has the skill to carve a name for himself on the pro tour. As he gets experience so will his game improve still further; and it will not be surprise us to see his name among the money winners.

Little Optimism on Either Side

U.S. and Russia Will Discuss Arms Limitation Next Week

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — After a 23-year history of diplomatic buildup, the United States and the Soviet Union meet next week in Helsinki to talk about limiting their strategic nuclear forces.

By all appearances, the Soviets are not enthusiastic, the Americans not particularly optimistic.

Looking back over the meagre accomplishments since the summer of 1946 when a United Nations commission used to debate disarmament in its temporary quarters in the Bronx section of New York City, there is indeed not much in the record to fan great expectations.

Still, what is past is prologue and the talks opening Monday in Finland will for the first time attempt to go to the heart of the matter. This, in the view of former U.S. defence secretary Robert McNamara, is the "action-reaction phenomenon which fuels the arms race."

No one is predicting any progress soon.

Perhaps the most hopeful aspect of the talks is the friendlier atmosphere apparent in Washington-Kremlin relations of late.

On the broader scale, there are growing signs that in general the nations of Europe have opened the door a bit to an important search for something in the nature of a detente.

As with the arms talks, the Cold War that divided Europe also is 23 years old. The fact the European leaders in the East and the West seem to sense that the time is right for some degree of accord cannot help but give heart to the negotiators heading for Helsinki.

Improvement in Washington-Moscow relations is evident, for instance, in the fact that both sides now have found acceptable language that implies acceptance of a rough degree of parity in arms strength.

Previously the U.S. had insisted, it seemed, on flaunting somewhat its superiority. Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny reiterated the Kremlin's sensitivity on this point in saying last week he hoped for a "positive outcome" but adding, "We will never allow anyone to talk to us from a 'position of strength'."

Despite the rather muted hopes for eventual success of the talks, there are a number of experts who suggest they might make a bad situation worse.

One argument is that because both superpowers have nuclear capabilities that could destroy large parts of the world, the chances of either side firing first are virtually nonexistent.

That might make sense if there was any guarantee that they would remain static—but history has shown the opposite to be true.

There also is the suggestion that any paper agreement might delude Americans and their allies into a false feeling of security that would lead to dangerous reduction in defence equipment.

At any rate, there is general agreement that at present neither the U.S. nor the Soviet Union is in a position to disarm the other in a first-strike adventure.

It's a healthy situation for talks aimed at gradually and simultaneously lowering the level of strategic arms on both sides.

Capital Gains Tax Would Inflate Real Estate Costs

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am writing in order to present a layman's reaction to the Federal Tax Reforms, (specifically the Capital Gains Tax), proposed by Finance Minister Edgar Benson.

It would appear that the primary concern of our Government, at this stage in our economic history, should be to find means of curbing inflation. It would also appear that the proposed Capital Gains Tax will certainly inflate the cost of real estate, since any individual (rich or otherwise) will take the proposed Capital Gains Tax into consideration, when he is about to sell any real estate, and raise the selling price of his real estate in order to ensure that the desired profit is obtained and that the Federal Government will receive its "pound of flesh".

It seems also, that there are inconsistencies in what Mr. Benson has to say in favor of the proposed capital gains tax. As we know, "a capital gain is made when someone sells an asset such as stocks or real estate for profit", but Mr. Benson said this would be paid "mostly by wealthy Canadians".

Does he mean that anyone who sells his home for a profit is a wealthy Canadian? I think he means that wealthy Canadians will pay more, but it seems that most of the tax revenue obtained by the federal government in the form of capital gains tax would come from the middle-class home owner who sells his home for a profit.

Thus, it would appear that the proposed capital gains tax will not curb inflation mostly the rich, but anyone and everyone who owns property or will buy property after the proposed tax reforms are accepted by parliament and become law.

Tax Reform Paper Wide in Scope

By I. H. ASPER
In The Globe and Mail

In plain language, the Government lays out a plan which will take 750,000 taxpayers off its books, reduce taxes for another 3,000,000, keep them content for 800,000, and boost them dramatically for the remaining 3,000,000. The magic number seems to start around $10,000 of income.

The headlines will undoubtedly focus on the major changes, but there are dozens of recommendations which deserve equal consideration. The most dramatic plan is the tax at full rates on many types of capital gain. It's followed closely by the removal of the low tax rate of 21 per cent on corporate earnings up to $35,000. These will now be taxed at 50 per cent, with some relief to closely held small business corporations.

That there would be no change in federal manufacturer's sales tax was expected. And since the 1968 budget introduced new estate and gift taxes a la Carter, the White Paper ignores them essentially, except in the capital gains tax on gifts and the deferred capital gains tax on inheritances.

The increases in personal exemptions will produce no complaints, and the allowance of a maximum $150 per year deduction to employees for the cost of earning their income, though somewhat parsimonious, is at least a start on clearing up this inequity to working people of all income levels. More generous than expected is the $500 per child deduction given in respect of child care costs for working mothers.

Middle management will complain mightily about the lost deduction for club dues and entertainment expenses, and New Democrats everywhere will find their forum on the plan to tax unemployment insurance benefits, even though the contributions will be deductible.

There will be some gratitude on the part of families where husband, wife and children all have independent earnings. The Carter plan to lump all their income at higher tax rates was rejected. However, the White Paper leaves open the family unit concept for later consideration.

Western grain dealers will cheer the decision to tax cooperatives in a way which brings them closer tax-wise to their competitors.

The new taxes on investment income of clubs and non-profit organizations such as unions, will produce howls, as will the taxation of scholarships, and restrict the advantages currently enjoyed by pension plans.

The capital gains tax, with all of its intricacies, requires detailed analysis before a judgment can be made. Perhaps it will be labelled a tax on inflation and a disincentive for regional development, but if implemented in its present form, it will be a bonanza for the legal accounting and appraisal professions.

Military Victory Eludes Nigerians

Biafrans Fight on Against Overwhelming Odds

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

OWERRI, Biafra (AP) — The secessionist Nigerian area called Biafra is on its knees—starving, destitute and demoralized, but far from defeated.

The remarkable resilience and ingenuity of the Ibo people, Biafra's majority tribe, has kept up the fight for independence from Nigeria for more than 2½ years despite seemingly overwhelming odds.

Completely cut off from the outside world except for a fragile, dead-of-night airlift, reduced to barely one-eighth of its original area, cheated with millions of starving refugees and faced by diplomatic hostility, Biafra's existence defies all logic.

Biafra is surrounded on all sides by Nigerian federal forces with unchallenged superiority of numbers and firepower, but has held its own for the last 11 months and even regained some territory.

The Biafran leader, Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu, says military victory has become impossible for the federal forces. He has offered unconditional peace talks and hinted that he may be willing to renounce some aspects of national sovereignty—provided the security of Biafra's people can be assured.

Misunderstanding and relief officials in close contact with the population say many Biafrans are beginning to question Ojukwu's personal leadership but remain united in their refusal to return to Nigerian rule.

"They still fear terrible things would happen if the Nigerians took over," said an Irish priest with 30 years' experience among the Ibo people.

"Their morale is at a low ebb because of hunger, homelessness, death and degradation, but they still believe in Biafra, almost as a religion."

Biafra, originally all of the old Nigeria's Eastern Region, is reduced to an area 150 miles wide, as it narrowest, barely 20.

Some 4,500,000 persons lived in the present enclave before the war began in 1967. Refugees fleeing from federal troops have doubled the population of what was already Nigeria's most densely inhabited area.

In contested areas, no crops have been planted. Hundreds are dying of starvation-linked diseases every day in squalid refugee camps, and isolated bush villages.

The international relief airlift, denounced as illegal by the federal government, brings in an average of 140 tons of protein-rich food every night.

Biafrans are returning to their remote villages to search for quest for nourishment. Rats and snakes are hunted for food. Shattered families hide area all that remain of insect colonies devoured alive.

The troops live off the land wherever they are stationed, aggravating the food shortage for the civilian population.

Adolescent boys struck mute by shellshock live by scavenging. Their voices reduced to a high-pitched gibberish, they communicate by scratching words on the ground with a stick.

Army camps and checkpoints are besieged by prostitutes whose well-fed appearance and new clothes make them conspicuous amid the destitute civilian population.

Biafran officials attribute the accessibility of the area's rural largely to the ingenuity of what they call "Biafra's scientists."

Inventiveness has helped overcome many shortages. Soap is made from muddy lumps of palm oil mixed with salt. Bicycle tires are unobtainable—so worn tires, are sewn up with strips of canvas and stuffed with grass. Some Biafrans claim the grass gives them a better ride than air-filled inner tubes.

Drugs Enslave Young, Can Kill: Expert

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Guest speaker, at last night's meeting of the North Marysburg Home and School Association was Michael Mahoney, a research technician at the addiction unit of Queen's University.

Mr. Mahoney spent more than 12 years on Montreal's skid row, working with drug addicts. Now a counsellor with drug addicts in Kingston, Mr. Mahoney forcefully condemned the legalization of marijuana during his address last night.

"I don't know how much experience you've had with the 'drug scene' here," he said, "but in the last two-and-one-half to three years drug usage has spread rapidly.

"There is speculation that the drug trade is a highly organized business aimed at enslaving young people to do something that can ruin their lives and possibly kill them," commented Mr. Mahoney.

He remarked it was unfortunate that those who advocated legalization of marijuana were heard by society and stated that it could take from three to 10 years on the researcher's part to determine whether a reat it is harmful.

The speaker pointed out that studies undertaken in places where the drug has been widely used showed that its users often suffered from malnutrition, apathy and a susceptibility to tuberculosis.

"My question," said the speaker, "is why do young people feel the need for a crutch or a stimulant in their formative years, mentally and physically." The fact we should remember is that, "some very knowledgeable scientists once said DDT was harmless. Thalidomide was also once called a wonderful discovery for expectant mothers. Cyclamate was another harmless and beneficial substance.

"We should slow down before taking the opinions of these revered and eminent gentlemen," observed Mr. Mahoney.

Explaining the danger of marijuana, he described the experiences often encountered by its users.

"The young person smoking 'grass' may not be an addict, but he has developed a habit and when his supplier can't get 'grass' and offers 'acid' (LSD) as a substitute he is liable to try it. Acid expands your mind and gives you spiritual perception — but we know that one effect is to almost split the person in two. Mr. Mahoney explained that LSD was the accidental discovery of a scientist working toward a cure for migraine headache. The scientist thought he had found something for the treatment of psychotics and the mentally unbalanced. A program was launched to prove this point but 10 years later a law was passed restricting the use of LSD except for controlled animal experiments. It was publicized, however, in trade journals and young people soon learned to manufacture the drug illicitly.

"Those who claim they can 'drop a cap of acid and make a safe trip' don't know what they are saying," stressed Mr. Mahoney.

He emphasized the LSD sold on street corners is not in controlled dosages and it is impure.

"These youngsters experimenting with it are playing with dynamite," he cautioned and added "even if it were possible for users to buy pure LSD they could not predict their trips, for no two people react to the drug in the same manner. It is possible for a user to 'freak out' or take a trip up to three years after a single dosage of LSD."

The speaker added that one ounce of pure LSD can provide psychedelic trips for 30,000 people. The impure LSD is often sold mixed with other acid. Sometimes it is mixed with concentrated bleach, a little bit of cocaine or a small quantity of heroin.

"Anyone who tries it is wide open to a life time in a mental institution," said Mr. Mahoney.

He told the gathering that for drug pushers the money is in the opiate field. For this reason the pusher promotes "acid" and heroin with his customers. If a young person receives five or six exposures to heroin he becomes an addict and the pusher realizes the advantage of making those exposures readily available.

There is a one percent total cure on heroin addicts today, according to Mr. Mahoney.

He observed that most shoplifting and petty theft are caused by youths trying to obtain money for drugs.

Asked why they feel drugs are necessary to their lives, many young persons reply, "look at society — we live under the threat of the bomb, there's the establishment we don't want to live in."

"Yes," observed Mr. Mahoney, "society is corrupt but a lot of good people are in it doing the best they can. If youth doesn't like the establishment then it should get a good education and stand up and do something about it. Youth should make sure out stupidities and evils are not repeated — this is what they were born for. The young people between 14 and 24 developing as God wishes, could be a force to turn the world upside down and make it the place it should be," he noted.

He indicated youth's greatest ally in fighting the 'drug scene' is knowledge of the facts; knowledge that pushers are using young people to make money. Self knowledge, he felt, played an important role too.

"Instead of turning out gingerbread men clutching diplomas the educational system should turn out individuals with self-knowledge and awareness of their potential," he observed. "When you function in the best of your ability you don't get hung up, that only happens when you don't know who you are and what you are supposed to be doing," he said.

Mr. Mahoney stressed what youth can achieve if "crutches" like marijuana are bypassed for clear-headed thinking and individuality.

Must Wait Until 1970 To Learn Hydro Rate

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Residents of Trenton will have to wait until early 1970 to find out if the six per cent increase in the cost of wholesale hydro power announced over the weekend by Ontario Hydro chairman George Gathercole will affect consumer rates.

Trenton Public Utilities Commission office manager Douglas Manlow suggested Tuesday morning that the Ontario Hydro move was not really a blanket increase, but one dependant upon the physical and financial situation of each municipality.

He said that a budget analysis at the end of 1969 will tell the tale because the 1970 budget will be based on the 1969 performance.

He noted that the PUC was running close to its budgeted figures for 1969 with two months left in the year and would not be far (under or over) from the projected 1969 budget.

Mr. Manlow cited depletion of the Ontario Hydro's hydraulic facilities and their replacement by more expensive thermal power plants as the primary reason for the increase.

"We've used nature for over 50 years and now that this source is diminishing and our requirements are increasing we must rely more on technology than on nature as we did in the past," he said.

Policeman Earns BA

A Belleville native, Bruce Milligan, recently became one of the few police constables in Ontario to hold a bachelor of arts degree.

When he was graduated Oct. 31 from the University of Western Ontario, his wife and four daughters, aged from 10 to 3, were on hand to witness the event.

Mr. Milligan has been doing so university more than his eldest daughter has been in school. He started working on his degree six years ago, studying as many as three subjects a year during his off duty hours.

The constable is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Milligan of Belleville, and he received his early education at Queen Victoria School, and BCI. A brother is stationed in Ottawa with the RCMP and a sister, Mrs. Spencer Lloyd, still lives in this city.

Mr. Milligan left Belleville 16 years ago to join the OPP in London, Ont., but it was 10 years before he decided to take advantage of Western University's night courses.

His future plans are undecided, but one thing is certain. He is taking at least a year's vacation from text books.

Prize Money Increased For Dairy Show Entrants

Exhibitors at the annual British Empire Dairy Show to be held in Belleville on Nov. 26 and 27 will get more money for their efforts.

Mrs. Lillian Matthews, secretary of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association which sponsors the show, said today that the prize list has been increased more than $300 over that of last year.

This year's dairy show will be held at the former Lakeland Natural Gas office on Lower Front Street, across from Duffy's service station. The cheese makers' convention sessions will again be held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

Ontario Dairy Princess, Miss Lorene Archdekin, will be in attendance both days at the convention, while Quinte area princesses, Dianne Gunning of Tweed and Dorothy Parks, Prince Edward County, will be visitors on the last day. Government dairy officials and trade people will discuss trends in the dairy industry.

Already entries for the dairy show are coming in and an attractive display of dairy products is assured. And prospects for a bigger show are indicated with entries from three new cheese makers already having been received.

Mystery Item Not Bomb

MINDEN (Staff) — A metal object found Sunday evening near the shore of a lake by a hunter was not a bomb, the Minden detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police reported Monday.

Two experts from the Armaments Division of CFB Trenton investigated the incident in this community 45 miles north of Lindsay.

They reported the object was a spent JATO tube (Jet Assist Take Off) used for thrust by heavily loaded aircraft taking off on a short runway.

The object was believed to have been jettisoned about 1964 and was found about 100 yards from the shore of a lake near here. The OPP reported that it is a common practice for planes to dump these used cylinders into lakes.

City Man Hurt In Crash

TWEED (Special) — Fred W. McGrath, 39-year-old Inesmore man, is in Belleville General Hospital with head injuries suffered when his car went through a barricade and crashed into a culvert at a Highway 7 construction site Monday night.

Damage to the car amounted to approximately $300.

The culvert which Mr. McGrath crashed into was the same one just east of Marmora which a car with a Trenton family of eight struck about a week ago.

CFB Trenton Search Team Standing By

TRENTON (Staff) — The Search and Rescue Unit at CFB Trenton is standing by in case there is further need for their services in the hunt for a light plane missing in the Gananoque area.

The ground search by Ontario Provincial Police continues, and skin divers searched the waters of the St. Lawrence River just south of Gananoque on Monday.

The single engine Champion aircraft disappeared while on a two-hour flight from Kingston to Bainsville near the Quebec border Monday, Nov. 3. Aboard the plane were Paul Dubois and Pierre Gladu both of Montreal.

Jean Gladu of Montreal, father of one of the missing men, has put up a $5,000 reward for anyone who finds his son alive or $2,000 for his body.

Dark Christmas Cake

Get into the Christmas spirit by making your fruit cakes now. This year's recipe is from Newfoundland and is dark, rich and moist. Mary Moore says to wrap it well and store it in the refrigerator until the holiday guests arrive.

Yule Fruit Cake Newfoundland Style

By MARY MOORE

A great weight seems to be lifted from my shoulders as soon as a decision has been made after testing our annual fruit cakes. Today I feel lifted because all tasters agreed on this fruit cake which has a most unorthodox mixing method. With only some slight changes by me this recipe came from a friend of Eleanor McKims', Eleaner has a program on CBC-TV in St. John's Newfoundland.

1969 CHRISTMAS FRUIT CAKE NEWFOUNDLAND STYLE (5¼lb.: 6 lbs.)

15 or 16-ozs. currants (depending on package size available)
1 lb. seedless raisins
1 cup mixed fruit-cake fruits packed (approximately ¼ lb.)
1 cup red glace cherries, packed. (approximately ½ lb.)
1 cup whole pecans (about 4 ozs.)
2½ cups warm water
2¼ cups granulated sugar
½ lb. butter
½ lb. margarine
1 tsp. mace (or nutmeg)
1 tsp. cloves
1 tsp. allspice
½ tsp. salt
3¼ cups stirred but not sifted all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking soda
2 tsps. baking powder
3 large eggs

Into large pot measure the fruits, nuts, water, sugar, butter, margarine, spices and salt. Bring to boil, stirring often, and boil 1 min.. Cool. Sift together the flour, baking soda and baking powder and stir in. Add eggs and stir until perfectly blended. Batter is quite wet.

Line three average - sized loaf pans (8 x 4 x 2½" approximately) with four thicknesses wax paper and butter top sheet. Ladle this moist cake batter into prepared pans. Bake at 275 deg. Fahr. 3¼ to 3½ hrs. with waterpan below in oven throughout the baking period. Top of cake may be a little tacky to touch when removed from oven but dries out. Let cake stand in pans until cool, then turn out on cake rack. Wrap well in triple plastic bags and store in refrigerator. Make the cakes now and store until holiday time. Before slicing be sure cakes are chilled.

I hope and think you will like this rich moist dark cake from Newfoundland.

Successful Living

Men Now Choose Brainy Wives

By DORIS CLARK

New Trend: Women are no longer picked for marriage because they are beautiful and dumb, but for being beautiful and brainy.

Good news, Isn't it? Men are getting to know that they want companions to talk to, think things through with. The right woman can mean the difference between a man's success and failure. None of us knows just how much the president of an industry or the leader of a cause depends on the support he gets from "the little lady back home".

I might add that the intelligent woman can be attractive as well, these days. It's her own fault if she isn't.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am prompted to write regarding your reply to "Depressed." Many years have passed since I was 21, but had I reached out for help at that age, my letter would have been similar to hers.

I was wondering, Doris, if you could be underestimating "Depressed's" need for help, as your reply intimates that all she need do is think of others, but I was too much of a problem to myself and worried that I was making others feel uncomfortable to a point that made normal communication with others impossible.

At the age of 24 I could cope no longer and tried (almost successfully) to take my life. After I recovered physically, the psychiatric help that followed made life much more tolerable.

I think for 'Depressed' to have such a poor opinion of herself, it is possible that someone close, perhaps a neurotic parent, planted the seeds of self-doubt at a young age, and possibly help now from a trained counsellor could make her future more fruitful. — Flashback in 24

Dear Flashback: Thank you on behalf of all self-doubting people. Some help in understanding what happened, "way back when" is certainly useful for anyone who feels she is making a mess of things at 18.

But I didn't just say, "Think about others", did I? I suggested she focus the peeved parents with an air-clearing session; then proceed to right the wrong — whatever it was. I also added personal comments which were supposed to make her feel that nobody else is perfect either.

If, indeed, she has gone down under many long years of belittling, she does need support from a wise adult who can help her get a grip on a little self-confidence. Your experience may be the very thing she needs to read about.

* * *

Dear Doris: We find it hard to get games that everyone can take part in.

One we used recently was about "Knowing Your Seeds". We Scotch-taped several seeds on nutsbered cards and placed them around the room — and then had the contestants identify them.

It was amazing how many weren't sure of the different kinds, even though they handled and planted them each year. — Garden Game

Dear Garden Game: And then the booby prize could be a seed catalogue! Sounds like fun.

Club Activities

HARMONY STUDIO CLUB

The Harmony Studio Club held its first meeting of the season on Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. E. Veley.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. Veley and she extended a warm welcome to the "Annual Congratulations Night" followed by a few announcements.

The music for the evening's program consisted of piano solos by Lori May, Lynn Walton, Linda Noakes and Sheryle Cretney.

The highlight of the night was the presentation by Mrs. Veley of congratulations cards to those students who obtained the highest mark in each grade in the June Conservatory examination. The recipients were as follows: piano: grade 4, Helen Keskula; grade 5, Mary Tsichlas; grade 6, Ann MacGregor; grade 7, Debra Grass and Beverly Lewis (tied); grade 8, Carolyn Lewis and grade 9, John Hutchinson. Theory was won by Lewis Scott, grade 1; grade 2, Debra Grass; grade 3 (harmony), Linda Noakes; grade 4 (harmony), Sheryle Cretney and grade 5 (counter point), Mrs. B. Walton.

Mrs. Veley presented all successful students with their certificates at this time as well.

The annual congratulations cake, honoring the grade 8 class each year was cut. Carolyn Lewis being the only graduate.

Refreshments were afterwards served.

QUINTE INTERNATIONAL CLUB

The Quinte International Club held its monthly meeting at the Family Y on Nov. 8, 1969.

Mr. Ross Jeffries, the only member of the club, who is a native of New Zealand, spoke briefly on the history and geography of the tri - Islands. He followed his remarks by showing beautiful slides taken on a visit to his native country in 1964. These were of particular interest as they showed a number of personal ventures enjoyed by the residents of his family's region of the South Island.

The members showed their appreciation and interest by the many questions they asked regarding population, industry, trade, Maori peoples and sports.

Mrs. Jeffries displayed artifacts, stamps, coins, quality pictorials and books of New Zealand.

The members enjoyed conversation over coffee. Mrs. Jeffries' special treat was "Moonshine Biffs", a New Zealand delicacy.

'UNKIND MYTH'

VICTORIA (CP) — Those jokes about women drivers are based on an "unkind myth," says John Ralel, manager of Victoria's branch of the British Columbia Automobile Association. He says a United States study shows women between 16 and 25 are better drivers than any other age group of either sex.

Maxi-coat Fad Popular in the West

SASKATOON (CP) — Despite predictions that the maxi-coat wouldn't be popular in Western Canada, it is currently the hottest item—or perhaps one should say warmest item—in women's wear sales in the Prairie provinces.

One woman who has just purchased a maxi said she decided she was going to keep warm this winter. "and this is the answer."

Another purchaser said she is in favor of short skirts, but she, too, wanted to keep warm.

"And the long coat is the practical answer," she said. "It's better than high boots and cold knees."

Women's wear buyers in Saskatoon, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Regina report unexpected numbers of women are buying the long coats. Calgarians are apparently responding more conservatively, a survey showed.

"When they start to wear them on the street, I think the maxi will sell very quickly," an Edmonton buyer said. "Funny, but once you see them worn you get to like the look."

In other years, new fashions have been slow to catch on in Western Canada cities, with styles sometimes two years behind Montreal and Toronto.

Another Edmonton buyer said perhaps the quick interest in the maxi-coat was because it is practical in the Prairie climate.

"Although you don't often associate women's fashions with practicability," he added.

He said it might be that long winter coats would be a lasting fashion, just as women's high boots have become.

Boots of a comfortable and practical winter length have established themselves in the market, he said. "Not the high, high boots, but those between two and four inches below the knee."

Most of the buyers had plenty of comments on the new style, but most declined to be named.

One buyer at a Saskatoon department store said he had just placed an order for 30 more maxi-coats in a wide range of styles and fabrics. The first small order was sold out.

Mrs. C. D. Heath, assistant buyer for the Hudson's Bay Co. in Edmonton, said their coat department has been doing a fantastic business. They brought in a small test order, which sold out almost immediately, and have placed large orders twice since then.

Mrs. Heath says the coats are selling mainly to young women, but that a number of women in their 30s and 40s are buying them as well.

"The older women are buying the maxi as a second coat," Mrs. Heath said. "School girls and college girls are buying it as the one-and-only winter coat."

Another Edmonton buyer reported that his department store was selling them, although not many are seen on the streets yet.

He said women might accept the long coats for winter without having any major change in skirt length but continue to wear short, comfortable skirts on dresses and summer clothes.

MR. AND MRS. RONALD ERVINE

Ervine – McDermott

St. Charles Borromeo Church, Read, was the scene of the recent wedding of Anne Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent McDermott and Ronald Joseph, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ervine, Thomasburg. Rev. J. Ferguson conducted the doublering ceremony. Peter Farrel and James Tracey were acolytes.

The altar was decorated with yellow and blue mums and chrysanthemums. Organist was Dave Wilkinson and Miss May Fealey of Toronto and Ted Soule, Belleville, sang.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown of white silver metallic brocade featuring long sleeves and a nehru collar edged with French lace and an empire waist. Her train was attached to the waist and trimmed with a French rosette. The three-tier illusion shoulder-length veil featured flower buds and seed pearls scalloped with French lace. Her bouquet was American sweetheart roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Rose Marie Soule, sister of the bride, wearing a full-length royal blue brocade gown with long sleeves, rounded neckline and empire waist. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Sheila McDermott, Mrs. Ann McDermott and Miss Agnes Ervine. They wore dresses identical to that of the matron of honor. They all carried bouquets of white mums.

Best man was Harold Ervine, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Leonard Ervine, Gerald McWilliams and Douglas McDermott.

The reception was held in the parish hall. A delicious lunch was served in the dining room and the head table was decorated with a wedding cake made by the bride's mother.

The mother of the bride wore a fuchsia crimplene A-line dress with the sleeves trimmed in moss green. Her hat was green metallic with black accessories and she wore a glamelia.

The bridegroom's mother wore a blue crimplene gown and black accessories. Her flower was a glamelia as well.

For their wedding trip the bride chose a purple flannel dress and plaid coat ensemble, black accessories and she wore a gardenia.

The couple will live in Oshawa.

Ann Landers

Dad Resents Move Home by Freeloaders

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 16-year-old girl and my brother is 13. Please help us.

Our two older sisters both got divorces last year. First, Luella came home with her 2-year-old boy. Susan moved in the following month with her 3-year-old daughter. The house is big and there is an awful lot of work, especially with the two kids. Luella and Susan have always been a couple of slobs and marriage didn't improve them. My mother has given up on getting them to do anything. She says it is easier to do it herself. During the summer, my brother and I tried to give Mom a hand but since school has started, we can't help her much.

ANN LANDERS

This morning Dad got mad and announced he is putting the house up for sale. He says we are moving into an apartment and the divorcees will have to make it on their own. He says he will not allow Mom to be worked to death any longer. This means my brother and I will have to change schools and leave the kids we grew up with. We think it is unfair. Please come to the rescue. — MISS 16 and MR. 13.

* * *

DEAR MISS AND MR.: It is indeed unfair and I hope your Dad reconsiders. You and your brother should not be penalized because of your lazy sisters. Selling the house to get rid of the slobs is like using an atom bomb to get rid of mosquitoes. There are safer and saner methods — like insisting that the girls shape up or ship out.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our brilliant, handsome son is now enrolled in a small town, midwestern college, thanks to his father's bullheadedness. Sr. was determined that Jr. would go to Harvard or Yale and he asked everyone he knew to write letters to the presidents and deans. Sr. boasted he had carbons of 37 letters.

Jr. didn't make either Harvard or Yale because his pushy father overdid it. Print this please as a warning to other dads to lay off. — STAMPED.

* * *

DEAR STAM: The kind of pressure you describe is usually ignored, so it's unfair to assume that your husband ruined the boy's chances. And cheer up, Mom, Jr. might be better off in that small town college than he would have been in all that ivy.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I read the letter from the man who said all wives should be shot when they reached 40 years of age, I got so mad I actually broke out in a rash. I could have kissed you when you suggested that he save the last bullet for himself.

Please tell that rock-headed baboon there's nothing wrong with a 40-year-old woman that a 21-year-old man can't cure. I know because I am 44 and I've been blissfully married for five years to a beautiful guy who is 13 years my junior. — OKE-LA-HOMA.

* * *

DEAR OKE: Thanks for the assist. Take that and that and that you rock-headed baboon ! ! ! And do read on!

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What are the chances for happiness when the woman is 54 and the man is 30? I am a young 54, in excellent health and in love for the very first time. We are of the same nationality, same religious background and share the same interests. But the age difference bothers me. What do you say? — M.G.G.

* * *

DEAR M.: From the way my mail has been running, the man might be too old for you! I say good luck.

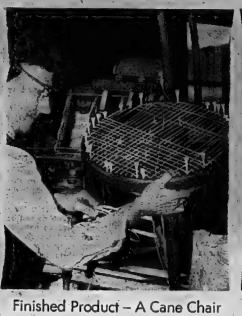
Weaving Is Not Really Complicated



Finished Product – A Cane Chair

Basket Weave Used for Benches

Caning Handicraft Taught at Recreation Centre

Beautifully woven cane and rush chairs are still popular today — at least the members who are being taught this age-old craft at the Belleville Recreation Centre think so.

Mrs. Grace Hawkins, Picton has taught this craft for four years and she explained the method and materials used. There are two types of weaving material — one is cane made from a palm called rattan. Plastic cane can be used as well since it weaves easily. However real cane is preferable for fine old furniture. The second type is artificial rush and seagrass. Mrs. Hawkings also added that the rush is gathered from Prince Edward County waters. Cattail rush is used for chair-seating but imported rush can also be bought.

The popular basket weave is used on benches and stools.

Mrs. Hawkings has taken no courses but has taught herself and made use of book aids. At present there are 12 members in her class and they are learning how to weave with both types of material.

The hall was colorfully decorated and the many guests were warmly greeted at the entrance by the president, Mrs. Helen Spencer and Mrs. Mary Fletcher of Belleville. Tickets were taken by Mrs. Doris Johnson.

The table of fancy work, cushions, various gifts and aprons was looked after by Mrs. Frances Little and Mrs. Stella Breadman. Mrs. Minnie Leinbridge and Mrs. Dorothy Ross were in charge of the candy and homebaking table, while the white elephant table and Christmas table were run by Mrs. Leah Reid and Mrs. Ethel Corby.

A draw on a poinsettia runner and teddy bear was won by Mrs. Leah Reid and Mrs. Vernon Rump.

The guests were then welcomed to the tea tables by Mrs. Kay Hill and Mrs. Jean Rump. They were assisted in serving by Mrs. Myrtle Little, Mrs. Velma Cook and Mrs. Ruth Long.

The tea table was centred with an attractive floral of bronze, golden and yellow mums, sparkling silver and gold candles and silver tea services.

Pouring tea at various intervals during the afternoon were Mrs. W. Buckley, president of Read CWL; Mrs. D. McLaren, president of Marysville CWL; Mrs. Ina Wescott and Mrs. Pearl Stratton of UCW Shannonville; Mrs. D. Hart, president of Point Anne friendship group; Mrs. W. Hendry, wife of Rev. Hendry of Deseronto parish and Mrs. Betty Brant of the reserve women's guild.

In charge of kitchen duties were Mrs. M. McKenzie and Mrs. F. Sager.

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — The American and Canadian Women's Club here, presided over by Mrs. James MacDonald, wrote to the White House asking Mrs. Richard Nixon for a favorite recipe to include in a new cook book compiled by the club. The American First Lady responded with three — for barbecued chicken, continental salad with sesame seed dressing and apricot nut-bread.

Argyll Chapter Educational Secretary Reports on Scholarship Awards

The regular monthly meeting of the Argyll Chapter IODE was held on Wednesday Nov. 4 in the Officers' Mess, Belleville Armouries.

Mrs. F. R. Allan, Regent, chaired the meeting. Mrs. J. B. Milroy read the minutes of the last meeting and Mrs. J. K. Bradford gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. H. Birkinshaw, educational secretary reported that scholarships had been presented to James Post of Nicholson College, Nancy Devine, Moira Secondary, William Mindenhall of BCIVS and Henry Kafra of Quinte Secondary.

The winner of the children's contest, held during Belleville Week, was Ann Frances MacDonald of Bayview Public School who was presented with the "Mosaic of Belleville" by Mrs. Birkenshaw, on behalf of The Argyll Chapter.

Mrs. Birkenshaw read the history of War Memorials which tells the story of work done in the past years and the contribution that has been made by the Order in the field of post-graduate study. The first War Memorial was established in 1918, a fund raised in order to perpetuate the memory of men and women who gave their lives in WWI. A fund of $474,000 was raised and wisely invested, enabling the awarding of 250 bursaries in the years 1920-41, a total expenditure of nearly $280,000. From 1951 to the close of this academic year, 334 scholars have continued their education under the First War Memorial and the scholarships alone represent an expenditure of over one-half million dollars. The Second War Memorial was set up in 1945 to provide bursaries in Canadian Universities for sons or daughters in Canada of Canadian servicemen and women of World War II and post-graduate scholarships tenable in universities in any part of the Commonwealth. The Second War Memorial remains an open fund and post graduate scholarships are attracting an ever increasing number of applicants each year. The number and value of scholarships which can be offered is solely dependent upon the support of the primary chapters, such as this order.

Mrs. G. Miller, echoes secretary, announced there will be a 50 cent increase in the magazine subscription rate in 1970 due to the increased postal rates.

Mrs. Phillips Till, services secretary, thanked the members for the knitting and sewing turned in at the meeting.

A Citizenship Court will be held on Tuesday, December 9 when 36 new Canadians will receive their citizenship papers. A tea will be held in the Officers' Mess after the ceremonies at the Court House for the new citizens and their families.

Mrs. F. Sprague read an interesting article from the Telegram entitled "Biafra Willing to Compromise".

The rummage sale which is to be held on November 1 is being convened by Mrs. R. Hennessy and all the members were requested to assist with this project.

A request was received from the Belleville Exchange for assistance for needy families at Christmas. The members voted to support this worthy cause again this year with a cash donation.

The members were asked to bring their Christmas gifts for the Canadian Mental Health Association to the next meeting. They have requested that the gifts not be wrapped and that they be new articles suitable for both men and women — no glass bottles or sharp pointed articles.

Christmas cards with stamp will again be provided for the residents at Hastings Manor, and members are reminded to bring their donations to the December meeting.

Mrs. F. Allan and Mrs. J. B. Milroy will place the wreath on the cenotaph at the Remembrance Day Service.

The senior citizens residing at Yeates Court will be entertained on Wednesday, December 3 at the December meeting, which will be in the form of a pot luck supper.

The nominating committee for the 1970 executive will be Mrs. E. F. Smith, Mrs. H. Kokash and Mrs. D. F. Riordan.

The Officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment have again asked the members of the Chapter to cater the Boxing Day Tea Dance on December 26.

Mrs. F. Stockwell and Mrs. F. Wilson were inducted as new members by the Regent Mrs. Allan, assisted by the life member — Mrs. G. Miller.

The annual Winter Fantasy Dance will be held on Saturday, Jan. 31, 1970. The orchestra has been engaged and further details will be finalized at the January meeting. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Virginia Balmer's group.

Mother Says Child Hexed

GILLINGHAM, England (AP) — A quiet seaside home has become a residence of fear, where a three-year-old girl contends in apparent rage at the sight of a crucifix.

The baby has been taken over by a malignant spirit, says her mother, Christine Adams. A supernatural presence has possessed the girl and the modest, terraced house in this Kent coast town.

The terror began a year ago, said Mrs. Adams, when lights flickered on and off, furniture moved, closed doors opened, ash trays tumbled off tables and warm rooms suddenly became icily cold.

"Most frightening of all, though, was the transformation of Carol," she said. The child began holding conversations with another person, using words no child of her age could know, sometimes answering herself in another adult voice.

"Sometimes we could hear somebody singing—it sounded like a lullaby—while she was talking at the same time," the mother said.

She and her husband placed a wooden cross in their living room in an attempt to combat the presence.

"When Carol went near the cross her face contorted," Mrs. Adams, 27, recalled. "She would bunch up her fingers into claws and bare her teeth. It was frightening."

Neighbor Marjorie English told of the day she saw Carol hanging out an upstairs window.

"I rushed next door to tell her mother but she told me it was impossible—the windows were locked and nailed down. When Mr. Adams got home he checked and the windows could not be opened."

She added: "I have always laughed at this sort of thing. But I have seen too much."

HEARD NOISES

Mrs. English's son Graham, 17, said he and Mrs. Adams heard noises from Carol's room one night and they both went upstairs to investigate. The child was "stuffed right inside a pillow case."

"We got her out and carried her downstairs but when we went back a few minutes later, we found the cot had been remade and the pillowcase, which had been thrown aside, was back on the pillow."

Said Mrs. Adams: "I am convinced a supernatural presence has taken over the house and is appearing through Carol."

She summoned a medium, Elizabeth Lavelle, to help.

"We did not see anything but we did sense undesirable influences," she said. "A spirit entity was using this child."

Nixon's Backers Air Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans honored their war dead Tuesday and demonstrations of support for President Nixon's Vietnam policy and preparations for protests against the U.S. course in that latest of conflicts.

Those who back the administration's Vietnam position seized on Veterans Day to try to signify that there is in fact a "great, silent majority" just as Nixon said in a Nov. 3 speech.

The date, which marked the end of fighting in the First World War in 1918, was observed as Armistice Day until 1954. For the last 15 years it has been Veterans Day, a salute to American veterans of all wars.

Twenty Years After Report, Selective Price Curbs Possible

OTTAWA (CP) — Twenty years ago, a royal commission examining post-war inflation recommended against using price and wage controls as a general peacetime policy.

It said, however, that selective price controls might be useful "in exceptional cases."

Today, there is talk in Ottawa of the possibility such controls being imposed in a constitutional way can be found to give them teeth. In 1919, a special peacetime price control board was declared beyond federal powers by the privy council in London.

The 1949 royal commission on prices headed by Professor C. A. Curtis, now 70 and then in the economics department of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., carried on the work of a Commons committee established to look into a major increase in the price of steel.

Steel price increases once again have launched an inquiry, this time by the prices and incomes commission headed by Dr. John Young, former head of economics at the University of British Columbia.

Like the government's moves to dull the thrust of inflation, the inquiry in part at least appears aimed at "talking down" the psychology of inflation—stimulating public concern about erosion of the dollar's purchasing power.

The parliamentary and Curtis commission inquiry 20 years ago, followed a dictum by the late W. L. Mackenzie King when, as prime minister, he declared that the cold light of public inquiry should shine into the factors prompting the steel companies to raise their prices.

Today's inquiry by the prices and incomes commission is being carried on privately.

The Curtis report released in 1949 said publicity can have an important influence on business generally, "through exposing the occasional circumstances of high pricing, profiteering and restrictive practices."

In its general conclusions, the commission said governments have a responsibility to use their taxing, spending, credit control and money supply policies to moderate economic swings and fight excessive rises in prices. But governments could not do the whole job alone.

"Government in a democracy cannot move too far ahead of public opinion," the report said. "It is idle to talk about the responsibilities of government in connection with economic stability if the necessary action to achieve or maintain that stability is not acceptable to the community.

"Another important consideration is that, in our view, general price control should not be relied upon as an important instrument for stabilizing prices in peacetime. . . .

"Selective price controls may be useful in exceptional cases. Price control in any form, however, is no substitute for action designed to bring overall demand into line with over-all supply. It disguises inflation. It does not remove the cause of the trouble."

John Kenneth Galbraith, Canadian-born Harvard University economist and author, recently told the Commons finance committee he believes selective price and wage controls now are necessary and would work to dampen current inflation fires. He urged Canada to adopt such measures now, making it easier for the United States to follow suit.

Professor Galbraith proposes a start with wages and prices in the big companies and the big industries, whose actions have a pervasive effect on the economy.

He would first get the big unions to accept the principle that wage increases should not be greater than gains in the productivity of workers. Once that is established, he said, industry could be required to hold the price line.

These would be selective price controls on important sectors of the economy, vastly different from the all-embracing system of price, wage, and other controls that Canada adopted successfully during the Second World War.

Labor and management argue about whether price and wage controls must go hand-in-hand. The present labor view is that prices should be controlled and wages subject to review. Wages in fact came under some kind of control before prices did in the Second World War.

The wage controls imposed in 1941 had provision for a cost-of-living bonus. Though this was absorbed into controlled wages in 1943, in retrospect it appeared that wage control in 1941 to 1943 was not as tight as it is worked only because they were geared to prices. And prices were held firmly.

Between September, 1939, and October, 1941, when an over-all price ceiling was announced, the cost of living index rose by 15 per cent. Between November, 1941, and war's end in September, 1945, the cost of living rose by only three per cent.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"If these pills don't curb your appetite, try having your husband do the cooking for a few days."

This Beer Deliveryman Is Unhappy

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Megan, 67, is thirsty.

He bought 24 pints of beer Monday night and headed home through a laneway. Two men grabbed the beer.

Megan went back to the store and bought 24 more pints.

He stepped into the same laneway and the two men grabbed the case.

"Not you again" he said.

"Yes—and thanks."

Welfare Appeals Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's welfare system tells welfare recipients:

"It's a handout and, dammit man, be satisfied with it."

That is how Reuben Baetz, executive director of the Canadian Welfare Council, describes the attitudes of governments to written agreements to give welfare cases a worthwhile system of appeal against arbitrary decisions and treatment.

"Probably few welfare clients even know when appeals procedures are provided," Mr. Baetz said in an interview.

"We are going to be taking a much closer look in this—in detailed study and raise Cain about them."

Appeals procedures, required by the agreements under which the provinces entered the Canada Assistance Plan of 1966, were enacted in many cases months after the date the provinces had promised in writing.

The appeals procedures and other provisions of the agreements were intended to ensure uniform standards of service under the plan.

An elaborate appeals system came into force in Ontario last March. It involves special forms, documents, time limits and closed-door hearings.

But says Mr. Baetz, these concern decisions of the provincial welfare director. The law doesn't say how the recipient gets his case up that high on the administrative ladder.

As with other late-acting provinces, federal payments totalling more than $100,000,000 were made to Quebec under the Canada Assistance Plan, Altogether nearly $1,000,000,000 has been paid to the provinces under the Canada Assistance Plan.

Many of these illustrations are what Mr. Baetz calls "the system sitting in judgment on itself." Such instances violate the basic principle that no one should be prosecutor, judge and jury, he says.

Agreement Reached on Route to Anti-war March

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — After weeks of negotiations and accusations, the U.S. justice department and anti-war demonstration leaders finally agreed on a route for a mass march Saturday to protest the Vietnam war.

The latest conflict between the department and demonstration leaders was resolved Tuesday night when the department announced a route winding past most of the government buildings but avoiding the White House.

Richard Kliendienst, deputy attorney-general, and Walter Washington, mayor of Washington, in a statement said the route down Pennsylvania Avenue from the houses of Congress to the Washington Monument was accepted by the march leaders of the New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam.

The Saturday march, estimated to draw about 200,000 people, had worried the justice department, which decided the marchers could not parade around the White House because of possible violence. The march organizers wanted to circle the presidential residence.

However, beginning Thursday and continuing for 48 hours until the Saturday protest, a "march through the city. They will carry coffins and the names of Americans killed in Vietnam.

A permit for this march was obtained earlier.

Despite assurances from march leaders that they would ensure there would be no violences and would appoint 2,300 stewards of their own to guard the parade Saturday, Kliendiest told reporters the government has ordered 28,000 troops to be stationed around Washington for the weekend and others are waiting on the perimeter of the city. The regular Capitol police have been undergoing riot duty training or refresher courses in crowd control.

Soldier Called Best Peacekeepers

MONTREAL (CP) — The greatest service any military man can perform is to put himself out of business, Maj. Gen. A. James Tedlie said Tuesday.

"I do not know of a professional serviceman worth his salt who is not dedicated to doing away with war," he told a service club.

Gen. Tedlie, deputy chief of force development at Canadian Armed Forces headquarters, Ottawa, said the best peacekeepers "are those who understand the profession of arms, particularly those who have been bloodied in battle.

"Those who have been through the fire can describe the heat of the flame. By so doing, they try to dissuade those war-mongers who believe wars are a good thing."

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

Nearly 100 new amendments have been added to the Ontario Highway Traffic act; 70 of these are changes in penalties. Calculated to make the Act more realistic in the light of present-day conditions these changes aimed principally at "irresponsible drivers" include:

A sliding scale of fines for speeding convictions. The old speeding fines ranged between $5 and $15. Now speeders will pay $2 a mile for speeds up to nine mph over the limit, $3 a mile for speeds 10 to 19 mph over the limit; $45 a mile for speeds 30 to 29 mph over the limit and $5 a mile for going 30 mph or more over the limit. For example, if you were caught speeding at 60 mph in a 30 mph zone, you would be fined $5 per mile, or $150. The same sliding scale is now applied to the overloading of commercial vehicles. In extreme cases, this total amount to fines up to thousands of dollars.

The minimum fine for conviction of careless driving has been raised from $10 to $100. The maximum fine remains at $500.

On conviction of care less driving, a discretionary six month jail term may be imposed, compared with the old term of three months. The jail term would be in addition to, not instead of, a fine.

Drivers must now identify themselves to a police officer on demand. In the past, drivers could refuse to do so, or display their licence so quickly that it couldn't be seen properly by the policeman. All the policeman could do was issue a summons.

Two offenses have been added for which police may arrest without a warrant: failure to remain at the scene of an accident and failure of a driver to properly identify himself to a police officer. Drivers may also be arrested by policemen without warrants if the officer believes they have tampered with licence plates, obtained a driver's licence or vehicle permit after having their original plates permit suspended or are racing on the highway at traffic lights or signals.

Power of arrest has been eliminated for three other offenses: Improper position of licence plates on vehicles and failure to notify the Department of Transport of a change in vehicle's ownership or of a change in address.

The existing principle of different, stiffer penalties for second and subsequent offenses has been eliminated. It was found that the stiffer penalties were rarely invoked because of procedural complications; for example, if records of previous convictions were not obtained and produced in court for the information of the presiding judge, he would only lay a fine for the minimal amount for a first offense.

MPP Asked To Tell Schools Facts on Drugs

TORONTO (CP) — An education official Tuesday called on MPP William Newman to share any information he has concerning the use of drugs by high school students in his riding.

Mr. Newman, Progressive Conservative for Ontario South, said Monday he had been working with nine high school students who had used drugs. He said two of them had been selling LSD, hashish and speed.

G. L. Roberts, director of the Ontario County Board of Education, said his board has been investigating drug abuse and has held meetings with school, civic and medical officials.

Labrador Plane Crash Kills Eight; Brinco Loses President, Two Others

LABRADOR CITY, Nfld. (CP) — Searchers were to comb an open-pit mine area today for the bodies of eight persons killed when an executive jet aircraft crashed while attempting a landing in fog and drizzle Tuesday night.

The crash claimed the life of Donald J. McParland, 40-year-old president and chief executive officer of British Newfoundland Corp. Ltd. and president of Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp.

It was a disastrous blow to Brinco, which lost two other executives, and to allied firms, which lost another three.

The two-member crew also died.

Brinco and the other firms—Acres Canadian Bechtel of Churchill Falls and Canadian Bechtel Ltd.—are the builders of the $953,000,000 Churchill Falls hydroelectric power project.

The crash occurred at 6:33 p.m. AST when the twin-engine de Havilland aircraft was attempting an instrument landing.

But the Brinco aircraft hit what is known as the "Smallwood mine," owned by Iron Ore of Canada.

An RCMP officer, one of the first on the scene, said darkness blotted out much of the crash area, but pieces of plane were strewn over a large area—as well as bodies.

The RCMP officer said there was "no doubt" the men died upon impact. Wreckage was strewn on both the top and bottom of a 150-foot cliff.

No one saw the accident, but area residents reported a loud noise followed by a flash or fire at the scene, six miles northeast of Labrador City.

The city is about 350 miles northeast of Quebec City in a Labrador section of Newfoundland. It is about five miles from the Quebec border.

The last message from the 500-mile-per-hour de Havilland was to the control tower asking for landing instructions.

It was en route from Churchill Falls, Nfld., usually a half-hour flight over the 140-mile distance.

The crash will be investigated, starting today, by department of transport officials from Moncton, N.B., and Ottawa.

The other dead:

—Eric G. Lambert, vice-president of finance for Brinco and Churchill Falls.

—John Lethbridge, executive assistant to Mr. McParland.

—Fred E. Ressegieu, general manager of Acres Canadian Bechtel of Churchill Falls and vice-president of Canadian Bechtel Ltd.

—J. Herbert Jackson, assistant general manager of Acres Canadian Bechtel and a vice-president of Canadian Bechtel Ltd.

—Arthur J. Cahtle, assistant general manager of construction for Acres Canadian Bechtel at Churchill Falls.

The crew were pilot Jack McLeod and co-pilot Robin Elley, both employed by Atlantic Aviation of Canada Ltd. in Montreal.

The de Havilland was carrying Mr. McParland on a whirlwind speaking tour of the lower St. Lawrence region, then north to Labrador.

In Montreal speech Monday he described the federal white paper on tax reform as a "great disappointment."

He was especially critical of proposals to reduce exploration and development incentives in mining and other resource industries.

He was a successor this year to Donald Gordon; the first Brinco president to die in office and the former head of Canadian National Railways.

A college graduate in mechanical engineering, the son of a North Bay, Ont., insurance agent was married with four children and made his home in Montreal.

Mr. Cantle, formerly of Toronto, is married with three children and worked for Foundation Co. of Canada. He also had been an engineer on the Bale d'Espoir, Nfld., power development.

Mr. Jackson, also formerly of Toronto, is a former senior engineer with Ontario Hydro.

Mr. Lambert was carrying out much of the groundwork in arranging sale of mortgage bonds, expected to provide up to $1,000,000 in excess of the estimated cost of the Churchill Falls project upon its completion in 1976.

Sam Finds A New Home

Sam, a 7-year-old hippo weighing 1,780 pounds, has his teeth brushed by his former owner Donald Hochleutner of Norwalk, Calif. Hochleutner thought he could exhibit Sam and make money, but it ended up with Sam just costing a lot of money. Sam was sold to John Barber of Bakersfield, Calif., for an undisclosed amount. Barber is going to donate him to a zoo in Bakersfield. (AP Photo)

Churchill Falls Project Crippled By Key Deaths

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Newfoundland government showed concern today for Labrador's $950,000,000 Churchill Falls power project after Tuesday night's plane crash that killed six key men behind the massive development.

Donald J. McParland, 40, president and chief executive officer of the British Newfoundland Corp. and its subsidiary Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp., died with five high-ranking colleagues and two crew members when the company's executive jet crashed.

The plane crashed six miles northwest of Labrador City, Nfld., near the Quebec border in Newfoundland's northern mainland territory.

Education Minister Fred Rowe, filling in for Premier Joseph Smallwood who was reported en route here from an undisclosed vacation site, said the crash was "one of the most serious blows that could have happened."

Dr. Rowe said the loss of Mr. McParland was enough by itself to create large problems.

But also lost was "the tremendous amount of knowledge carried in the heads" of Fred E. Ressegieu, the project's chief engineer, and Eric G. Lambert, vice-president of finance for Brinco and Churchill Falls.

Mr. Ressegieu was general manager of Acres Canadian Bechtel of Churchill Falls and vice-president of Canadian Bechtel Ltd.

Mr. Lambert was carrying out much of the groundwork in arranging sale of mortgage bonds, expected to provide up to $1,000,000 in excess of the estimated cost of the project by its completion in 1976.

Initial power from the 7,000,000 horsepower development will be available in 1972.

Dr. Rowe said the loss of the other officials could be almost as serious.

Mr. McParland's executive assistant, John Lethbridge, died in the crash along with J. Herbert Jackson, assistant general manager of Acres Canadian Bechtel, prime contractor for much of the engineering and building, and Arthur J. Cantle, the company's assistant manager of construction at Churchill Falls.

Mr. McParland was the second Brinco president to die in office.

He succeeded Donald Gordon who died May 4.

Dr. Rowe said Mr. McParland had done valuable work while serving under Mr. Gordon as president of the Churchill Falls Corp., a Brinco subsidiary created to build and operate the project.

Dr. Rowe said other good men would be available but the dead would "not be easy to replace."

A big hurdle was passed in May when Hydro-Quebec signed a $5,000,000,000 contract to buy power with a 25-year renewal of the contract automatically scheduled for the year 2016.

About 84 per cent of the power will be sold to Quebec.

A Line-up of Baton-twirling Talent

Y Grooms Mini - Majorettes

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

A parade just wouldn't be a parade if it weren't for the high - stepping, baton twirling gals who lead every one—the majorettes.

Learning to twirl a baton looks simple enough, but it takes time and of course patience. And for little girls, these things do not come easily.

But natural ability, in any situation, usually can overcome all other difficulties — as Kathy Lloyd will tell you.

Kathy is teaching more than 45 girls to twirl a baton, and apart from not teaching them all at the same time, she is enjoying herself.

The classes, which were also offered last year, have met with a healthy response from girls five to 14 years of age. They serve as an obvious outlet for the tremendous energy and initiative of children and channel them into organized, co - ordinated movements.

Kathy explained that the weekly classes are part of the YMCA membership package. But what she feels is one of the really good things about the sessions is the fact that they are open to everyone, not only Y members.

She stood still long enough to explain that she divided her 45 girls into two classes, with no reference to previous experience.

Kathy has been twirling a baton since she was five-years-old, and indications are she intends to be going strong for a few years yet.

"I began taking baton at school, found I liked it and just kept on going," was the way she explained it.

She has a number of affiliations with professional organizations, holding an advance certificate in baton which qualifies her to teach.

"I am also a member of the National Baton Twirling Association. In joining this particular group you must participate in their competitions held throughout the country." She also appeared on stage during the Ameteur Show held during Belleville Week, competing against 30 other performers.

Kathy then explained what it was like competing against 25 other top twirlers at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

"There were twirlers from Canada and the United States, and believe me, the competition was tough. I felt good when I placed sixth".

Talking about her classes, she remarked that the younger children are harder to teach, but, on the whole, things run smoothly.

"This whole thing is an experience for most of them. I suppose it is a case of becoming accustomed to it."

She has been twirling the baton for the past 10 years and isn't about to stop now. "I like being called a majorette, competing and meeting people. I enjoy teaching children — maybe I'll even make it my career", she said simply.

Fog Rolling Toward CNE Stadium

TORONTO (CP) — A heavy fog that rolled across lakeshore areas Tuesday prompted fears that Sunday's Eastern Football Conference playoff game here might suffer the same fate as the Grey Cup game of 1962.

But the weather man said the fog will disappear with the coming of cooler weather and Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders should be able to see each other on the field Sunday.

"I think we'll see the last remnants of fog disappear by said morning," meteorologist Gordon Gee predicted Monday night.

The 1962 Grey Cup between Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Winnipeg Blue Bombers played at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium here was called because of fog with nine minutes remaining. The game was completed the following day with Winnipeg defeating the Ticats 28-27.

Meanwhile, Argo coach Leo Cahill was worrying that his defensive squad's reputation for knocking out quarterbacks could work against the team in the two-game, total-point final series.

Quarterback Sonny Wade of Montreal Alouettes was injured in the last season game against Argonauts and in last Sunday's semi-final, the Ticats lost two quarterbacks. Veteran Joe Zuger was knocked unconscious but returned later in the game for punting duties and rookie John Mozel suffered an eye injury against the Argo defence.

Cahill said he was worried that league officials might be led to believe that Argos were deliberately trying to injure opposing quarterbacks.

Ed Learn, whose tackle knocked Zuger out, said:

"I still say the play was all right. I was committed before he hit the ground."

Sledge too Heavy to Fill Ottawa Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders have picked Gene Thomas to fill the halfback vacancy left by Vic Washington, injured Oct. 15 in a Canadian Football League game.

Thomas, cut earlier this year by Kansas City of the American Football League, will be in the starting backfield Sunday in Toronto as Riders open the two-game total-point Eastern Football Conference final against the Argonauts.

Leroy Sledge, a former British Columbia Lion who also tried out for the halfback position, was dropped by Riders, mainly because of his weight—about 240 pounds, Ottawa officials said.

General manager Red O'Quinn said Sledge was too heavy to be of value this late in the season but there was still a chance he would be back for another trial next year.

Washington, sidelined for the rest of the season, has sparked a raging controversy in sport circles here with recent statements that he will not play football in Canada next year despite a contract that gives Riders the right to his services for another season.

Washington has cited family problems as the basis of his desire to leave the country and return to his home in Plainfield, N.J.

Hilltops Want to Keep Their Peak

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatoon Hilltops go into the 1969 Canadian junior football championship at Ottawa Saturday looking for a repeat of last year's final when they knocked off the Sooners 27-18.

But there are differences this year—the 1969 version of the Hilltops includes seven rookies on offence—and their rookie coach was surprised when they won the western title.

Nevertheless, hopes are high. The Saskatoon club has a winning history and a habit of developing good players, as the Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference can attest.

Important names on the Roughriders' roster include Gord Barwell Ted Dushinski, Wayne Shaw, Cliff Shaw, Al Rankin and Don Seaman—all graduates of the Hilltops.

The Hilltops hope to extend the 12-year period Ontario has been without a national junior football title. The last championship club from Ontario was Toronto Parkdale Lions in 1957.

Pride and desire are prime movers for Saskatoon, says coach Dean Dickson.

"When we opened the season in August, I would have been happy if we had played competitive football. Never . . . did I expect we'd get into the Canadian championship."

His club dropped two of its first three games, both to arch-rival Regina Rams, but went on to take first place in the Manitoba-Saskatchewan Junior Football League.

They avenged those two early losses, taking Regina 23-21 in a two-game, total-point final series.

Then they bombed Edmonton Huskies 39-17 in the Alberta city for the western title, giving them a season record of eight wins and three losses.

Saturday's game against the Sooners will be televised nationally over the CBC network, starting at 2 p.m. EST.

LONDON (AP) — The whole future of the Winter Olympics will be discussed at a meeting of the International Olympic Committee in Amsterdam in May, Avery Brundage, president of the IOC, said Tuesday. "We're trying to keep commercialism out of the Winter Olympics," Brundage told a meeting of British sports writers. "Now we have the problem of ice hockey added to that of Alpine skiing. The Ice Hockey Federation plans to allow pros to compete. This is a new problem." He said that the International Ski Federation has promised certain reforms, including a sharper look at contracts between skiers and manufacturers.

Nicholson No Match for St. Peter's

Nicholson Catholic College Juniors who played only three exhibition games all season were no COSSA match yesterday for a powerful undefeated football squad from Peterborough.

St. Peter's Saints trounced Nicholson Catholic College 38-8 in the COSSA Junior 'A' championships played at Albert College.

"St. Peter's is a very strong team," said Nicholson coach Frank Farrell. "Now I know why they were undefeated all season." Included was a 18-14 win over Adam Scott, the junior "AA" Kawartha District winners.

St. Peter's got on the scoresheet first with Danny Reid's unconverted touchdown in the opening quarter.

The Saints added a safety touch in the second quarter when Nicholson's Herb Polster was trapped in the end zone and had no place to go. Randy Spencer kicked a 15 - yard field goal to round out the scoring in the first half, with St. Peter's leading 11-0.

In the third quarter Nicholson gambled on a third and one play from Peterborough's 12 - yard line. Mike Harris made the gamble pay off with an off - tackle run to put Nicholson on the scoreboard. With points a must at this stage of the game, Herb Pointer made a two-point conversion on a quarterback keeper play.

St. Peter's took command for the remaining portion of the game right from Nicholson's kick - off with a return to the 20 - yard line of Nicholson.

Mike Garvey capitalized on the big gain with a 20 - yard romp to stretch the Saints lead. Spencer made the extra point good to make it 18-8.

Later in the third quarter Danny Reid got his second touchdown of the afternoon with Randy Spencer once more kicking the convert.

The fourth quarter saw touchdowns by Mike Donnelly and Brian Cavanaugh with Spencer adding two more points with converts making the final score 38-8 in favor of St. Peter's.

Nicholson earned their berth in COSSA by beating Bowmanville High School 14-13 Thursday in the Junior A semi-final, only the fourth game they played all year since there was no Bay of Quinte 'A' League this year.

Moira Only Winners In COSSA

By GREG McLEOD
Staff Sportswriter

PETERBOROUGH — "Trojans," is the name. Remember that come the 1970 high school football season.

Yesterday Moira Secondary School's junior Trojans, outweighed considerably, showed Adam Scott Collegiate that it is not the size of the dog in the fight but vice versa.

The Trojans captured the junior "AA" portion of COSSA with a 39-27 victory over Adam Scott in Peterborough yesterday, bringing Belleville its only COSSA grid title in three tries.

"Our second half was a lot better than our first half," commented coach Gord Smith. Bill Henry really got our defensive squad stirred up at half time."

"Brian Cousins was our big ball carrier in the second half with Coulson doing the blocking for him. I don't usually pin-point any individual performances, but Don Coulson and Dave Rutherford played an excellent game both ways."

Moira got on the scoreboard first with Peter Stalkovich completing a 15-yard pass-and-run play. Dave Rutherford made the score 8-0 for Moira on a two-point conversion grab.

Adam Scott came right back on Rob Irvine's 20-yard run up the middle, and Jim Kingdon made the game 8-8 with a two-point conversion.

Halfback Brian Cousins ran an end sweep 85 yards to set up his own 10-yard romp into the end zone to put the Trojans back in front. Stalkovich's two-point catch made it 16-8.

Rob Irvine once again came back for Adam Scott with an elusive 35-yard run through Trojan tacklers for his second major. Jim Kingdon brought the Peterborough team to one point of the Trojans by kicking a convert.

Adam Scott loaded their end of the see-saw as Jim Kingdon's 10-yard off-tackle slant gave the defending COSSA champion Lions a 22-16 edge.

Bill Henry sent the Trojans back into the lead again with a 15-yard end run and quarterback Dale Parmalee ran through a broken field for two points to give Moira a 22-21 half-time advantage.

After a stern half-time lecture from coach Smith, the Trojans capped a drive of 65 yards with Dale Parmalee going over for the six-pointer. Dave Rutherford got the two after-touchdown points.

For Smith, the turning point came in the third quarter when Jim Strather managed to stretch his arms high and spiritually block an Adam Scott punt deep in Peterborough's end.

The Trojans took advantage of their field position with Cousins going around the end 10 yards to push Moira's lead to 38-21 after Tim Yohn's two-point conversion on the ground.

In the fourth quarter Rob Irvine got his third touchdown of the game on a 45-yard run around the end, but the convert attempt, and any further scoring threats were stymied by the Trojan defence.

Stan Reston blocked a punt in the Adam Scott end zone to give Moira their 39th point.

The Moira Trojans earned the right to be represented in COSSA by having a seven-game league unbeaten streak and defeating Oshawa Central in the semi-final 32-6. They were the highest scoring team in either junior or senior Bay of Quinte ranks this year, averaging nearly 50 a game.

The 27 point-total scored against them yesterday by the Lions was three more than the Trojan defence gave up in their eight previous games.

Saints Lose 34-18

Quinte Coaches Taught Lessons Well

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Quinte Secondary School football coach Jack Sisson couldn't have asked for a better pupil than Wayne Gilroy.

The former Quinte backfielder bit the hand that taught him yesterday as his Thomas A. Stewart Griffins beat Sisson's Saints for the COSSA Senior "AA" football crown.

"I guess I must have learned a little bit from Jack," Gilroy grinned after his Griffins demolished Quinte 34-18, thanks largely to an impressive aerial attack.

Halfback Peter Hoes did most of the damage, converting passes from Griffin quarterback Hoes from Griffins quarterback covering 30, 25, and 85 yards..

"We expected them to be a good passing team," commented Quinte defensive coach Rick Locke, "but not THAT good!"

The loss was the only one suffered by the Saints this season. They breezed to a 7-0 record for Bay of Quinte senior honors, and earned a COSSA berth with a nerve - rattling 8-8 win last week over Oshawa Eastside.

But the stout defence that was Quinte's hallmark couldn't cope with Stewart's pass patterns and blocking on the ground.

On the first play from scrimmage, Quinte offensive captain Tom Hicks suffered pulled leg tendons to leave a gaping hole at tackle. Later in the first half, first - string offensive guard Stan Bock joined Hein on the sidelines with facial injuries.

"Injuries hurt us, all right, but they were just too good for us today," Sisson stressed, singling out offensive lineman Doug Oddy, Brian Hennessey, end Leo Baker, and defensive stalwarts Joe Scott and Ron Guay for praise.

"Our ball carriers got us into too much trouble."

A couple of fumbles in the last quarter when they were trailing by 21-12 proved disastrous to the Saints, who had got their points on halfback Barry Burnette's first-quarter plunge, and a pair of last-quarter drives by Jim Sled.

Rob Patterson's seven - yard trot and Hoes' catch of a two-point conversion pass tied the winners off to an 8-0 lead. Burnette's major narrowed it to 8-8 before a converted 10-yard touchdown by Patterson put the Griffins ahead 15-8.

Hoes' first touchdown catch, a 30-yarder, came on the last scheduled play of the first half, and gave Stewart a 21-6 edge.

Sled's first major closed the gap to 21-12 after a scoreless third quarter, but Reilly completed a 25-yard pass to Hoes in the end zone on a series following a Quinte fumble to make the score 28-12.

Another Quinte fumble following the kickoff gave Stewart the ball on their own 25. Reilly threaded the ball through a maze of arms to Hoes who romped the remaining 85 yards.

Sled's six-yard, six-point plunge with only two minutes remaining to play was little consolation for the Saints.

"We knew they were going to be up for this game," Quinte coach Locke added, "especially with Wayne (Gilroy) being a former Quinte student."

And Away We Go!

Quinte Senior Saints' Paul McQuaid eludes sprawling Thomas A. Stewart tackler Peter Hoes as he begins a punt runback. The Peterborough team downed Quinte 34-18 yesterday in Belleville for the COSSA senior "AA" football title.

The COSSA win and the Bay, Goulding Trophy went to Thomas A. Stewart in the new Peterborough school's second year of senior football. Quinte, in senior COSSA four of the past five seasons, last won in 1966.

"We start basketball tomorrow," departed Locke.

Hawks Stretch Streak

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two streaks were extended, a third cut and a club record set Tuesday in two Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series games.

St. Catharines Black Hawks bounced Toronto Marlboros 5-1 to vault into first place in the 10-team loop and stretched their victory string to nine games, the most since they joined the league 27 years ago. Marlboros dropped out of the lead and had their own unbeaten record stopped at nine games.

At Oshawa, Peterborough Petes kept close to the top with a 5-2 win, leaving the Generals winless in 10 consecutive games.

Pierre Guite, a 17-year-old Montreal native, paced St. Catharines' 18th win against five losses with three goals. Al McDonough and Marcel Dionne, one-two in the individual scoring race, scored once each for the new leaders.

Gavin Kirk collected the only Toronto goal in the third period after the Black Hawks had built a 3-0 lead.

Marlboros defenceman Steve Durbano was a two-time loser in off-ice incidents. Durbano was penalized for hooking early in the third period. He continued to abuse referee Walt Gardner verbally and was tagged with a misconduct and game misconduct.

Hull Will Have to Adapt to New Hawk Policies: Ivan

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull has fallen victim to a few simple statistics.

The records for last season show the colorful left winger finishing with 58 goals and 49 assists scored for second place in the scoring race and the most goals ever counted by a National Hockey League player in one season.

The records also show Chicago Black Hawks finished last in the East Division with 34 wins and 23 losses.

This led general manager Tommy Ivan to the observation that "individual records do not win championships" and as a result Hull has been given the cold shoulder in his contract dispute ever since the club went into training camp.

Hull pursued his farming interests while the Hawks went through a rigorous exhibition schedule and started their first six regular-season games without a win.

The Golden Jet of hockey finally showed up in Chicago last week and said he was ready to play, but the Hawks didn't agree.

"If and when full agreement with Bobby is reached, coach Billy Reay and I will decide when Hull is in condition to be of benefit to the team and allow him to rejoin the club," Ivan said Tuesday. "From what we have seen of his skating so far, it will not be this weekend."

Ivan issued a statement explaining the Hawks' stand:

"After last year's disastrous season, it was the responsibility of myself as general manager and Billy Reay as coach, with the full approval and backing of William W. Wirtz, president of the club and all the other owners, to use our best effort to rebuild the club into championship contention.

"To accomplish these results we have changed our policies requiring players to subordinate outside activities and give hockey their full effort.

"We decided early in training camp to insert as many rookies as the club could stand and rebuild completely. Understandably, we must be patient because of their inexperience but our main concern is to get a maximum team effort with aggressive as well as defensive play."

The new strategy started earning results when the Hawks beat Montreal Canadiens 5-0 Oct. 25. After a loss to Oakland Seals they followed up with consecutive victories over Los Angeles Kings, New York Rangers, Pittsburgh Penguins and—by a 9-0 score—Toronto Maple Leafs.

"After all," said Ivan, "hockey is a team game and we learned last season that individual records do not win championships.

"I would just like to say that we do not detract from Hull's great ability as a hockey player or discount some of his spectacular efforts in the past or his contributions to the club.

"However, the Black Hawks are dedicated to bringing a championship to Chicago fans and Bobby will have to support our new policies."

Hull admitted he has learned something from "this whole silly mess."

"No matter who you are, you're always in a position where someone else can put you down."

Negotiations in the dispute which involve financial arrangements, outside Hull's four year contract were "progressing nicely", Ivan said Tuesday but are not fully ironed out.

Meanwhile, Hull said the Hawks will fine him about $17,000 for the 11 games he has missed so far and that they want to demote him to their Dallas farm club in the Central Hockey League to play himself into condition.

Geoffrion Courted to Coach Stars

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The assistant general manager and coach of New York Rangers, Bernie Geoffrion, flew here today with his wife and may wind up as coach of the Minnesota North Stars.

Wren Blair, general manager and coach of the North Stars, confirmed Tuesday holding three telephone conversations with Geoffrion concerning the Minnesota coaching slot.

Geoffrion, one of the National Hockey League's all-time greats, and his wife are house guests of the Minnesota club when the North Stars play Philadelphia Flyers tonight.

Blair emphasized that he had obtained permission of New York general manager - coach Emile Francis before conferring with Geoffrion.

"I think I can be positive in saying that no announcements one way or the other, will be forthcoming while Geoffrion and his wife are here," Blair said.

"This meeting is part of the process of our discussions with him. We want to show him this area as a place to live and raise his family.

"We'll also have a general discussion of the possibility of him taking the coaching job, but none of this implies a commitment on his part or our part."

Blair said if Geoffrion is hired as coach, it is possible he may not assume the coaching chores until later, perhaps not until the beginning of the 1970-71 season.

"We're looking at this on a long-term basis," Blair said.

"We eventually plan to hire a coach and even if we wanted to wait until next year, it's important to get the spadework done now."

Blair has said often he would rather not coach. He offered the post to Punch Imlach, former Toronto Maple Leafs general manager and coach, prior to this season but Imlach declined.

Geoffrion played most of his career for Montreal Canadiens but spent two seasons with the Rangers.

He left the NHL as its fifth highest goal scorer with 393, 11th best assist collector with 429 and eighth highest point scorer with an 822 total.

Geoffrion coached the Rangers for a half season in 1968-69 before stepping down because of an ulcer condition. He also coached Quebec Aces to two American Hockey League titles in two years, 1964-65 and 1965-66.

No Sweet Home for Aces

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jim "Obie" O'Brien exploded for five goals and one assist Tuesday as Oakville Oaks, with only a dozen players in uniform, whipped Kingston Aces 7-1 to keep third place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series.

The defeat, before 1,494 fans, was the worst on home ice for the Aces in three seasons.

In one other game Tuesday, Barrie Flyers allowed a Woodstock goal only 33 seconds after the opening faceoff but rallied to bounce the Athletics 7-1.

O'Brien's outburst sparked a five-goal rally in the second period for a 6-0 Oakville lead after 40 minutes. Frank Hincks and Mike Webb also scored for the winners, who kept one point ahead of Barrie.

Rod Graham ruined a shutout for veteran senior netminder Harold "Boat" Hurley with Kingston's only score at 11:48 of the third period.

Corby Adams, last season's OHA Senior scoring champion who last week had a trial with the Canadian National Team, led the Flyers with two goals.

Dave Ferguson, Pete Panagabko, Ray Cyr, defenceman Rick McClocklin and John McMillan all scored once for the Flyers.

Mac Westgate provided the Athletics with their early lead. Woodstock, lodged in last place in the eight-team group with only one win in nine starts, has now lost five games in succession.

Will Prince Philip Fully Recover From Foot-in-mouth Ailment?

LONDON (CP) — Prince Philip is beginning to fear that everything he says turns into a land mine.

His latest comment and his brush with reporters has added questions whether the Queen's consort will be as free and easy about his public remarks as he has been in the past.

The Queen is known to be unhappy about Philip's public airing of the royal family problems though an informant said there is no truth to published speculation that her advisers had considered attempts to squelch his United States television comment.

In that pre-recorded program, aired in North America and Britain last Sunday, Philip said the palace goes into the red next year and that the Royal Family might have to move out of Buckingham Palace into smaller premises. A palace official said later that Philip was joking about the possible move.

That led to a storm of public comment and debate in Britain on whether Parliament should provide the Queen with an immediate financial increase.

It also led to Prime Minister Wilson's announcement in the House of Commons that the Queen will be no immediate increase and that there will be no parliamentary committee set up to consider the royal purse until after the 1970 election, which would be after the 1970 or 1971 general election.

Wilson indicated there will be a deficit in the so-called civil list payment to the Queen next year and that the Queen has sufficient private funds to meet the deficit.

This has led to fresh newspaper debate whether the Queen, reported to be the world's third richest woman, should have to use her private funds to finance her state functions and administration.

From Wilson's Commons statement it was evident that the government and palace officials had engaged in a struggle over the royal financial situation months ago and that Wilson and Philip put his foot down on any immediate increase. That may have been the reason for Philip's somewhat out-of-tune remarks in the U.S.—to embarrass the Labor administration.

The impact of Philip's television interview recorded in Washington, followed by a New York TV appearance where he spoke of an abdication "rumor," have left his advisers concerned. One official said the statements were just a bit too flippant; a bit too much out of character.

This may have unsettled the prince who suddenly bulked up and insisted with two British Press Association reporters when he found they were reporting remarks he made at a Smaller Businesses Association luncheon Tuesday.

Claiming that he had not been told that reporters would be present, he demanded of one reporter: "Who are you?" and "What the hell are you doing here?"

When he saw another reporter dictating his story in a telephone booth, Philip tapped him on the shoulder and warned him that nothing he had said should be published.

The prince had maintained at the informal luncheon that smaller businesses had nothing to fear from the big international companies since most of these big companies were based on the smaller suppliers.

When the reporter argued that he had only reported Philip's innocuous remarks, the prince burst out with an angry reply, about "chaps like you" and then was grudgingly nudged to his car by officials.

Later he sent an apology to the two reporters and at an appearance at a dinner function told his listeners that he rose somewhat reluctantly, for "everything I say nowadays seems as if I trod on a land mine."

At that dinner Tuesday night, he had to enter the hotel through a rear door since he was mobbed partly in aid of the Jewish National Fund and pro-Arab demonstrators were outside the front door.

The palace said later that Philip has a large number of public engagements ahead of him and that none will be cancelled.

In the Commons, three Liberals tabled a motion congratulating Philip "on the style and manner with which he answered questions put to him on television"—apparently a reference to the U.S. broadcast.

The signatories regretted that his critics "would appear to have lost their sense of humor."

Former OFA Opponent New President

TORONTO (CP) — A onetime opponent of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture became its president Tuesday, ending sharp criticism of the federation by a spokesman for marketing boards.

Gordon Hill of Varna, president of the rival Ontario Farmers Union from 1958 to 1960, was elected over second vice-president Roy Coulter of Campbellville.

George MacLaughlin of Beaverton, chairman o fhe Ontario Milk Marketing Board, earlier told delegates the OFA's annual convention that the federation must become responsive to marketing boards or they will pull out and form their own council.

Several marketing boards were awaiting the outcome, the convention, he said, and would form their own commodity council' if communication with the OFA did not improve.

Mr. MacLaughlin cited a letter from the OFA to the milk board asking for its 1970 fees—$40,000.

"This indicated to us that the OFA thinks nothing has happened in agriculture in the last few months. It's a good thing we didn't have a vote around the table at that time on whether we would be staying in this coming year."

Other bodies seeking funds explained their requirements in person, "but not the OFA."

"It's time you came to us to explain your program and a breakdown of the expenses needed."

After Mr. Hill was elected president, Mr. MacLaughlin said he expects the federation will close the communications gap and outline what funds it needed from the commodity boards.

Mr. Hill promised to improve communications. He said the OFA can provide services the boards want if they describe them to the federation.

"It is important that the OFA do the job that the marketing boards want and if we can't do it, there is not much sense in existing."

Mr. Hill, 43, who succeeds Charles Munro of Embro, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, called on farmers during his nomination speech to form a united front for handling farm problems.

"The Ontario Federation of Agriculture is now the only provincial farm organization we have but I want to let you know to advance that a major overhaul of the structure is needed. We must become aggressive and militant."

Frank Hall of Port Burwell is first vice-president, succeeding Tom Robson of Leamington, who did not run again. Donald Matthie of Algonquin became second vice-president.

Mr. Hill was a member of the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Board after his term as OFU president.

Canadians Observe Remembrance Day

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traditional mourning services were held across the country Tuesday as Canadians remembered their war dead, but there were also suggestions that battles be forgotten and Remembrance Day be set aside to think of peace.

A couple placed an advertisement in a Toronto newspaper urging people to change Remembrance Day to World Peace Day.

A group of Toronto students said there should be no bowed heads on Remembrance Day and organized a ceremony remembering peace here.

They discarded the traditional hymns and instead sang Give Peace A Chance.

But elsewhere across Canada, the day was observed in quiet, solemnity as thousands attended church and military services, placed wreaths at cenotaphs in towns and villages across the country.

The weather fitted the occasion—dull and overcast in most provinces with rain or snow falling in places.

In Ottawa, Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener placed a wreath at the National War Memorial in honor of the 118,000 war dead after 500 regular and reserve members of the services staged a parade.

Schools were closed in Ontario and most provinces and provincial and federal employees had the day off.

Thant and Trudeau Confer on Ocean Pollution

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant has assured Prime Minister Trudeau that developing countries are generally aware of the problem of ocean pollution.

Trudeau mentioned Canada's serious concern over ocean pollution in talks with the secretary-general Tuesday, and the Canadian leader later disclosed Thant's comments before a press conference.

The prime minister came here to discuss with the secretary-general his proposal for an international regime to control ocean pollution, particularly in the Arctic.

The prime minister indicated to Thant some concern about the attitude of developing countries to the problem of sea pollution, especially as some states seemed to have no concern about industrial pollution as long as they got industries.

But he said Thant has told him that the developing countries are just as "interested as we in these problems."

Trudeau said that the UN is the obvious place to deal with an international regime. But he added that there are 18 forums here dealing with different environmental matters and that there is need for some co-ordination.

On other matters at the news conference, Trudeau said:

—and the Middle East with Thant. Canada is "extraordinarily concerned" about the nuclear arms race but encouraged that talks will begin between the Soviet Union and the United States over limitation of strategic weapons.

—Thant and Canada agree there are some reasons for "moderate optimism" about the Nigerian civil war.

—Thant was told that Canada is interested in seeing aerial hijacking ended.

—Canada is willing to discuss joining a peace force in Vietnam after the fighting ends but will not commit herself to it in advance. Canada would not go into such a force "blindly" as was the case of the present International Control Commission in Southeast Asia. Canada would view the political situation there first.

Earlier Tuesday the prime minister visited members of the Canadian consulate in New York and the Canadian mission here.

After the news conference he attended a reception given him by about 175 Canadian employees of the UN. The employees had chipped in to buy champagne to toast the prime minister.

He promised them he would see if it is possible to get them the vote in Canadian elections.

Trudeau got most of his publicity since arriving in New York Friday from two ladies he had with entertainer Barbra Streisand.

Change Amazes Experts

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The layman feels befuddled and in the dark these days, because the rate of change is so fast that he cannot possibly anticipate what is going to appear on the scene tomorrow, much less next year. And the art of social prediction is still not much past the stage of necromancy.

If it will make him feel a little less alone in this, be it disclosed that scientists and philosophers and intellectuals are just as much baffled and surprised by the genies that keep jumping out of the technological lamp as any man in any street.

I was amused the other night, while reading the new book, "Knowing and Being," a collection of essays by that brilliant thinker, Michael Polanyi. In one of the essays he mentions that he and Bertrand Russell and some other powerful minds were on a "Brains Trust" radio program in London in early 1943.

The question arose whether any practical use could be found for Einstein's famous equation about mass and energy, which had been kicking around for 40 years on a purely theoretical basis. The erudite and expert panel, individually or collectively, could think of no way in which this equation could be used in practical terms.

Just a few months later, of course, the University of Chicago developed the first atomic pile, which was the embryo of all atomic fission and fusion — and based precisely on Einstein's equation of 1904!

Nor is this by any means a singular example — it happens all the time, and it has been happening right along, even before our highly accelerated post-industrial age.

Prof. Fred Hoyle, the noted astronomer, is fond of pointing out that if we had brought together the wisest men in all the fields of medicine in 1890 and asked them to predict the most important discovery or invention that would occur in medicine in the next sixty years — not one of them would have mentioned the X-ray. (The same held for Fleming's accidental discovery of penicillin a half-century later.)

Right now, as some scientists have said, we know more about the dark side of the moon than we do about our own ocean-beds; and next week some quite unexpected invention or technique might make available wholly new sources of food and power on Einstein's equation of 1904!

Nor is this by any means a singular example — it happens all the time, and it has been happening right along, even before our highly accelerated post-industrial age.

Prof. Fred Hoyle, the noted astronomer, is fond of pointing out that if we had brought together the wisest men in all the fields of medicine in 1890

No Liberal Split On School Issue

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto mayoral candidate Stephen Clarkson said Tuesday night there is no split between his municipal Liberals and the provincial party over the issue of financial support for separate schools.

Fifteen Toronto Liberals, all elected trustees candidates, issued a policy statement Tuesday recommending the abolition of the separate school system in the city.

The 27-member Ontario Liberal caucus issued a policy statement last week recommending full public financial support of separate schools through Grade 13. Such support now ends at Grade 10.

"There is no split between provincial and city Liberals because the provincial party is talking about the short term and what we can empower will take a long time," Mr. Clarkson said.

He said he could see no conflict in his earlier statement of support for the provincial liberal position and the policy of some trustees' caucus.

Robert Nixon, Ontario Liberal leader, also denied that the two statements meant a split had developed.

Vietnam Fighting Scattered

SAIGON (AP) — Small scattered actions were reported in South Vietnam today, with 49 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese, three Americans and northern provinces and along Saigon's outer defences. This seen Americans were wounded and two are missing.

Along the central coast near Qui Nhon, a plane with eight South Korean officers on an inspection tour crashed, killing all aboard. Three of the officers were colonels who were promoted posthumously to brigadier-general.

Terrorists in Cassocks Plague Brazil

SAO PAULO (AP) — Terrorists in cassocks and priestly subversives are the latest targets of Brazil's security police.

Police informants say rebel bishops, bishops and other high Roman Catholic Church officials have been told by government security units that a growing number of priests, friars and seminary students are participating in terrorism and other activities against the military government.

Authorities believe churchmen have helped terrorists cross the Brazilian borders into Uruguay, Paraguay and Argentina. Others have acted as legmen and liaison officers between various terrorist groups, and some turn out anti-government literature.

Police in Sao Paulo have confirmed that a number of priests and friars were arrested in connection with the terrorist movement led by Communist leader Carlos Marighela, 58. He was killed in a gun battle in Sao Paulo last week after two Dominican friars, arrested previously, co-operated with police and lured him into an ambush.

Marighela's heir-apparent, Joaquim Camara Ferreira, is believed to have escaped into Uruguay with the aid of a seminary student, Carlos Alberto Christo, also known as Frei Beto.

The newspaper O Estado de Sao Paulo reported that security police raided the Christo Rei Seminary near Porto Alegre last week and found Communist literature, newspaper clippings on terrorist activities and a radio transmitter in Christo's lodgings.

Church "authorities have refused to comment on such raids against church property. They also are keeping mum about the role of men of the cloth as police informers and decoys in ambushes.

The man behind the crackdown on churchmen is believed to be Vice-President Admiral Augusto Rademaker, a hardline right-winger with a legendary hatred of communism. As navy minister before his inauguration Oct. 30, he concentrated the efforts of Brazil's navy security branch almost exclusively against militant leftists, and it was he who suggested the death penalty for subversion.

"Is this the morning meeting of department heads?"

Benson Explains Tax Reforms in Oil Country

EDMONTON (CP) — Edgar Benson, finance minister turned salesman, today moved into Canada's oil country to argue that there is justice in the federal government's proposed tax reforms.

He flew in from Ottawa through fog, freezing rain and snow to present his case.

His appearance in Edmonton and in Calgary Thursday was seen as an important facet of the government's presentation of its proposed tax reforms because the oil industry was a major critic of changes proposed by the Carter royal commission.

The Carter commission findings, presented in 1967, were the forerunners of the government recommendations, made public in a white paper last Friday.

Mr. Benson, however, in effect denies he is acting as a salesman for the proposals.

He says it is part of his program to get maximum discussion of the proposals among as many people as possible.

After Calgary and Edmonton, the minister plans to visit Winnipeg Nov. 17 and Vancouver Nov. 20 for further discussion. Then he hopes to go to Halifax next month and other centres as time permits.

Government officials say there is no special significance in the minister picking on oil country for his opening rounds.

Mr. Benson had long been expected in Alberta for a Liberal party fund-raising supper that had been unable to make it because of pressures in Ottawa.

When government officials realized his appearance could coincide with publication of the white paper, they decided to turn it into the first of what Mr. Benson says he hopes will be open forums.

Mr. Benson said Tuesday he was not surprised by any of the reaction to the white paper proposals.

He said criticism so far has come from people or groups just as had been anticipated.

He was obviously pleased, however, by the reaction of Canadian stock markets.

Buoyed by proposals to make investment in Canadian companies a more profitable dividend-paying situation, the Toronto Stock Exchange recorded its best-ever two-day advance Monday and Tuesday.

This advance came despite a proposed tax on capital gains.

The program laid on in Alberta for Mr. Benson is typical of what is hoped will be maximum exposure to the people of the recommendations of the white paper.

Today he was expected to meet with some provincial officials if time permits.

Then, in the next 24 hours, his schedule included a Chamber of Commerce lunch, a taped television interview, a flight to Calgary, a news conference and a speech at the long-awaited fund-raising supper.

Finally, before returning to Ottawa Thursday, meetings have been scheduled with the Canadian Petroleum Association and the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada.

One of the major proposals of the white paper would affect a long-cherished tax advantage of the oil industry—the 33 1-3-per-cent depletion allowance given petroleum companies on operating profits.

The white paper would have companies earning $1 in allowances by showing they have spent $3 on exploration or development.

The paper also suggested accelerated write-offs of capital costs.

Price Index Climbs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumer price index rose two tenths of a point to 126.8 in October from 126.6 in September, mainly because of higher interest rates, property taxes and rents, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The index, based on 1961 consumer prices equalling 100, was 121.4 in October last year.

Food prices eased moderately last month, with the food group index dropping to 127.8 from 128.5 in September. It was 122.9 in October last year.

Iran and Canada Talk Trade

TEHRAN (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp wound up a two-day Iranian visit Tuesday by announcing that discussions of new trade agreement between Tehran and Ottawa now are in an advanced stage of negotiation.

The Canadian minister went on to Israel Tuesday night for a three-day visit.

Sharp, received here with a cordiality traditional to this ancient country, told a farewell news conference that he had received a "very warm invitation" from the Shah of Iran for a future visit here by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The minister will convey the invitation to Trudeau together with information gleaned from discussions with the shah and other top officials of this big Middle East country.

One of the commercial pacts being worked out would bring up to date a most-favored-nation agreement reached in 1909 with the Iranians by Britain, then acting for Canada.

A second, reflecting Iran's interest in attracting Canadian investment, would guarantee

Quebec Leader of Young Canadians Says Views on Separatism Irrelevant

MONTREAL (CP) —Pierre Renaud, co-ordinator for Quebec activities of the Company of Young Canadian, says he will refuse to answer if a parliamentary committee asks him whether he is a separatist.

He sums up his attitude this way: "My personal beliefs are my own. I was hired to do a job. What should concern the MPs is whether I'm doing my job well or not."

The 26-year-old Mr. Renaud, who admits he once belonged to the Front de Liberation Quebecois, says the federal government or any other employer is violating civil liberties if it selects employees on the basis of their personal beliefs or philosophies.

A special Commons committee began investigating the Company of Young Canadians last week, in response to allegations by Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the Montreal executive committee, that it subversives operate with the Quebec CYC. committed capital against such events as any possible nationalization, although there is no suggestion that a takeover of this kind would ever occur.

Port Colborne Local Rejects Inco Offer

PORT COLBORNE, Ont. (CP) — A 1,700-member local of the steelworkers' union has rejected an International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. contract proposal already accepted by leaders of the Sudbury local.

Jim Rabinal, president of Local 6200, United Steelworkers of America, said Tuesday the local wants Inco to add another 10 cents to the proposed across-the-board increase of $3 cents an hour.

Homer Seguin, president of the 16,000-member Local 6500 at Sudbury, earlier announced his local's bargaining committee had accepted the proposed three-year contract.

Ratification of the agreement by the Sudbury membership has been held up pending acceptance of the offer by Local 6200.

Mr. Rabinal said he and three of his union officials would visit Sudbury, probably on Thursday, to try to persuade the members there to hold out longer.

He said the Port Colborne workers gave their negotiating committee the go-ahead to continue bargaining after a membership meeting Monday night.

Both locals went on strike last July 10, the date their old contract expired. The strike has meant the loss of some 120,000,000 pounds of production at Inco and has caused a worldwide shortage of nickel.

Queen's Backs Bill On Pounds

KINGSTON (CP) — The student government of Queen's University will send letters to five provincial officials, including Premier John Robarts, in support of Bill 104—a controversial bill affecting the availability of animals for research.

The decision came after a debate between Thomas Hughes, general manager of the Ontario Humane Society, and Dr. Duncan Sinclair of the university's animal care committee.

The bill requires that public pounds turn over unwanted and unclaimed animals for medical research. Dr. Sinclair said that if humane society shelters were excused from the provisions of the bill, researchers in Ontario would be short of animal subjects.

Although the bill applies to municipalities but not to humane societies, a number of municipalities have contracts with the OHS for animal collection and shelter.

Poppy Sales Earn $1,890

The coffers of the Belleville Poppy Committee are heavier by $1,890 today as a result of this year's poppy sales.

Proceeds of the poppy sale are used to provide services for needy veterans in the district.

Poppies were distributed free to the city elementary schools.

but it is expected about $340 will be realized from this source. Sales in the city secondary schools, to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind and employees in the federal building will probably total about $200.

Final figures are not available for the sale of wreaths,

Trenton Hires Town Engineer

TRENTON (Staff) — Town council approved the hiring of a qualified engineer Monday night to fill the post vacated by Eric Aldersey in December, 1967.

Appointed to the position is Arthur B. Campbell of St. Thomas. He will become commissioner of works and is expected to assume his duties on Nov. 24. His salary will be $14,500 and he will be given a $500 moving allowance.

Will Review Streets Project

TRENTON (Staff) — Arthur B. Campbell received his first specific assignment from town council Monday night even though he isn't expected to begin his job as commissioner of works until Nov. 24.

Council designated a review of the Dundas to Marmora St. reconstruction project as Campbell's first task as town engineer.

However, council previously agreed in principal to do three jobs — Dundas, Marmora and West streets reconstruction—simultaneously.

Projected cost for the Dundas to Marmora Street projects is $750,000 and it is hoped construction will start early next spring.

Mayor James MacDonald summed up the majority opinion of council when he said the three projects should be done as soon as possible and as quickly as possible and at a minimum cost.

Councillor E. M. Parker noted that money had been set aside in the capital budget for the next two years to cover the cost of all three street reconstructions.

He then suggested that the underground sewer work be completed and the first layer of asphalt be laid by next fall so that the project could be left over winter to allow completion in the spring of 1971.

However, the Department of Transport recommends that such projects be completed in stages to make sure that the sewer and water mains are properly installed and will not have to be dug up again.

The provincial commissioner of works, A. Hoornweg, said it would be more expensive to do the sewer and road work together because most contractors charge more for the sewer to cover any misjudgment in road costs. Since all three streets are major thoroughfares a small saving in money was secondary to expediting completion of the project.

A request by the firm of Damas and Smith for council's approval to proceed with the project started the discussion.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Have you ever noticed the cigarette machine in the lobby of your local hospital? It's an anachronism; like planting a slow time-bomb at a peace conference. Incongruous.

On the one hand doctors fight against the common enemy: cigarettes; on the other, we complacently allow them to be distributed to patients on the way to and from their hospital beds. Here are some interesting observations by a former patient in a State hospital:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I was a patient in a State hospital for chest diseases for a long time. What I saw there was a hopeless, endless chain for patients who were smokers.

These patients with all manner of chest diseases, were given the most expensive drugs to combat their illnesses at the taxpayer's expense. At the same time cigarette machines were available to all patients who could get to them.

For those in bed the nurses would oblige by getting them cigarettes from the machine. They'd deliver them to the bedside — to prolong the disease! But what was still more unbelievable was to see social workers provide cigarettes for those on relief.

Is this not a vicious circle? Cigarettes were banned only to those in oxygen tents.

I saw an asthma patient request and receive the only air-conditioned room on our floor because she couldn't breathe well. When the door to her room was opened the hall was so thick you could not see the patient.

I saw a patient sell her wedding ring for $5 and trade pajamas given to her for Christmas for a pack of cigarettes.

How can the medical profession condone giving a patient something to aggravate a condition for which he is being treated? — Mrs. B.

Comment: As the egg said, it beats me! Sometimes I believe we become too pious, and not practical enough, in our crusades against disease.

* * *

For Mrs. U.: It's true that gold treatment is used, and is often effective, in managing rheumatoid arthritis. But it must be given by an expert.

There are limits to how much the patient can take. Skin eruptions, kidney and blood complications are occasional side effects. For this reason the doctor keeps careful scrutiny on the patient's reaction to gold therapy.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Can you please help me solve a problem? I am 43 and the mother of eight. I have a nice home, wonderful husband and children yet have become an ice addict.

I can eat 2 to 3 trays of ice every day. I love it. My doctor ran a blood sugar test and found nothing wrong with it. I have had this longing for ice the past few years. Can you find an answer and get me of this ice kick? — Mrs. C.

Comment: Undoubtedly you have missed the previous columns in which I discussed this habit. In most cases, people who have the "ice kick" are anemic. After a few weeks of taking iron prescribed by the doctor, the craving disappears as if by magic. Look into it.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it possible* suddenly to be unable to tolerate alcohol? Once or twice a month, when my husband and I go out to dinner we have a cocktail or two. The next day I have a severe headache and my stomach feels queasy. Now however, I hesitate to drink anything containing alcohol. Unusual? — Mrs. B.

Comment: Lately, I have heard a similar complaint. First they blamed foods that might have disagreed. But self-experimentation has convinced them that they developed allergic reactions to alcohol. As in your case, the remedy was giving up liquor.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For November 13

Your birthday today: Practicality becomes the motif for the coming year. You may find you have to think for others, including some whose interests do not coincide with your own. Romantic interests take more of your time and attention for the next couple of years. Today's observations by a poetic streak, are usually restless but inclined to work it out in solitude. They tend to seek dramatic dwelling places.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Get started early and put in a full day. Close transactions, taking into consideration the latest information. Add to your savings.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Projects, new studies begun now have better prospects over the long run. If you have delayed answering correspondence, finish it!

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Investigation, search for more details seems indicated as your main approach to present potentials. Do not hesitate to travel to get what you want. Re-arrange your budget to regularly save more.

CANCER (June 21 — July 23): The relatively slow pace of today gives you and your group a chance to test a new idea. Creative enterprises thrive. Travel is easier. Compare notes with others with similar interests.

LEO (July 24 — Aug. 22): Your work demands all the extra know-how you can master. New ideas, better management are at a premium. Put everything at your disposal into it — while the chance exists.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Personal plans grainly prevail. Begin an educational series or a thorough review to update your information. Family agreements can be reached with comparatively little difficulty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Try to settle all outstanding negotiations, issues of conflict, or adjustment of claims. Home and social affairs take on a greenon, expansive mood. Visitors bring welcome news, perhaps interesting gifts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your intuition today will guide you to some practical way of improving your income with reasonable effort. Be sure to try out the idea before your enthusiasm wears off.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Discreet inquiry can bring you more enlightenment than a week's search of published reports. Your work gives you the extra chance to ask good questions. Take the quality of your sources into account.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Lay aside the chronic puzzles. And seek fresh information. You may find some long-held assumption is not valid.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 19): Confidential, special arrangements are quite feasible today. Try for permanent advantages rather short - term excesses. Re-schedule your activities to provide more chance for relaxation.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your search for knowledge is strongly rewarded. In every life trip and incident along the way there is a lesson spread out for understanding. Meditation early this evening opens the door.

Urban Renewal Backed

Downtown Merchants Offer City $5,000

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Members of the Belleville Downtown Merchants Association want the city's urban renewal study completed and are willing to put up $5,000 as the city's share of the cost.

Association president Ben Corke will make the offer to city council at the next regular meeting Monday evening.

The decision to put up $5,000 as the city's share for completion of the urban renewal study was made at a special meeting of the Downtown Merchants Association last night at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Mr. Corke told the meeting that the urban renewal study terminated by city council early in October could be completed for $18,950 — of which the city's share would be just under $5,000.

Total cost of the study was given as just under $10,000 of which more than $50,000 had already been spent. The two senior governments pay 75 per cent of the overall cost.

He thought the merchants association should go to council and say "we think you made a mistake in cancelling the study."

"The scheme would tell us where to start to go about improving the downtown," he said.

Zdenek Kvarda, member of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Committee, said it was his idea for the downtown merchants to pay the city's share to have the urban renewal study completed.

New Tank Installed

Apollo Launch May Be on Time

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — A leaking fuel tank that threatened to postpone the launching of Apollo 12 to the moon was replaced with one from another spacecraft today and prospects brightened for an on-time liftoff Friday.

"We look real good now," Paul C. Donnelly, launch operations manager, said after early-morning tests showed the new tank was in good condition.

The countdown proceeded toward the scheduled 11:22 a.m. EST launching Friday for astronauts Charles Conrad, Richard Gordon and Alan Bean.

To keep the launch from being postponed, crews had to remove the leaking tank from deep in the spaceship's innards, replace it with one taken from Apollo 13, test it and reload it.

Apollo 13 was in a hangar for launch next March.

The tank, part of the fuel cell system that produces the ship's electricity, is built like a thermos—with a vacuum acting as insulation between outer and inner walls. The leak was in the outer wall.

The tank holds 28 pounds of hydrogen, kept in a liquid state by cooling to 423 degrees below zero. There are two such tanks for hydrogen and two for oxygen in a service compartment behind the main cabin.

The space centre had experts flown in from the manufacturer's plant in Downey, Calif., to help with the tank.

The second hydrogen fuel tank on board would have been enough for the mission, Donnelly said, "but we've always lifted off with two tanks in the event we had this type of problem in flight."

While Gordon and Bean remained in crew quarters Wednesday for more study of their flight plan, Conrad was in a mission directors' meeting.

It was decided at the meeting to forgo the only other launch opportunity this month—Sunday —because the later start would move the moon-landing point 360 miles to the west. The detailed training has been for the prime site.

A prime objective of Apollo 12 is to develop pinpoint landing techniques essential for the next moon landing, Apollo 13, in the rocky highlands.

Such accuracy was not necessary on the July flight in the flat Sea of Tranquility—and Apollo 11 missed its target by four miles. The Apollo 12 target is in the Ocean of Storms, also relatively flat.

Manhattan Has Holes In Its Hull

NEW YORK (CP) — The giant U.S. oil tanker Manhattan returned here Wednesday from her voyage through the North-West Passage with two holes punched in her soft underbelly by Arctic ice.

A spokesman for Humble Oil and Refining Co., which sponsored the experiment in test the feasibility of commercial traffic by super tankers through the icebound waterways, said the damage occurred while the 115,000-ton Manhattan was undergoing tests of her icebreaking proficiency in Lancaster Sound in Baffin Bay.

He said the ruptures, which were ripped in cargo compartments called forewings—carrying only sea water—on the bottom of the vessel, were discovered by divers when the ship called at Halifax on her way home on Nov. 8.

"This ship would have never carried oil in these compartments." He said Humble was well aware of the dangers of pollution resulting from any leakage of oil into Artic waters.

Constellation Revises Plans

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Constellation Canada Company, Belleville division of Chromalloy Canada Ltd., which last summer commenced construction of a new carpet finishing plant here, has already decided to expand operations.

William J. Pettigrew, vice president and general manager of the Belleville plant, announced today that a 30,000 square foot addition for the application for the installation of back sizing and foam rubber lining equipment would be commenced immediately.

The new addition with equipment will cost between $300,000 and $500,000 and will provide employment for an additional 40 workers on a three shift basis.

The 75,000 square foot carpet dyeing and finishing plant is being erected on the south side of Dundas Street East, immediately to the east of the Union Carbide plant.

Total employment at the plant is expected to reach close to 120.

Mr. Pettigrew said the plant addition announced today was not originally planned until some time next year, but was advanced as result of customer requests.

The first phase of the carpet finishing plant, with 40,000 square feet of floor space, is now nearing completion and is expected to go into operation some time in December. Already an employee training school is being set up to train workers for operation of specialized equipment.

Depending on weather conditions the addition announced today is expected to be completed early in February.

Mr. Pettigrew emphasized that Constellation Canada Company, was not a carpet manufacturing firm, but accepted carpeting from manufacturers for finishing. The operation at the Belleville plant will be to add sizing, dye the carpeting with patterns, apply foam backing and shear the tufting.

Montreal Anti-riot Law Passed

MONTREAL (CP) — City council Wednesday night adopted a bylaw authorizing the administration to ban any public parade or demonstration judged likely to "endanger tranquility, peace or public order."

The bylaw was adopted after 5½ hours of discussion led by Mayor Jean Drapeau and Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the executive committee.

Outside the brightly floodlit city hall, about 100 demonstrators burned a copy of the bylaw in symbolic protest as more than 200 police watched.

Foes of Vietnam War Plan Protests

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thousands of black balloons will be loosed in New York City, war toys will be burned in Cedar Falls, Iowa, and protesters at Denver University say they will fly a Viet Cong flag beside the Stars and Stripes.

The largest demonstrations of the Vietnam Mobilization weekend will be in Washington, but hundreds of other protests are being organized in cities and on campuses around the U.S.

Supporters of U.S. policy in Vietnam also plan demonstrations.

Seven combat infantry veterans in Lake Charles, La., asked all veterans to join them in a 36-hour vigil at the local courthouse to demonstrate support for American fighting men in Vietnam.

Dr. Kenneth Wells, president of the Freedoms Foundation, said in Valley Forge, Pa., that President Nixon should offer a television defence of his policies featuring Ellsworth Bunker, U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, and Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander of U.S. troops in Vietnam.

Organizers of Vietnam protests in New York have invited demonstrators to Sheep Meadow in Central Park, to lie in the grass and release more than 39,000 black balloons, one for each American killed in Vietnam. Several thousand white balloons will be released, an estimate of those to die in the next year.

The organizers said they had checked with local airports to make sure the balloons would not interfere with air traffic.

At the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls, protesters said they would build a bonfire and toss war toys upon it.

Some Denver University students said they would lower the American flag to half staff at noon Friday and raise a Viet Cong flag beside it.

Protesters at the University of Minnesota scheduled a draft card turn-in ceremony.

Six Film Stars Ask Boycott of Their Films

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling it "an act of conscience" against the Vietnam war, six prominent film stars have asked the public to stage a one-day boycott of their movies Friday.

The actors—Paul Newman, Peter Fonda, Alan Arkin, Dennis Hopper, Arlo Guthrie and Jon Voight—listed the films Midnight Cowboy, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, Alice's Restaurant and Easy Rider.

A spokesman for theatre owners, who joined the stars at a news conference Wednesday, said the actors' plea was "selfish" and his industry would not be able to make up the loss.

No Matter How Radically

Appeal Must Reorganize to Survive

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Calling for a new alignment of member agencies and a different allocation of funds, Monsignor J.P. Sullivan, guest speaker at last night's United Appeal victory dinner stressed that the Appeal must find a new way of doing things.

The dinner, held at Club Canara, gathered together campaign workers, city officials and the interested public to hear the report on the 1969 campaign, and applaud its organizers.

This year's United Appeal set its objective at $130,000 and successfully collected 98 per cent or $122,000 from the Belleville community.

Looking back on this year's campaign, Monsignor Sullivan flatly stated it would be the subject of repeated scrutiny.

Despite the fact the Appeal did not reach its $130,000 goal, the Monsignor told his audience "it is less than fair to call this year's campaign a failure".

Analyzing the results, he dismissed the familiar reasons for failure as those not applying to the United Appeal situation.

Praising the enthusiastic efforts of this year's campaign chairman, Mrs. Jean Smith, he pointed out there was no lack of leadership. Nor, he added, was there a lack of publicity.

He termed this year's campaign build-up program as unsurpassed, giving laurels to the public relations and publicity chairman Ken Fleming.

He admitted that the minor sports walkathon, Belley l l e Week and certain pay-roll deduction canvasses affected by OHSIP all had varying effects on the results of the campaign.

The Monsignor emphasized however, that these were not the real reasons behind the Appeal's failure to top 100 per cent.

Prodding at the Appeal's past history of failure he said simply "it is time to say that the public is not whole-heartedly buying what we are selling — no matter how sincere the sales pitch."

"Since everyone is opposed to multiple appeals, theoretically the United Community Fund should be a success. A goal of $130,000 is not too much to expect from a community such as Belleville at the present time."

Stating bluntly that the "big umbrella idea of the fund is a myth as far as this city is concerned," he brought home the price of failure.

In failing to meet the goal set, all allocations will be cut, the Monsignor told the audience, and other sources of revenue will have to be found.

He set the problem down squarely when he said that by opening one agency that is a member of the United Appeal, all are penalized by this excuse to withhold support.

"This is a continuing problem that the directors must face in their attention in the immediate future," he said.

Many agencies go uncriticized, but there are others "which could do better on their own," he added.

"This is why the board of directors plans to re-negotiate all agency contracts for the year 1971 and the agencies have been advised to g i v e thought to this impending action."

Monsignor Sullivan pointed to the fact that the United Fund is supposed to be an association of donors. He suggested the crying need for greater participation on the part of the community in determining how money is disbursed.

Summing up, he asserted, "the United Fund must find a new way of doing things."

He advocated filling t h e gaps created by the discrepancies on the stipulation that they do not appeal to the public for additional voluntary dollars." Any financial gaps would have to be filled through other sources.

"To continue as we are is to continue to write a spotty record. To search for new solutions, no matter how radical, may be to change the script," he concluded.

Rich? Not Us Say Merchants

Belleville's downtown merchants are the wealthy self-centred group of individuals which they are made out to be.

Instead, they are a group of community - minded citizens who, with a possible few exceptions, are far from wealthy.

This was declared in no uncertain terms last night by the merchants' association president at a special meeting at which members voted to offer city council $5,000 as the municipality's share of the cost of downtown urban r e n e w a l study completed.

"I am getting a bit fed up with hearing downtown merchants are rich and drive two cars," Mr. Clarke said.

"This is only seldom true and where it is, it is the result of having worked hard and having gambled on the future of the city.

Actually, he said, It was tough for many to meet their bills on Monday morning.

Mr. Clarke said he was also tired of hearing that the downtown merchants are opposed to the proposed north-south shopping plaza.

"I am sick and tired of hearing that downtown merchants want to grasp everything in sight."

As indicative that downtown merchants are community minded, Mr. Clarke said they contributed heavily to the city's United Appeal and also to other community fund raising campaigns. This year they are spending $1,700 in additional Christmas lights so downtown area after having spent $3,500 last year.

They were also prepared to contribute to a Santa Claus parade, but said the event was impossible this year unless much more help from the community than had been received in the past.

Ireland in Election Race; Cites City Spending, Taxes

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Jack Ireland, Chamber of Commerce president, city businessman, former alderman and mayoralty candidate, is making a city hall return bid.

Mr. Ireland today announced his intention to contest a city council seat in next month's city election.

Key issue in his campaign to attract votes is the present city hall expenditure controls, his election announcement indicated.

Residential property taxes have risen annually from 36 mills in 1967 to 48 mills this year.

"If this trend continues it is conceivable that residential taxes will be doubled within five years," claimed Mr. Ireland.

Capital works programs must be carefully prepared and critically reviewed to curb "spiralling" taxes.

Mr. Ireland said Belleville's $42?-per-capita debt structure was $60 higher than 12 other comparably - sized municipalities.

"Corrective action must be initiated immediately," said Mr. Ireland. "Otherwise the cost of owning property will soon reach the level . . . beyond the reach of the average wage earner."

Text of his announcement was contained in a statement issued to reporters at a morning news conference in the Hotel Quinte.

Mr. Ireland emphasized he was seeking office as a "successful businessman of 20 years" and an alderman of wide experience.

His municipal record dates from 1958 when he first elected to councillor. In 1963 he unsuccessfully contested the mayor's office against fellow-councillor Jack Ellis.

His council committee work included public works, traffic, parks and the Belleville Industrial Commission.

Now completing his Chamber of Commerce presidency, he is a past president of the Lake Ontario Development Association, the Downtown Businessmen's A s sociation, the Belleville YMCA and the Appliance Dealers' Association of Canada.

New Firm

A still further phase of operations — continuous dyeing — is also eventually planned for the Belleville plant. Space for the requirement is being provided in the building now under construction.

Mr. Pettigrew said the pay scale for starting workers would not be below $2 per hour. As training progressed Mr. Pettigrew hoped trainees would move up in job importance, with correspondingly higher wages.

Industrial Commission chairman Ald. Gerald Joyce said that location of Constellation Canada Company here could well result in the establishment of related industry in Belleville.

Already, as a result of the company locating here, the commission has received five enquiries from carpet suppliers.

"We have two really hot prospects," he said.

To a question from Mayor J. Russell Scott, Mr. Pettigrew said he had been surprised at the calibre of labor available in Belleville. Not only did job seekers have the necessary education to train for the carpet finishing operation but also the "spunk and grit" to attempt something new.

Already arrangements have been made for the Belleville plant to finish carpeting for two of Canada's major carpet manufacturing companies.

Confidence in the city and its administration, along with it being a central location, had prompted the firm to locate in Belleville, Mr. Pettigrew said.

Late delivery of structural steel and reinforcing steel had slowed construction of the plant slightly, but also responsible for the apparent slowness was the large amount of underground work necessary for the installation of big water tanks and drainage.

The carpet finishing plant will use upwards of a million gallons of water daily, most of it taken raw from the Bay of Quinte. Prior to use the water will be processed. After use any "affected" water will be drained into the city sewer system, while the balance will be given lagoon treatment before being returned to the bay.

"We will be returning only pure water into the bay," Mr. Pettigrew assured.

Standup Debate

Mayor Russell Scott engages in debate on local government with Loyalist College students. Mayor spoke to college's municipal administration class on set up, problems of city affairs.

Says OMB Powers Should Be Reassessed

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Powers exercised by the Ontario Municipal Board should be reassessed, Mayor Russell Scott told students at Loyalist College yesterday.

"Sometimes I feel they are quite a long way from the Municipal Act that created them," he said.

This especially applied to situations where a municipal council and a planning board unanimously approved a local project, the mayor said, in an obvious reference to recent issues where private objections have resulted in OMB hearings on commercial developments in the city.

"I don't think any municipal board of quasi judges that have no direct responsibility to the people of the area should be allowed to overrule these elected representatives in their wisdom."

The mayor was answering questions during an hour-long session on local government with the college's municipal administration class.

Other issues discussed by the mayor-turned-lecturer included:

Party Politics — "I'm very much opposed to party politics in municipal elections." Municipal councils rely too heavily on operations from federal and provincial governments — which often have opposing political parties in power simultaneously. A municipal council with a political party label could jeopardize its community's progress. For instance

"I think if we'd had a Conservative council in the city of Belleville in the past two years our chances of getting the Unemployment Insurance Commission offices for Oshawa located in Belleville would be absolutely nil."

When political "ward-heelers" use municipal affairs as a "stepping stone" then a "city suffers for it."

Regional government — Canada's federal system is a form of regional government. "I don't think we need another regional government setup so that three times a year these regions would meet with the provincial government, get nowhere and go home mad." Forms of smaller metropolitan governments with planning areas more sensitive to public opinion may be the answer.

Bigger Belleville — The real Quinte area reaches from Ameliasburg Township to Stirling, from Murray Township to Shannonville.

"That's where the problems are building up. If we don't do something soon we're going to have every ditch in the country filled with sewage."

But any larger municipal area likely should retain the name Belleville, for good reason. The city has an enviable financial reputation, today able to borrow at lower interest rates than even the provincial government.

"He went on to stress that: "Town politics should be run with an eye on today and the future and not be governed strictly by what happened in the past."

"I will act as an independent councillor if elected and treat the issues as they come. I will gauge every issue on its merits, not on a preconceived opinion," he asserted.

Noting that, in his opinion, the present council was an inclusive one, Mr. Bruinix stressed the need for a strong, governing council and added "I think this is one of the most important municipal elections in many years because the people will have a chance to break the division which exists in the present council."

Recommending that the town should be run like a business, Mr. Bruinix said that he would set one day a week aside for council business in addition to the regular meetings.

"If I'm able to build a successful business from scratch in 13 years then I must be able to use these same talents for the benefit of the town," he concluded.

A native of Holland, Mr. Bruinix immigrated to Canada in 1954 and established his jewellery store in this community in February, 1955. Mr. Bruinix was unsuccessful in the 1968 election in his 17 at the Trenton municipal offices.

All candidates will have an opportunity to express their views Wed., Nov. 26 at the Trenton Community Gardens, when the Chamber of Commerce holds its annual "meet the candidates" night.

If no one else enters the mayoralty race this year's contest will be a repeat of the 1965 race when the mayor defeated Duncan McDonald by a margin of 1,574 to 971.

Mayor James MacDonald has held office for 10 consecutive years. Duncan McDonald has been a councillor for eight of the last nine years, always drawing strong support at the polls.

Remembrance Day Parade Held In Marmora

MARMORA — Remembrance Day parade in Marmora on Tuesday morning beginning at the Legion Hall was led by the color party, and followed by members of the Royal Canadian Legion No. 227, Women's Auxiliary, IODE, Guides, Brownies and Cubs. 'Last Post' and 'Reveille' were played by Tom Brooks and two minutes' silence observed by those in the parade and the many citizens attending the service.

Laying the Ontario wreath at the Memorial Building was Mrs. John Bonter. Silver Cross mother, Royal Canadian Legion wreath was placed by president William MacDonald, Marmora village by Reeve William Shannon and Marmora Township by Reeve John Wilkes. Other wreaths were placed by the Auxiliary, IODE, Local 4854, Local 1861, Marmoraton Mining Company, IOOF No. 329, Orange Lodge No. 312, firemen and Marmora merchants.

Scripture was read by Rev. W. A. McMillan, and leading in prayer was Rev. Douglas Miller.

Rev. David Saunders in his address made reference to the younger generation who knew nothing of the suffering ended by those who had lost members of families in the fight for freedom. "We can be proud to observe a Remembrance Day service," he said, "because our Canadian soldiers fought a selfless war, with no thought of personal gain. We should not only remember this date, but we teach the younger generation the reason for its celebration."

Major Percy Gray, who was in charge of the ceremonies, thanked all, on behalf of the president, William MacDonald, who had taken part, noting that Rev. Paul Ripley and Father T. G. Scanlan were holding a Remembrance service in Deloro.

Mayor Calls for Town Unity; Announces He'll Run Again

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
(Staff Reporter)

TRENTON — Mayor James MacDonald has announced he will seek re-election in the Dec. 1 municipal race.

Trenton residents are now assured of two choices in the upcoming mayoralty contest, for Duncan McDonald has already resigned his council seat and stated he will seek the mayor's position.

The mayor featured Duncan McDonald to a Remembrance Day gathering Tuesday night and made one statement regarding the election.

"I hope this election will not divide Trenton into east and west or in any other sectional manner, because Trenton as a whole comes first and foremost over anything else."

Lou Knack, president of Legion Branch 110, speaking on behalf of Legion members, stated that the Legion was not the place for politics, but asserted that "We Legion members are 100 per cent behind any candidate who is for the town as a whole, but actively oppose any candidate who tries to bring about a split between sections or groups within the town".

"We are for the town as a whole," he said.

Neither mayoralty candidate has stated his position on any of the issues in the up-coming election for which nominations will be held Monday, Nov.

Council Hopeful Would Be 'Independent'

TRENTON (Staff) — Gerrit Bruinix today announced his intention of running for town council in the Dec. 1 municipal election.

The proprietor of a local jewellery store, the 54-year-old Mr. Bruinix said: "Common sense is what we most need in this town."

Purse Stolen, Woman Collapses

A Belleville woman was taken to Belleville General Hospital after she collapsed from shock last night shortly after her purse was snatched, police reported this morning.

Miss Mary Hicks of 277 Albert Street was walking east on Victoria Avenue about 9.15 p.m. when she saw someone running down George Street very quickly.

The man grabbed her purse as he passed her and ran down George Street.

Miss Hicks collapsed from the ordeal later at 9.30 p.m.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said that the purse and its contents were recovered in a bush near the area of the incident. However, $55 was missing from the handbag.

Police are still investigating.

Getting the Picture

Got the wrong impression about a country? Then do you carry on blissfully with your misconceptions — regarding Canada, for example, as a country inhabited mainly by Eskimos and polar bears — or do you set about discovering the truth?

If you are someone like the Canadian Opera Company's tour manager, Leo Nedomansky, in this country only since April, you belong to the latter category. Vienna-born Mr. Nedomansky has an advantage over most of us though. He speaks six languages "rather well," as he told Rotarians earlier this week, and others a well an eloquent shrug made it clear he spoke them with facility also.

Then again he is well versed in the medium of communications we hear so much about these days, for he was once a hotel manager and before that, for good measure, he was in agriculture.

Anyway there was Mr. Nedomansky, speaking English with the easy composure of a man of the world. Samuel Champlain, he reminded those present, came to this area in 1615 . . . could he have known then, mused Mr. Nedomansky, that more than 300 years later there would be this city, an industrial centre and a place of culture? About the same time, at the court of the Duke of Florence, the rudiments of opera were being nursed at the prompting of philosophers and artists of the day.

Today opera is an artistic endeavor enjoyed by a much wider circle in all parts of the world. On Saturday, at Centennial secondary school, The Barber of Seville will be presented by The Canadian Opera Company, a group which Mr. Nedomansky discovered for himself, on arrival in Canada, was a "fully-fledged professional company." And this, despite his admission that in Europe, he was sorry to say, Canada "is rather unknown."

"Eskimos — I have seen one in the last seven months. Polar bears — I have not seen one yet." What type of society exists here, he went on, is unknown to the European, and his own ideas of the country similarly had been wrong.

But Mr. Nedomansky is learning fast — making it his business indeed to learn, as his absorbing address in Belleville proved. He also made it clear he has a high regard for the Canadian Opera Company which will be performing here on Saturday under the sponsorship of the Rotary Club.

Caution Urged

Of those in favor of Senate foreign relations committee hearings on the war in Vietnam, it is significant that one Democrat, at least, believes there can be no precipitate move by the U.S. to end the war "without laying the foundation for a compromise political settlement."

To withdraw in such fashion, said Senator Albert Gore of Tennessee would be "inviting the death knell of democratic processes in South Vietnam and a bloodbath of vast proportions."

He is right of course. We recall what happened when Belgium withdrew its troops from the Congo and a primitive people were suddenly catapulted into the heady realm of independence. They went on a wild rampage of looting, rape and murder against the remaining European civilian population and there followed years of political turmoil until finally a United peace force restored order.

Something of the same type of violence and disorder could be expected if the Americans were to withdraw completely. Left to their own devices the Vietnamese would have genocide on a wide scale, both north and south.

Consider also the gratuitous propaganda the anti-war demonstrators of the Western world are handing the Communists. Proof of this has been established in recent days by a secret Viet Cong document captured by Australian troops. It says the Viet Cong are under orders to launch intensive attacks Nov. 14-15 to support a planned three-day series of anti-war protests in the United States.

Whatever these demonstrations achieve, they certainly are not bringing the hostilities any closer to a halt and in fact give more aid and comfort to the Communists than to the U.S. and allied fighting men in Vietnam.

Some Are 'In' and Some Are 'Out'

PC Member Sows Seeds of Discontent in Trudeau Ranks

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — With a little politically skilful assistance from canny Maritime Conservative Lloyd Crouse, the little green-eyed monster of envy is hard at work on the Liberal benches of the Commons stirring up all kinds of trouble for Prime Minister Trudeau.

Lloyd Crouse, with one civet-ly calculated sentence, has planted this unseen — but already very apparent — Opposition "secret agent" here to irritate and stimulate the egos and ambitions and even fears of the Trudeau parliamentary troops.

He has drawn a line of political class distinction between those Liberals who are here and those still waiting impatiently outside — the prime ministerial circle of power.

There are what he called "the Trudeau elite," and how sweet it is for them!

And there are "the rest of you," he reminded them as they sat there glowering. "the others," the undistinguished "nobodies" neglected, deprived and underprivileged.

There are the "Golden Boys" of the government, and the "Joe Slobs."

It was a pity there could not be room for all in the charmed circle, he sympathized with the unlucky "outs," for never had there been so many "ins."

Making a quick head count of the Liberal members, he totalized them all with the observation that one out of every three elected in last year's federal campaign had "got it made, either in the cabinet as a minister at an annual $25,000 or as a parliamentary secretary at $22,000."

It was the "biggest ever cabinet," with 30 members, but sadly, not big enough for the whole unhappy Liberal family.

It was a wicked job Lloyd Crouse was doing.

For already there is great jealousy in the government ranks of those who still have yet to "make it" and those who "have it made."

And in the elite circle are a few increasingly uncertain who wonder how long they will be able to cling to personal power and privilege.

Unhappiest of all are the parliamentary secretaries-the MP understudies to the cabinet ministers — who are on notice from the prime minister that their goodies of privilege must sometime soon be given up so others, equally deserving, may share in the good life of power and glory.

You verily, the prime minister giveth and the prime minister taketh away.

And there was Lloyd Crouse inflaming all those burning ambitions, stimulating those aching envies, stirring up all those acids of worry and fear.

The Liberals, despite themselves, seem compelled to listen because Lloyd Crouse was usually such a reasonable man and customarily made a lot of sense.

In all his 12 years in the Commons, he had seldom been known as a needler. He was never deliberately unpleasant.

Sure, he was an excellent Opposition critic. But almost always constructive. He had never been known to cut people up for the pleasure of watching them squirm.

So maybe, you could almost see in the unhappy government members darkly thinking, maybe he Lloyd Crouse had something.

He set the stage beautifully.

There was nothing but the very best for the chosen Trudeau few — only they were not really so few any more, he said.

There was the prime minister himself, doing the best he could with 17 special assistants costing the taxpayers an annual $200,000, when the most Lester Pearson managed to spend had been a paltry $128,000, with John Diefenbaker in his prime ministerial day scrimping along on an insignificant $50,000.

But it was not just in the prime minister's office where the "good Ottawa life" was being led, recounted Lloyd Crouse.

All cabinet hands were working in luxury's lap, "in gorgeously appointed, outrageously expensive office suites."

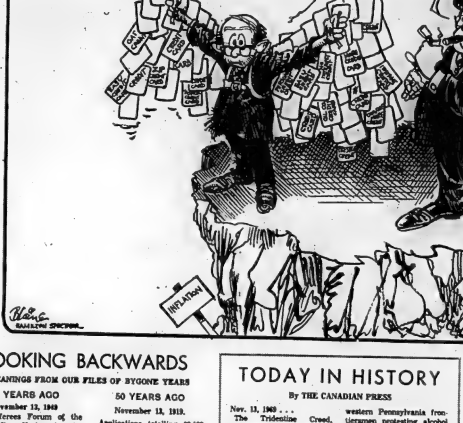
Why just look at Agriculture Minister Horace "Bud" Olson, only 15 short months ago one of those backbench "nobodies," now with nine executive and special assistants, a deputy with 12 special consultants, and two subdeputies.

And look at Consumer Affairs Minister Rex Basford — in the cabinet little more than a year — and already with seven press and public relations people to polish his image.

"What an empire - builder," grinned Lloyd Crouse.

And so it went, quietly and with such sincerity, all those among the Liberal benches, sowing discontent, envy, unrest, fear, and whole headfuls of other unhappy thoughts.

Conservative MP Lloyd Crouse may be all kinds of pleasantly constructive Opposition critic, but deadly, too.



Teens Show The Way

Montreal Gazette

Where are the students of yesteryear, who involved themselves in constructive programs?

They're still around. In fact, there seems to be more of them, and they seem to be more constructive.

A survey of the achievements of Junior Achievement of Canada, which is confined to the operations of high school groups, report that groups of 30 students apiece, formed into "companies", have learned a great deal about business at first hand during the last year by developing, and selling, such items as bookends, penholders, telephone pads and car racks. They have organized sales of various services.

In London, Ontario one of the groups of teenagers wrote, produced — and marketed — a weekly television program which achieved a 20 per cent return on investment for its supporters. In Vancouver, students group did equally well with a new type windshield wiper.

Such accomplishments are not world-shaking, and they don't compare with the dedicated work of older students in welfare missions overseas, for instance.

But they compare very favorably with the out-of-class activities of previous generations of high school students.

Walker, declared: "We are facing today a nation of pseudo-paranoics, men who cannot reason, madmen whose only goal is conquest. If this away sweeps through the entire civilization then we shall soon set each other's throats and exterminate ourselves".

A Bad Day in Court

Hamilton Spectator

Several days ago a 30-year-old man, with heart troubles, was sent to jail until the following morning because he appeared in court 15 minutes late. The man had an excuse (he was looking for a witness to help in his defence) but it wasn't sufficient to the judge.

Judges are human and therefore inconsistent. Some of them are good-natured, others aren't. A few appear in court when they are feeling fit. On occasion, we suspect, a few of them lose a fight at home and take it out on those who appear before them in court.

When the public reads about a man being sent to jail just because he appeared in court 15 minutes late (a good number of lawyers are noted for their unpunctuality — some are even referred to as "remanders"), they wonder if the judge wasn't feeling well.

Perhaps Pat Alvarez or Ann Landers would care to comment?

Not All Four-Letter Words Have Vulgar Connotations

Owen Sound Sun-Times

The four-letter word is out in the open. Novelists and playwrights, not content with the odd hell or damn to lend emphasis to their works, have taken the wraps off the whole glossary of gutter language and even the best sellers often have more than a sprinkling of the word in our English vocabulary.

The rise to prominence of the four-letter word has given the dictionary a field day with such references as, "Work is a four-letter word." And, in the opinion of Army small boys, soap and bath are four-letter words, too.

Four-letter words have always been with us, not the ones that bring shudders to the listener or the reader, but words that have vital meaning, perhaps more today than ever before.

Want and need are more than just words, and poor is the state of far too many of the world's people. But these situations can be counter-acted by a number of other four-letter words such as love and care, hope and help and give. But these words which have real meaning only when they describe what we do as much as what we say.

The four-letter words have always been with us. We just need to give more prominence to the ones that really mean something.

Quebec Language Bill Target for Dissent

Montreal La Devoir

This general outburst which paralyzed the education system, this human tidal wave which repeatedly renewed itself in the streets of Montreal, Quebec City and elsewhere, this widening support mobilized by the Front du Quebec Francais, escapes explanations of the conspiratorial type. They express the sentiment of a broad sector of the population, certainly, but one whose unity could not be the result of orders issued by a few agitators. There has developed in recent years in the field of education—among the teachers and among the students—a change of atmosphere whose consequences have been underestimated. For better or for worse, it is exploding today in the face of an astonished Quebec. Faced with this phenomenon, the wisest reaction would be to try to understand rather than to judge without examining the facts. . . .

English-speaking Quebecers have enjoyed since 1867 a most favorable linguistic system in the field of education. But this system was the expression of an unwritten tolerance on the part of the majority. It was not founded on a constitutional text or on a text of ordinary law.

Now, Bill 63 breaks new ground. It entrenches in law that which had been until now a tradition. It guarantees, for an undefined period, a legal obligation which did not exist previously.

A law like this, to be effective, needs to rest on a fairly general state of mind. Very many signs indicate that this consensus does not exist now. Mr. Bertrand will not need the test of an election. He should have at least waited to see the law in action before giving a new legal right in linguistic matters.

Wagner for Law and Order

Montreal La Presse: Claude Wagner was certainly playing the game when, in announcing his candidacy as the third contender for the leadership of the Quebec Liberal party, he insisted on the fact that in the days of perhaps a growing number of people he personifies "law and order". Since it is in this context that the former justice minister in the Lesage and Johnson cabinets would gain supporters among the public, if not among Liberal party members.

A few times during his news conference, the member of the Quebec national assembly for Verdun returned to the subject in a different way. He said: "The members of the Liberal party will have to choose from among three concepts of leadership the one which offers the surest guarantees of victory in the next general election and, above all, the best chances of victory over the forces of disorder and confusion."

The other two candidates, Pierre Laporte and Robert Bourassa, have also taken up the question of law and order dwelling upon it. There is no doubt that the direct struggle against certain forms of anarchy will constitute Mr. Wagner's principal appeal. To fight him, the opponents may conjure up the spectre of a police state, but with less effectiveness than could have been the case during the past few years.

Second Fire Hall Planned

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — Council is planning ahead for a second firehall to be situated near Carrying Place in the west end of the township.

Council last night approved the purchase of a parcel of land 150' by 150' from Bob Gobeen and Helen Bird at a cost of $1,000.

The site is close to an old rock quarry which contains an ample supply of water year-round and would be available in the event of an emergency.

In the meantime, No. 1. firehall on Rednerville Road west of Rossmore is being readied for occupancy and offi i a l opening.

Plans call for the second firehall to be a project for council to initiate next year.

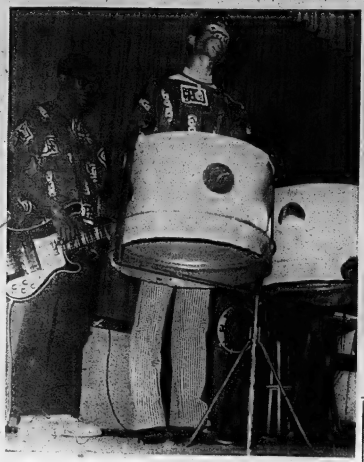
Portables Nearly All In

All portable classrooms bought this year by the Hastings County Board of Education should be installed and in use by Nov. 14.

Trustees were told at their last meeting that the installing firm had promised to have the last units — at Bird's Creek in north Hastings and Marmora Street Senior School in Trenton — ready for use by the end of this week.

Use of the portables, purchased by the board this summer to help relieve over-crowding at eight elementary and secondary schools in the county, has been delayed due to hold-ups in the erecting of the pre-fabricated units at their sites.

Portables at six sites, including Moira and Centennial Secondary schools in Belleville, were erected in September and October. The final three are expected to be installed this week.



The Sound of Steel

Caribbean Gems steel band brought sounds of sunny music to Belleville last night. The group was part of travelogue program, sponsored by Roiuf Agency which drew big crowd to Centennial Secondary School.

Donates Deer to Museum

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — The township may soon possess the nucleus for a Santa Clause parade.

Council last night heard that by this time next week the village would be able to show more authentic Christmas "trappings" than most centres in the Quinte area.

Museum curator Harry Bisdee disclosed he had been made a gift of a young deer to add to the collection of animals and birds he keeps in pens for the public to see at the museum park.

His latest acquisition, raised in captivity at the Mohawk Raceway, is arriving in about a week, he told the meeting.

He said he was looking forward to the children of the village paying more attention to the live attractions section which proved so popular for them after it was introduced in the summer.

The museum with its features — Indian artifacts found in Ameliasburg, a series of paintings by Rev. Bowen Squier depicting early scenes, a chapel and numerous memoirs — was visited by nearly 4,000 this year, almost double the number recorded in 1968, the year the building opened officially.

Also other new items of interest provided for visitors this year — a pioneer's log house and activated fountain outside on the premises—helped stimulate interest, the curator noted.

October Housing Boom Continues

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — New housing starts were on the increase in October, council learned last night.

Permits issued by the building inspector represented $123,176 in the construction of homes and additions, a considerable improvement over the preceding month.

The building inspector, in presenting his report, noted applications for permits so far this month indicated the volume of residential construction was continuing to mount with November almost half spent.

Councillors voiced intention to decide on a suitable site for waste disposal and agreed to take a look at two pieces of land in out of the way places owned by the township.

Action is necessary at this time Reeve Cunningham explained, because the City of Belleville can't be expected to continue to make its dump on the waterfront available after the current arrangement with Ameliasburg runs out in the new year. Council is hoping neighboring Murray Township accepts a proposal for temporary facilities until adequate service is worked out for township residents.

The 1968 council may be remembered longer for a serious bid to rid the municipality of car wrecks creating unsightly confusion at a number of places. The owners are to be notified by letter to clean up the messes without council having to delegate further action.

Low Industrial Assessment Concerns Township Reeve

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — Reeve George Cunningham is anxious to see industrial assessment pouring into the township coffers along with the returns from residential and farm properties.

Income from industry is next to nil at present while new homes and cottages have been going up at an ever-increasing rate throughout Ameliasburg in recent years.

It is Reeve Cunningham's opinion that the county taking the township over under the proposed regional system will have to share taxes collected from industry. It can be assumed Prince Edward or Hastings will eventually become the administrative headquarters for Ameliasburg.

Meanwhile, the township is a dormitory for personnel of industry located in Trenton, Picton and Belleville according to Mr. Cunningham.

Explaining to council last night, the reeve said people live in the township and work in nearby centres in industries whose taxes go to alleviate the tax burdens of home owners in industries are located — not Ameliasburg.

Provinces Lose Interest in Change

TORONTO (CP)—Nine of Canada's 10 provinces seem to have lost interest in constitutional change since the Confederation of Tomorrow conference held in 1967, Communications Minister Eric Kierans said Wednesday night.

Closing a debate on parliamentary democracy to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Hart House at the University of Toronto, Mr. Kierans suggested that the 1967 conference in Toronto may have been a "grandstand play."

"The only province that was co-operating was Quebec," he said.

Tax Changes Unpopular

Benson Given Cool Reception By Calgary's Oil Businessmen

CALGARY (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson tried to outline the federal government's proposals for tax reform to a group of this oil city's business elite Wednesday night—and ran into a cool reception that sometimes verged on hostility.

The session started with a joking question asking whether the minister realized the government's white paper on tax reform had, first, a red cover, and, secondly, was made public last Friday on the 52nd anniversary of Russia's Bolshevik revolution.

It was the last joke of the night, but it set the scene for the following questions as the proposed reforms were attacked on grounds they would hamper business, cripple free enterprise and destroy individual initiative.

Mr. Benson often ran into hoots of laughter as he tried to explain that the government feels the recommendations would benefit many Canadians and were winning wide support.

"It's punitive," said one business executive of the white paper after the session.

"Socialism—that's all it is, socialism," agreed another standing beside him.

The affair had been billed as a fund-raising supper for the Liberal party, with a sold-out capacity of 125 tickets at $50 each.

Party officials said, however, many of the tickets were taken up by non-party members seeking a chance to question Mr. Benson on the proposed tax reforms.

It was the second public discussion of the proposals by Mr. Benson during the day. Earlier, he had talked briefly about the white paper before an estimated 650 persons at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon in Edmonton and then handled questions from the floor for almost an hour.

His reception in Edmonton was markedly different from Calgary, with most of the question aimed at getting explanations of technical aspects of the proposals.

Calgary Liberal officials described their supper as a good cross-section of the city's business community, including a solid representation of oil industry executives as well as lawyers and accountants.

The question most frequently put to Mr. Benson was what effect the proposed reforms, especially a tax on capital gains, would have on private enterprise and the small businessman.

The white paper recommends taxing capital gains—the profit on the sale of any asset such as stocks in a company—as income. Tax on the sales of shares in any publicly-owned company, however, would be levelled on only 50 per cent of the total gain.

Write-off for any capital losses would also be permitted.

Several questioners argued the proposal would force owners of many small companies that had gone public to sell control of their firm to pay taxes.

Their positions were built on the basis of a recommendation that capital gains taxes should be paid every five years.

One questioner used the example of a man who owns 2,000,000 shares in a public company and finds the price of the stock has risen $20 in the five-year period between tax payments being required.

He said this man would have to pay taxes on $20,000,000, even after allowing for the 50 per cent tax-free concession given him as having earned capital gains through a public company.

He said this man would have to sell shares to get the money to pay such a tax—perhaps having to unload enough shares to cost him control of the company.

Mr. Benson replied Ottawa wasn't proposing anything that would force anyone to lose control of a company.

The white paper had been drawn up to provide a basis for debate on how to achieve the best system of taxation for Canada.

If any individual or organization could show the government or the parliamentary committee which is to start studying the proposals shortly that inequities existed, they would be changed.

Several questioners also criticized Mr. Benson for not going further in the proposals to make Canada a more attractive tax haven than the United States.

They said lower tax rates in the U.S. meant many Canadians would emigrate to that country.

When Mr. Benson said he doubted anyone, even in that room, would move to the U.S. for tax reasons, many in the audience jeered and someone shouted:

"Don't bet on it."

Debate on Indians Refused

OTTAWA (CP) — The government refused Wednesday the unanimous consent necessary for an immediate Commons debate on Indian affairs.

Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) presented a motion for an emergency debate on the need of sending Indian problems to the Commons Indian affairs committee for immediate study.

Mr. Nesbitt said Canadian Indians feel deep frustration concerning the government's policies toward them. There was increasing unrest among Indians.

He noted that the Six Nations reserve at Brantford has announced it is seceding from Canada and has so informed the United Nations.

This can only embarrass Canada internationally, he said.

Postal Rates Protested

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of 80 non-profit groups from air cadets to Zionists held a tactics meeting Wednesday night before ganging up on federal politicians in protest against higher postal rates for their journals.

More than 150 delegates to a conference sponsored by the Ottawa-based Committee for Fair Postal Rates aired complaints at the opening session against new postage regulations. Then they made plans for mass lobbying of MPs today.

Under rates that took effect April 1, more than 3,000 periodical publications of non-profit organizations lost second-class mailing privileges. Instead of five cents a pound, rates went to a minimum of four cents an item, said William Dodge, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress and chairman of the fair-rates committee.

Missed Gasoline Reservoir

Montreal Fire-bombers Nearly Blew Up Blocks

MONTREAL (CP) — Fire-bombing demonstrators at the west-end garage of Murray Hill Limousine Services Ltd. Oct. 7 came within inches of blowing up the whole area, a coroner's inquest was told Wednesday.

The inquest is investigating the fatal shooting of provincial police Cpl. Robert Dumas outside the garage during a 16-hour strike by city police and firemen.

Lawyer Jacques Ducros, counsel for Murray Hill, described the danger as he toured the scene with Coroner Laurin Lapointe. Mr. Ducros showed where demonstrators had sprayed the area with gasoline from a hose. Below the pavement was a new gasoline reservoir.

A television film of the rampage, shown later at the inquest, showed flaming rags and molotov cocktails igniting the area.

"There were 6,000 gallons of gasoline under those flames," Mr. Ducros said.

Murray Hill Cancels Trips

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A Montreal bus company scheduled to take students to weekend anti-Vietnam war protests in Washington has cancelled its arrangement because of Canadian government pressure, a company vice-president was quoted as saying Wednesday.

J. D. Buller, executive vice-president of Murray Hill, said one man had been given permission to fire from the roof of the garage.

"And there was another gun fired from inside the building during the incident. I gave the OK for the man to take the weapon to the roof . . . because there was a great risk to our property, including the danger of explosion from the fuel below the entrance.

"I told him to shoot at the ground or in the air, not at people."

The inquest is continuing.

Hees Gets Answer

No Point in Re-opening Banks Case

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has received legal advice from a United States lawyer that there would be no point in re-opening the case of Hal Banks, Justice Minister John Turner told the Commons Wednesday.

He was replying to George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings), who asked Mr. Turner about a report that a legal adviser to the U.S. state department had informed Secretary of State William Rogers that Canada has no great interest in re-opening the case.

Banks, former head of the Seafarers International Union in Canada, was convicted five years ago of conspiracy to assault a ship captain and was sentenced to five years imprisonment. However, he disappeared while on bail and was arrested Aug. 29, 1967, in New York City.

Former secretary of state Dean Rusk reversed the ruling of a New York City court that Banks be extradited.

The North Protestant Chapel, Canadian Forces Base, Trenton was the scene of the recent marriage of Cheryl Lynn Noakes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil A. Noakes, Belleville, to Captain W. Allan Edgar, Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Leslie Edgar, RR4, Picton. Officiating at the double-ring ceremony was Padre Major C. H. White. The bodice, sleeves and the cathedral train, which extended from the empire waist in a coat effect, were re-embroidered heavy French lace in a raised rose pattern. Her four-tier shoulder length bouffant veil was held in place by a headpiece of two organza bows encircled with petals of white stephanotis covered with seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis tinted with porcelain orange and Woburn Abbey sweetheart roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Donna Goodfellow of Belleville. She wore an autumn green full length gown of crepe featuring an empire waist with a scooped neckline and long full sleeves with a ruffle cuff. Free Methodist W. M. S. Holds Quilting Bee

Marmora and Beaver Creek Women's Missionary Society of the Free Methodist Church held a work meeting in the form of a quilting bee in the afternoon and later a pot luck supper and program at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wells.

Roll call was answered with a promise from the Bible. Mrs. Ron Brown led a discussion on study book "Run While the Sun is Hot," which took place during the quilting. The men were invited for the dinner and all sat down to a delectable home cooked meal. Mrs. Everett Derry and Mrs. Gordon Derry were commended for the success of the day's activities of which they were in charge.

After supper the program began with singing of "Bring in the Sheaves". President, Mrs. Ritchie Wells, called on Mrs. W. A. McMillan for the scripture reading. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Potts accompanied the audience with their guitars in the singing of "When the Roll is Called up Yonder". An instrumental duet by Mr. and Mrs. Potts was also enjoyed. "Carry your Cross with a Smile" was sung by the pastor, Rev. W. A. McMillan. Colored slides of England, Ireland and Scotland presented in the form of a travelogue by Mr. and Mrs. Potts proved most interesting to all.

The pronouncing of the benediction by the pastor brought a delightful evening to a close.

Ann Landers

Angry at Wife's Constant Interruptions

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife has an annoying habit of interrupting me in mid-sentence. I suspect she has fallen into this habit because of an inferiority complex.

ANN LANDERS

I've told her repeatedly that these interruptions are not only rude but frustrating. She pays no attention and the interruptions continue. So, in self-defence, I have adopted a technique to relieve my anger. I squeeze her nose between my thumb and index finger when she interrupts. This gives me a feeling of deep satisfaction which displaces the pure hate.

While it is, a successful tactic from a psychological point of view, it hasn't deterred her one iota. She still interrupts. What do you suggest? — LEXINGTON.

DEAR LEX: A man who would squeeze his wife's nose when she interrupts could do anything. Have you considered clapping a muzzle on her mouth? Or parading her in the buzo with an old fashioned mustard plaster?

This woman is obviously a compulsive talker and I can tell you right now there is no cure for it. The most effective method of dealing with interruptions is to continue talking, disregard the interrupter, and make it clear you have no intention of yielding the floor.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing for my neighbor because she is not educated. Please tell me what she should do.

In 1960, Mrs. C. needed $225 to pay the hospital bill for her little house. She went to a loan company and was told they didn't make "small loans." They talked her into borrowing $1500.

She fell behind in her payments, and yesterday received a notice saying she has lost her home to the loan company. She didn't realize her home was the collateral. The woman cannot afford a lawyer. What should she do? — SORRY FOR HER.

DEAR SORRY: She can call Legal Aid and be thankful for those big-hearted lawyers who give their time to this splendid agency.

And let this be a lesson to others who sign documents without legal counsel. Poor people who think they can't afford a lawyer are the ones who need a lawyer the most.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why would a 36-year-old man who is handsome, successful, romantic and well thought of by colleagues and employers, return to a wife whom he described as self-centered, undemanding, and zero as a bed partner, when he was enjoying the intellectual and physical stimulation of a 25-year-old woman with whom he communicated perfectly for three weeks?

Religion is not a factor. There are no children involved. The younger woman is unmarried, co-operative, and available. What's the answer? — LOSERS WEEPERS.

DEAR LOSER: The sample was ample.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: There must be other women who get the silent treatment from their husbands. Why? Don't tell me some men are just naturally quiet. My husband, who is a physician, is considered brilliant and outgoing by everyone who knows him. Whenever we attend a medical meeting Ed just shoot takes over. He is on his feet challenging, presenting his views, and he asks more questions than anybody. The chairmen always have a problem shutting him up. When we have company, Ed talks a blue streak. Yet, when the two of us are alone, he can't think of a single thing to talk about. If he didn't enjoy my company, why did he marry me? — IGNORED WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: Obviously he didn't marry you because you were a great conversationalist. It must have been something else. Search your memory and maybe you'll come up with the answer.

St. John's Aged Bridge Generation Gap

By DORIS CLARE

News Item From St. John's, Newfoundland; Co - operative venture involves "Y" teens and home for the aged: Ladies at the home for the aged baked special cookies for "Y" teens affair. Everybody benefitted: the cooks loved the actual creative work of turning out made-with-loving - care cookies. The teens enjoyed eating them — who wouldn't!

Nice way to bridge the gap between the generations. Let's hear about more such ventures in friendship.

Dear Doris: I write to you with difficulty, as my hands are crippled with arthritis, which is also in my knees. Sometimes my whole body aches. I cannot read or sew, and I have to force myself to get meals on the table.

Gradually we have lost our friends, since we do not go anywhere, and all I want to do is cry with the pain.

My son is marrying a nurse from England and he wants me to put on the wedding. Could you suggest simple refreshments for a small reception at home? I cannot roll out pie dough, but I will do whatever I can to help them enjoy their Big Day. s.

DORIS CLARE

My husband spent hundreds on me for doctors. He does not drink or smoke. At age 57 we are both getting — Depressed

Dear Depressed: Smiling in the face of pain takes rare resolution. I am sorry about your poor crippled limbs. Suggestions for simple wedding refreshments are on the way.

Try to keep into things. Let your minister know you would appreciate a visit from any church member, and when someone does call, make the effort to serve a cup of tea. There are ways of keeping up morale — tough but essential.

Frankly ask him for prayers and help with inspirational reading. You are rich, you know, in something which many women lack — a loving and sympathetic husband. Help him out of his depression and yours will lift.

Confidential to Worried Mother: Could it be that your daughter's love and pity for other persons of the same sex springs from a home situation in which she herself has found a lack of love? You mention your husband's coolness and failure to communicate, and she may have felt that there was a wall up against her.

It does happen that when a daughter finds a father unattractive, she may turn to members of her own sex for affection. I'd suggest guidance in coping with it from a psychiatrist.

* * *

Confidential to Love by Mail: Hold on! Pen pals are one thing — love may be quite another! You haven't mentioned what your handicap is, but I am guessing that this keeps you from getting to know young men near at hand. Does it?

This man is 16 years older than you. You have met him just once. Perhaps he is a confirmed bachelor by now. Love only comes, for sure, after you know a person at close range for quite a while. Don't spoil the friendship you have now with a premature declaration.

All About Potatoes

CALGARY (CP) — Facts About Alberta Potatoes is a recently published booklet which answers many consumer questions. The booklet advises that potatoes should never be left in the plastic bag they're purchased in, but stored in a cool, dark place where the air can circulate. The booklet explains that too high a temperature may cause sprouting and shriveling, while too low a temperature will develop a sweet flavor. The temperature for storage it recommends is 45 to 50 degrees.

Savory Adds to Turkey Stuffing

By MARY MOORE

In Newfoundland the savory is best.

Art McKim grows it and gives me a generous supply after I saw his drying and sifting and winnowing process in October. I used 1 tbsp. of it in our 15-lb. Thanksgiving turkey and I think it was the best stuffing yet.

How you will get a supply of Newfoundland's superior savory I do not know unless you write directly to Broad Cove Farms, P.O. Box 77, RR1, Portugal Cove, Newfoundland. It may be available throughout "The Mainland" sporadically when his production increases.

SAVORY STUFFING FOR A 14-15 POUND TURKEY

16 slices fresh white bread crumbled (tearing in blender speeds up crumbling)
¼ lb. margarine
1 tbsp. savory
1 tbsp. chopped parsley or bottled flakes (optional)
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. onion salt
1 tsp. celery salt (or celery seed)

In a large pot melt the margarine and add the savory, parsley (if used), salt, onion salt and celery salt and gently saute until seasonings are soaked with margarine. Add the bread crumbs, crispen a little and mix well and stuff prepared bird.

NOTE: I skewered, tied our turkey and buttered the skin and roasted it at 225 deg. Fahr. for 2 hrs. then reduced heat to 250 deg. Fahr. for 2½ hrs. It was roasted to a delicious golden brown and was moist and tender. Baste your turkey if you wish.

Like a quiet voice in a wilderness of commanding requests came a plea for ideas for Cooking For One.

So for the specific sake of M.P.M. I grandly prepared my breakfast and ate it in the dining room all alone this morning because I was on this savory kick it got into my meal.

FRIED EGG AND SAVORY FRIED TOMATO
(Breakfast for one)

Melt 1 tbsp. margarine in heavy medium frypan, add 1 peeled underripe tomato cut into two thick slices. Sprinkle tomato slices with pinches of savory, sugar and salt. Put on lid and cook over medium heat two minutes, then to other side of pan add 1 fresh egg, sprinkling it with flavor salt. Cover and cook gently for 4 min. or until egg is set and a thin white film covers top. Tomatoes are hot but still firm enough to handle without going mushy. A delicious breakfast. Reducers should include this tomato method in their low-calorie vegetable list.

READ C.W.L.

The October meeting of the Read Catholic Women's League was held on a Wednesday evening, following Mass at St. Mary's School. Father Ferguson opened the meeting with the league prayer. The president, Mrs. William Buckley, presided. The correspondence was read by Mrs. William Steele and the financial report was given by Mrs. Catharine Shannon. Mrs. Marie Walsh gave a spiritual reading for the month of October. Members were asked to save their old nylons.

Grades 5 and 6 students gave a small concert under the direction of their teacher Mrs. Francis Coffey. It was a great success. Mrs. Joan Shannon thanked the children and their teacher for their fine performance. A lunch was served by the women of the 6th concession.

Father Ferguson closed the meeting with a prayer. The next meeting in November will be an Inter-faith meeting.

School Teachers Attend Conference in Kingston

From Prince Edward County, Mrs. Ethel Brooks of Pinecrest Memorial School and Mrs. Marjorie Faulkner and Miss Mary Huff of Kente Public School attended the Conference of the OSAE (Ontario Society for Art Education) held at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, Queen's University, Kingston. Over 200 were in attendance.

The conference took the form of seminars and workshops, some of which were: creative media, metal relief, plastic paint, classroom workshop, visual media (film), and the use of museum collections for teaching.

On Saturday, Professor Ralph Allen, Director of the Agnes Etherington Art Centre and Department of Art History of Queen's University spoke on "The Teaching of Art". Many points were brought forward with the use of visual aids.

A symposium consisted of the following selected panel of educational experts: Dr. C. D. Gaitskell, assistant superintendent of curriculum, Ontario Department of Education; Earl Cannon, chairman of the Art Department, Ottawa Teachers' College; Mrs. Carol Hagel, art teacher, La Salle Secondary School, Kingston; Dan Tomlinson, art and crafts consultant, Oshawa; Robert Fisher, curriculum advisor, Frontenac and Lennox and Addington County Separate School Board, and John Linscott, principal of Loyalist Collegiate, Kingston.

Trevor Hodgson, assistant professor and Director of the Art Conference acted as moderator for the lively discussion.

The audience was able to voice complaints and make suggestions regarding any aspect of the teaching of art in Ontario. One question was, "Why should a 13-year-old Grade 9 have far more material to work with than a 15-year-old Grade 8?"

Dr. Gaitskell replied, "It is absolutely necessary to have an adequate amount of all materials in order for the pupils to be able to produce.

The Department of Education spends a tremendous amount on good materials for the summer courses for teachers. One cannot produce on junk. The value in creativity is important, and this is gradually spreading to all subjects. Art should run through the entire curriculum."

Special budgeting in the schools and allocation of money by the school boards for art supplies is a must.

Across Ontario it was noted that there was a budget range of $7 to $12 per student for art supplies.

The books and art supplies display as well as the gallery exhibitions by Jock MacDonald were much enjoyed.

Also present for the Saturday session were Miss Linda Peck, Mrs. Eileen Shannon and Miss Marilyn Dean of Wellington Consolidated School.

MPP Accuses Tobacco Interests Of Promoting 'Legal Marijuana'

TORONTO (CP) — George Ben (L—Toronto Humber) said Wednesday he suspects there is a "deliberate corporate attempt to cut down losses of falling tobacco sales by diversifying into marijuana production as soon as this can be made legal."

He told the Ontario legislature's education committee that advertising agencies, sponsored by tobacco companies, are "lending sophisticated support to the campaign to legalize marijuana."

It was urgent that health courses in provincial schools be revised to cover the hazards of drugs as soon as possible.

He referred to an article in an American magazine which indicates a timetable has been set in the United States for legalizing marijuana.

Mr. Ben said the major cigarette companies "are just waiting for the day pot is legalized so they can start producing grass-laced smokes."

Mr. Bell said hearings of the Federal Drug Commission in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver have shown "a similar sophisticated attempt to lobby U.S. legislators is under way here in Canada, backed by a good deal of money."

"I am convinced that many of the witnesses are on hidden retainer, either from agencies or from the tobacco industry directly. Of course, in the nature of such deals, legal proof is impossible but after many years in public life the experienced legislator smells a rat a mile away."

He said there "were hints" that Ronald McNeil, Conservative member of the legislature for Elgin, had been approached by a "tobacco lobby" to vote against anti-smoking recommendations in the legislature's youth committee report.

Whatever the cause, the record shows he did vote that way . . . we must avoid a repetition of such a possibility where pressure might be brought to bear on legislators from the Ontario tobacco industry to go easy on marijuana."

Mr. Ben estimated the value of the market available for legal marijuana at $20,000,000 a year.

He urged that teachers be permitted to show marijuana, speed and LSD to their classes "so that the drugs will at least be recognized for what they are by the unwary."

Education Minister Davis said funds have been set aside for educational television films on the danger of drugs.

Randall Asks for Housing Aid

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario has asked the federal government to say exactly how much money it will loan the province for housing in 1970 to avoid the federal delays which hampered the provincial building program last year, Trade Minister Stanley Randall said Wednesday.

Mr. Randall said in an interview he and Treasurer Charles MacNaughton made the request at an Ottawa meeting last week with Finance Minister Edgar Benson and Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing.

He said he hopes for a federal reply to Ontario's request for a definite commitment before the end of 1969.

Although Mr. Randall put no specific figure on the amount the province would like to get, the Ontario Housing Corp. has estimated at least $172,000,000 will be needed.

Broken down this would provide $34,600,000 to build 4,602 student units, $118,000,000 for 6,078 family units and 3,870 senior citizen units and $20,000,000 for land development.

This proposed 1970 program represents a big leap forward over 1969, during which the province planned 7,000 housing starts.

Animal Bill Given Second Reading

TORONTO (CP) — The Conservative government Wednesday defeated by 49 to 34 an attempt by the combined opposition in the Ontario legislature to prevent second reading of a bill which places restrictions on the inspection powers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The bill now goes to the committee of the whole house for further debate.

The New Democratic Party supported Liberal Leader Robert Nixon in a move to delay second reading and refer the bill to the standing committee on health for public hearings.

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart, who is responsible for the legislation, told the house he would move a number of amendments when the bill reaches the house committee stage, but none of the amendments affect the principle of the bill.

Mr. Nixon said Mr. Wishart was "bending the rules" to overcome his failure to carry out adequate consultations with the public before the bill was introduced at all.

To ask the house to approve the principle of a bill set down nine months ago when it would not later be amended was "unfair, undemocratic and unreasonable," he said.

"We are being asked to consider for and against the principle of a bill when we don't know what that principle is."

Under existing legislation, inspectors of societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals can enter premises without a warrant when they have reason to believe cruel treatment is being administered.

The new legislation requires the inspectors to show cause for the issue of a warrant by a justice of the peace before making an entry.

Mr. Wishart told the house legislation was necessary because previous Inspection procedures "have been abused, and there have been complaints."

Some society inspectors are part-time, poorly paid and poorly trained, he said. Many of them, with no knowledge of the law, have "abused their powers."

Hydro, Shell Raises Studied

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Energy Minister George Kerr undertook Wednesday to study the possibility of requiring Shell Canada Ltd. to appear before a provincial government board to justify its increase in wholesale prices of its petroleum products.

But in answer to questions in the legislature, Mr. Kerr said he feels a price increase by a private company is less subject to public review than rate increases by public utility companies such as Ontario Hydro.

Officials of Ontario Hydro have been called to appear before the legislature's standing committee on government commissions today to justify the government-owned company's recent six-per-cent increase in wholesale prices.

Hextall Back to Haunt Leafs After Training Camp Cut

By CHRIS AYLOTTE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto Maple Leafs did not consider Bryan Hextall Jr., good enough to stick in the National Hockey League after a 1968 training camp trial.

The 23-year-old son of the NHL Hall of Famer Wednesday made the assessment look bad as he played a key role in Pittsburgh Penguins' 5-4 win over the shivering Maple Leafs. Hextall set up the winning goal and scored another as the Penguins reached the Leafs with their fourth straight defeat.

In other Wednesday games, Montreal Canadiens dumped Oakland Seals 5-0, New York Rangers tripped Detroit Red Wings 4-2 and Minnesota North Stars downed Philadelphia Flyers by the same score.

"It's always nice to come back and haunt a team you think made a mistake," Hextall said after the Penguins picked up their third win of the year. "I should have been with this club last year."

Hextall set up Pittsburgh's winning score with a perfect pass, breaking a scoreless tie with 37 seconds to spare in the second period. He fed Ken Schinkel, whose shot was blocked by Toronto netminder Marv Edwards before defenseman Tracy Pratt jumped on the rebound for the score. Hextall scored the second goal 80 seconds into the third period and Keith McCreary added the third goal into an empty net at 19:41.

The Pittsburgh win was only their third in 10 games against Toronto since the 1967-68 expansion year and first since Jan. 12, 1968. The Leafs have permitted 24 goals in their four-game slump and are last in the East Division.

Claude Provost's two goals and the flawless play of netminder Rogatien Vachon at Oakland kept Montreal in the East Division lead, one point ahead of New York.

Jean Beliveau, Yvon Cournoyer and Mickey Redmond also scored for the Canadiens, unbeaten in seven straight games. Vachon blocked 23 shots for his first shutout of the season. The Seals, tied for third with Philadelphia in the West Division, have not won in six consecutive games.

The Rangers kept pace with the Canadiens by handing Detroit their first road loss of the year. Walt Tkaczuk and Jean Ratelle collected two goals each before a sellout Madison Square Garden crowd of 17,250. Pete Stemkowski and Wayne Connelly replied for the Red Wings.

Ratelle broke a scoreless tie at 16:27 of the second period to ruin a strong goaltending display by Roy Edwards. Tkaczuk struck 43 seconds later on a power play. The second-year centre, who also scored in the game's final minute, ran his record to eight goals in the last eight games.

Jean-Paul Parise had a hand in three goals against Philadelphia as the North Stars crept within a single point of St. Louis Blues, the idle West Division leaders.

Parise scored twice and set up Claude Larose winner with Danny Grant scoring the other. Andre Lacroix and Lew Morrison scored less than two minutes apart for a 2-1 Flyers lead early in the first period.

With the score tied 2-2 in the first period, Parise slipped unnoticed out of the penalty box. He jumped on a long pass from Barry Gibbs and fed Larose, who rifled the winner behind Bernie Parent.

In off-ice activity Wednesday, Bernie Geoffrion was offered a coaching job and Bobby Hull a playing position.

Geoffrion, 45, assistant to New York general manager-coach Emile Francis, was in Minneapolis for talks with North Stars general manager and coach Wren Blair.

Western League Wants Black Hawks

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Western Ontario Junior Hockey League has invited St. Catharines Black Hawks to leave the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series and join its ranks.

Art Lawson, president of the independent league which includes five teams in southwestern Ontario, said in London Wednesday he has sent a telegram with the invitation to Black Hawks' co-owner Fred Muller.

St. Catharines defied an ultimatum Tuesday from nine teams in the OHA junior A loop by dressing forward Glenn Irwin for a game against Toronto Marlboros.

The teams told Muller Monday they would play no further games against his team if Irwin were not returned to Edmonton Oil Kings in the Western Canada Hockey League. The western league has recognized another Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The teams charged that Muller violated rules by taking Irwin from the Oil Kings and placing him on the Sorel, Que., Black Hawks in the Quebec Junior A Hockey League, which is recognized by the CAHA.

Irwin received his release from the Sorel team to play in St. Catharines.

The independent WOJHL consists of Chatham Maroons, St. Thomas Barons, Sarnia Legionnaires, Brantford Foresters and Guelph Beef Kings.

Minnesota Wants Geoffrion

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League said Wednesday night they have offered Bernie (Boom-Boom) Geoffrion a contract to coach the west division team.

Wren Blair, Minnesota general manager and coach, said Geoffrion left here Wednesday for New York to think about the offer. Blair expected a decision "in the next few days."

Blair quoted Geoffrion as saying he was satisfied with financial terms and length of contract, which were not disclosed.

The biggest decision Geoffrion would have to make, Blair said, would be to return to the pressures of coaching.

Geoffrion, 37, is assistant to New York Rangers' general manager and coach, Emile Francis, and serves as the club's chief scout for a reported $25,000 a year.

Geoffrion served as the Rangers' coach part of last season until he had to step down from the post in December because of ill health.

Stampeders Limping But Closer Together

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders may be limping in the first game of the Western Football Conference final Saturday, but coach Jim Duncan insists they will be closer together as a team.

"We have a lot of new people, but we're acquainted with one another now," he said, explaining the changes that have taken place during a season in which the Stampeders lost three games to Saskatchewan Roughriders.

One of them is Duncan, an assistant coach with Saskatchewan who replaced Jerry Williams as head coach last May.

Duncan had to call in seven newcomers to fill gaps left by the departure of such stalwarts as quarterback Peter Liske, centre Chuck Zickefoose and defensive halfback Ron Stewart.

Injuries struck and Calgary had to struggle to defend the playoff championship won last year with the help of 33-6 and 25-12 triumphs over Saskatchewan.

The Stampeders finished second this year, but the 18 points they mustered was a low point for a runner-up club. Since 1952 only one club had reached second place with fewer points, Winnipeg Blue Bombers with 17 in 1966.

Meanwhile, the Roughriders swept to 13 victories this season — a club record that established them as the favorites in the best-of-three final series.

Kickoff time for the first game in Regina, which will be televised on the CTV national network, is 2 p.m. CST. The second game will be played here Wednesday night Nov. 19 with the third, if it is required, set for Regina Sunday, Nov. 23.

But one thing the frustrating season has done, Duncan said, is make Jerry Keeling a confident quarterback.

After nine years as a defensive halfback and second string quarterback it took half a season for Keeling to adjust to the pressures of being No. 1 but now "he knows what he can do best and is throwing with a lot more authority."

An example was last Saturday's sudden-death semi-final against British Columbia Lions. Keeling completed 20 of 31 passes for 323 yards and two touchdowns as Calgary won 35-21.

But Keeling was still a question mark in one respect.

"He is a runner and a roll-out type quarterback," said Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys. "He hasn't played in the really cold weather and when he throws the ball I don't know how effective he'll be."

Argos' Thorton Ready For Anything Against Ottawa

TORONTO (CP) — Defensive back Dick Thornton of Toronto Argonauts says he's ready for anything in the Eastern Football Conference final against Ottawa Rough Riders which gets under way here Sunday afternoon.

"I'm ready for anything. I'll play tackle if that's what it takes to make this team win. Nobody cares about rest now.

"There's three games to go — the two against Ottawa and the Grey Cup final — and then we'll have all winter to rest."

Argonauts are not likely to call on Thornton to play tackle but he should see plenty of action both ways.

The Chicago native has become best known for his defensive backfield work but has played at quarterback and offensive halfback as well as doing some punting.

The quarterback stint came in 1965 when he was with Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Argos kept him on defence since he came here in a 1967 trade, but in last Sunday's EFC semi-final against Hamilton Tiger-Cats he was allowed to display his offensive abilities.

He went in at halfback with Bill Symons and ran for 44 yards and caught one pass for another 17 yards. With regular halfback Dave Rainey out of the lineup for the season with a knee injury, Thornton probably will get into the offensive action again against Ottawa.

Meanwhile, Argo coach Leo Cahill wasn't saying what he will do to stop Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson but he admitted Jackson will be his biggest problem.

"Jackson is tough, not only physically, but mentally," Cahill said Wednesday. "A quarterback has to think, he can do. He gets the ball to his best receivers. He gets the ball in his best running backs, so failing these he gets it done himself, wherever has to be done.

"Jackson has all of these."

Cleveland Ends Losing Streak

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — John Cunniff collected a pair of goals to help Cleveland Barons end a nine-game losing streak with a 3-1 victory over Hershey Bears in an American Hockey League game Wednesday night.

Cunniff put the Barons in front 2-0 with goals in each of the first two periods.

Meanwhile, Cleveland goalie Gerry Gray held the Bears scoreless until Hershey rookie Jean Grappon scored his first AHL goal at 4:50 of the final period.

Ken Kelly scored a power-play goal at 10:31 to clinch the victory for Cleveland and keep the defending champion Bears winless in their last five starts.

Nothing Different For Argos

OTTAWA (CP) — Nothing spectacularly different will be thrown at Toronto Argonauts Sunday, coach Frank Clair of Ottawa said Wednesday as he ended strategy sessions for the first game of the Eastern Football Conference finals.

"But we'll take advantage of what surprise we can," said Clair whose Rough Riders have beaten Toronto seven times in eight encounters over two seasons. Riders won all three league games this year.

Clair's staff sessions, based on analysis of films of Toronto's defensive alignments, will be translated into making new material work, starting today — and the new material includes halfback Gene Thomas, acquired to replace the sidelined Vic Washington.

If Thomas can't get untracked Sunday in the first game of the two-game, total-points series, Clair can call on his defensive-back corps for help.

Riders have been idle since Nov. 1.

That means they are in the best of health, manager Red O'Quinn said Wednesday. There remains a possibility that Moe Racine, the 250-pound tackle who broke a shoulder early in the season, will be able to play again this year, but there is no hint he'll be ready for Sunday's nationally-televised game.

Zaleski Relieved As Coach Of Blue Bombers in "Stage One"

WINNIPEG (CP) — After three years without making the playoffs, Winnipeg Blue Bombers Wednesday night launched what club president C. G. E. Gyles called "stage one" of the Western Football Conference team's efforts at recovery.

They released Joe Zaleski in an announcement that said only:

"The Winnipeg football club announces that Joe Zaleski has been relieved of his duties of head coach of the Blue Bombers."

The Bombers finished last in the 1969 season and haven't seen playoff action since 1966, the last season the club was under the direction of Bud Grant, who joined Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League in 1967.

Zaleski took over from Grant after nine years as his assistant.

"We decided that it is in the best interests of the club that we should change coaches," said Gyles.

General manager Earl Lunsford said that in the opinion of the executive, the team has not advanced since last year "although it is a better team personnel-wise." The feat, it was decided, lay in the coaching. The Bombers finished last in 1966 as well.

The club is soon to begin the search for a replacement, and it is expected there will be quite a few applicants.

Gyles and Lunsford were confident that a financial settlement could be reached that would be satisfactory to both Zaleski and the club. Zaleski has a year remaining on a three-year contract.

Ellis Juniors Still Looking for First Win

PAUL MULDOON

The Belleville Ellis Junior Hockey organization continue to give the high school students a chance to see a good class of hockey at a reasonable price Friday night in a 9 p.m. contest between Belleville's Ellis Juniors and the Trenton Golden Hawks.

Friday night is Nicholson Catholic College night at the Memorial Arena where any student in the possession of a Nicholson student's card will be admitted to see the game for 25 cents.

The students of Belleville's Catholic College have a good opportunity to see their own John Mulvihill, Brian Coughlin and Paul Muldoon in action.

John Mulvihill a 15 year old grade 10 student in the five year Arts and Science Program is in his first year of junior hockey. John is a graduate of the champion Belleville Kinsmen Bantams. John is one of three Bantam graduates signed on the junior roster. He is a gleam in coach Floyd Crawford's eye for an effective defensive unit that will keep the puck out of the Belleville end. King, has also showed the ability as being a good rushing defenceman and pulling the puck where it does the most good . . . is the opposition's net.

Paul Muldoon a 17 year old grade 12 student in the five year Arts and Science program is a graduate from Belleville's Midget All-star team in his first year with the juniors also. Paul shares goaltending duties with Paul Hopkins, last year's regular. He is a hopeful asset to the junior organization which is trying to establish a spot in the Eastern Ontario Junior B Hockey League.

Brian Coughlin a 17 year old, Grade 13 student in the five year Arts and Science program is in his second year with the Ellis juniors. In the last couple of games Brian's linemates have been Danny Lapenotte and Teddy Waite, the top point getter on the Belleville squad. Brian who is a big hard hitting forward is one more of the Nicholson student body who is an asset to the junior team. He has also showed good technique in penaky killing duties.

The Ellis Juniors are still looking for the first win of the season with four losses and a tie.

"If the boys keep on playing organized hockey, the wins have to start coming, said coach Crawford. They are passing and controlling the puck much better now than they were two weeks ago."

Belleville who are occupying the cellar in the league have a chance to move ahead of Trenton and get a fourth place tie with the Oshawa Crushmen in the standing this weekend with a win over Trenton Friday night and a victory over the Crushmen in an 8 p.m. game in Oshawa Saturday night. Trenton has four points while Oshawa are in third with five points.

Deer Hunters Not Very Successful After First Week

The success of the first week's deer hunt is only 17.5 per cent and the reason for this is hard to pinpoint.

Out of 1,905 hunters checked, 335 deer and 34 bears were shot.

Deer hunting which to many is an excuse to "get away from it all" may be affected by poor weather. It rained all day Monday (the opening day) and most of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday were fair but there were intermittent showers.

Dave Trumble who is still hunting at the age 102 and has tramped over trails for 85 years, alarmed the rest of his hunting party when he did not return to camp at dusk. The rest of the gang set out to look for him with the usual shouting and flashing of lights. They spotted him coming down a trail.

"What were they doing, and what did they mean, was I lost?" he replied. "Of course not, the ding fools should have known I could not get lost. Why I know every tree around here by name and some of those tallest timbers were nothing but sprouts when I was a young'un. Me lost in the woods - no sir, never!"

Hockey Fan Seeks Signatures

Mr. Roger Proulx who has a project of obtaining signatures from all Hockey's Hall of Famers is trying to locate the signature of two of Belleville's hockey Predecessors.

It is thought that some store, bank or hotel that was established in 1907 and is still in Belleville may have dealt with Hod Stuart and may have his signature on record for one reason or another.

Also Mr. Proulx is trying to locate information on former Bellevillian Jean Baptiste "Jack" Laviolette, who is in the Hall of Fame.

Anyone having or able to obtain any information on Hod Stuart who played in 1907 or Jean Baptiste "Jack" Laviolette is asked to contact Mr. Roger J. Proulx, 136 Pacific Ave., Toronto 165, Ontario.

MONTREAL (CP) — The powerful McGill Redmen, this season's Ontario-Quebec Intelastic Association football champions, are returning to earth under the not-so-gentle prodding of head coach Tom Mooney.

Redmen won the Yates Cup and travel to Halifax today for Saturday's Canadian semi-final against the University of New Brunswick squad, the Maritime champions.

Following Tuesday night's workout Mooney described his club as "coming back to earth because the Redmen still have another job to do."

Mets Have Hand In History's Richest Payoff

NEW YORK (AP) — The richest payoff in baseball history finds each New York Met player collecting $18,338.18 and each Baltimore Oriole pocketing $14,001.21 from the World Series and the pennant playoffs.

The old highs were $12,794.90 for the victorious Los Angeles Dodgers in the 1963 World Series and $8,189.36 for the losing Dodgers in the 1968 Series with Baltimore.

Atlanta Braves, winners in the National League's West Division but beaten three straight by the Mets in the playoffs, each gets $8,944.10 and Minnesota Twins, who took the American League's West Division but were eliminated by the Orioles in three straight, each takes home $8,469.12.

After those big numbers, released Thursday by Charles Segar, secretary-treasurer of baseball, there is a big drop to $574.94 for each Chicago Cub who led the National League East Division by 9½ games as late as Aug. 13 but finished second. Detroit, the pennant winner in 1968, had to settle for $630.79 after finishing way up the track behind Baltimore in the American East. San Francisco Giants players each get $612.13 as runner-up to the Braves in the National West and Oakland gets $597.58 each for finishing second to Minnesota in the American West.

Third place teams also share in the pot, each Pittsburgh Pirate getting $394.27 in the National East, Cincinnati $393.97 in the National West, Boston $179.53 in the American East and California $198.30 in the American West. In all, 12 of the 24 teams in the expanded majors shared in the loot.

The Mets' payday, while high for baseball, still was short of pro football's combination in 1967 when each Green Bay Packer won $15,000 in the first Super Bowl after picking up $9,813.63 in the National Football League title game, a total of $24,813.63.

The player pool from the Series was a record $1,142,209.93, topping the old high of $1,044,942.85 for the 1968 set between the Orioles and Dodgers.

Total attendance of 272,278 and receipts of $2,857,782.78 were short of the records as there were only five games. As the players share only in the first four their shares were records.

With the addition of the new playoff series for league pennants, baseball had instituted guaranteed payoffs for the top four teams. The World Series winner was assured of $15,000, the loser $10,000 and the losers of the two pennant playoffs $5,000 each.

Killebrew, Most Valuable Player

NEW YORK (AP) — Harmon Killebrew, a quiet baldish man who led the major league with 49 home runs and 140 runs batted in for Minnesota Twins, was named Wednesday the Most Valuable Player in the American League for 1969.

The muscular Killebrew, who bounced back strong from an injury in the 1968 all-star game that threatened to end his career, was a decisive winner over John (Boog) Powell of the pennant-winning Baltimore Orioles. Powell batted .304, hit 37 homers and knocked 121 runs.

Killebrew, 33, received 16 of the first-place votes by the 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America, two from each league city.

The voting was completed before the beginning of the playoffs, and thus restricted to performance in regular-season games. Minnesota won the league's western division title before losing to Baltimore in the playoffs.

Frank Robinson of Baltimore, who had won the MVP in the American League in 1966 and in the National League with Cincinnati in 1961, received the two remaining first-place votes. Robinson hit .308 with 32 homers and 100 RBI.

The writers mentioned 37 players in the balloting and 10 of the 12 clubs were represented. Only Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians failed to draw a vote.

The point score, based on 14 for a first-place vote, nine for second, eight for third and so on down to one for 10th, gave Killebrew 294 points, Powell 227 and Robinson 162.

Sports Briefs

DAYTON, Ohio (CP) — General manager Tommy Ivan of Chicago Black Hawks turned down a Daytona Gems' offer Wednesday to work Bobby Hull back into shape and pay a $17,000 fine levied against the National Hockey League star. Hull hasn't played in the Black Hawks' first 12 games because of a dispute over certain clauses in his four-year contract. "I'm not interested," Ivan said of the Gems' offer to let Hull regain his form with the International Hockey League club until Dec. 15. Ivan indicated he would not even reply to the telegram Dayton general manager Edgar (Lefty) MacFadden sent him.

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Police said Wednesday no decision has been made on possible charges against two members of Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. Defenceman Steve Dubano and coach Gus Bodnar were involved in a scuffle Tuesday night as Dubano was escorted by police to the Toronto dressing room, after being given a game misconduct in a game against St. Catharines Black Hawks. A police spokesman said Wednesday a report on the incident was still being studied.

Staub Signed With Expos

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of baseball's National League today have their hottest drawing card signed for next season and a new spring training site for their minor league players.

Rusty Staub, the 25-year-old right fielder who captured the fancy of the fans here in the Expos initial summer is big-time baseball, Wednesday signed a one-year contract for the 1970 season.

At the same news conference, Jim Fanning, Expos general manager, announced the club has chosen Homestead, Fla., as its spring training base for the team's minor league players.

Homestead is about 80 miles south of West Palm Beach, where the Expos will continue to share major league spring training facilities with Atlanta Braves.

Second Attempt Fails

Hijacked Plane Leapfrogs to Havana

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A small Brazilian airliner leapfrogged around the Caribbean through the night after being hijacked over the Amazon River in northwestern Brazil.

Two young hijackers also tried to divert a Chilean airliner to Cuba Wednesday, but the pilot and navigator overpowered them and took the plane safely back to Santiago.

The only casualties so far in the two hijackings were two policlothiemen accidentally wounded when the Chilean airliner landed in Santiago. A fifth ery air force sergeant fired his sub-machine-gun, badly injuring the two detectives sitting in a car.

Authorities said the Brazilian plane, a twin-engined Cruzeiro do Sul airliner carrying six passengers and six crew members, was commandeered by a man with a gun and a hand grenade who approached the pilot and said: "Let's go to Cuba."

The hijacking took place after the plane stopped at Itacoatara, a small river port 600 miles southwest of the mouth of Amazon, on a flight from Manaus to Belem.

The plane, a 50-passenger craft made by a Japanese company, has only a medium range, and the pilot made a series of refuelling stops to get to Havana with enough fuel to get out.

He put down first at Caymme, in French Guiana, then on the island of Trinidad, then at San Juan, Puerto Rico, and at 4.07 a.m. at Nassau, in the Bahamas. No effort was made at any of the stops to interfere or to remove the passengers.

Havana was to be the next stop.

Authorities identified the hijacker as Victor Maria Troiano, who had been in Iacoatira since May 11 and boarded the plane there.

The Chilean plane, a twin-jet French Caravelle of the Lan-Chilean International Airline, was hijacked by two teen-agers 15 minutes after it left Santiago for Puerto Montt, in southern Chile, with 62 passengers aboard.

The pilot said one of the youths carried a revolver and the other had an automatic pistol in his belt.

The hijackers ordered the pilot to head northward toward Cuba and he complied, flying 650 miles up the coast before landing for fuel at Antofagasta, in northern Chile.

After the plane had refuelled, the pilot reported that one engine was giving trouble. Airport officials said he probably was faking, but the hijackers let the passengers get off and marched the crew at gunpoint to another empty Caravelle nearby. It refuelled and took off for Cuba.

Capt. Leonidas Medina, the pilot, told reporters how he and his navigator foiled the hijackers.

"Suddenly the steward knocked at the cabin door," Medina said. "The two youths turned their heads and we took advantage of it. I grabbed both hands of the youth who held the revolver and the navigator, Marcelo Cadena, twisted the other one's arm."

The pilot and navigator knocked the hijackers out and bound them head and foot. Then the pilot flew back to Santiago, where helicopters hovered overhead and hundreds of troops and armed guards waited on the ground.

The hijackers were taken away in a patrol car, and the crew went to the residence of Président Eduardo Frei to receive his congratulations.

Eric Campana, president of the airline, told reporters: "As far as I know, in 189 air hijackings in the last four years, this is the first time the crew managed to overpower the hijackers in mid-air and without any shooting."

Medina said: "I would not have acted if I had not been 100 per-cent sure of success and if the passengers had not gotten off the plane."

Authorities identified the hijackers as Pedro Varas Flores, 16, and Patricio Fernando Degach Vergue, 15, both students.

The two hijackings raised to 97 the number of cases of air piracy since the beginning of 1967. A total of 11 attempted or successful hijackings have been made since Sept. 19 of this year.

Farmers Double Budget

TORONTO (CP) — A budget more than double this year's estimates was adopted in principle Wednesday as the Ontario Federation of Agriculture wound up its annual convention.

Incoming president Gordon Hill of Varna told delegates he would not be bound by the document because the new executive wants to work out a new program which might change expenditures.

But he recommended approval in principle for the record, ending a discussion in which Bruce McCutcheon of Proton, representing the United Co-operatives of Ontario, was the chief opponent of the proposed budget.

Comparing the proposed estimates of $563,000 with the 1969 estimates of $276,348, Mr. McCutcheon said the budget is unrealistic and the federation should plan according to resources it is likely to have.

"It's not a budget at all, it's just wishful thinking," he said.

Key to the new budget is individual service memberships which farmers are expected to buy at $20 each, producing revenue of $200,000.

County federations of agriculture are being asked for about $143,000, up from less than $93,000, and commodity marketing boards are being asked for for $152,000, up from $113,000. Many commodity boards are holding back their 1970 dues until the federation's new program is announced.

Spokesmen for both groups questioned the figures during the meeting. County groups are facing dwindling sources of finance in general and commodity groups, who have threatened to set up their own council if the federation does not prove its worth, suggested they might not be able to justify the increase to their producers.

After the budget was adopted in principle, James Jacklin of Elmwood announced his resignation from the incoming board of directors to make way for a representative of the milk marketing board.

Kenneth McKinnon of Port Elgin was elected to fill the board position.

Mr. Hill assured delegates his call for more militancy by the federation does not necessarily mean marches on Queen's Park.

Expressing concern that he may have "frightened" some people by talking of militancy when he was elected the day before, Mr. Hill said:

"We have to decide the policy for farmers, what they need, and then stand for them. I mean to stand firmly for farmers and the solution to farm problems.

He also assured delegates that the heavily-criticized report of Ontario's special committee on farm income, of which he was a member, would not become federation policy.

U. S. Industrialists Assail Curbing Transfers from Abroad

WASHINGTON (CP) — Several big guns of United States industry opened fire Wednesday on immigration laws that restrict the transfer of employees from branches abroad, and heard the suggestion that other countries—including Canada—might retaliate.

William Iltmann, vice-president of Procter and Gamble Co., which has 14,000 of its 67,000 employees located outside the U.S., testified that the policy that came into force in 1968 has posed a threat to the company's policy "of promotion from within" the company.

He and other executives appearing before a House of Representatives judiciary subcommittee thus supported the position of the state department, which said at earlier hearings that the law was "creating significant foreign relations problems."

The labor department and some trade unions, however, have expressed concern that any relaxation of the present laws might lead to an undesirable flow of cheap unskilled labor into the U.S., particularly from Mexico.

The new law set a 120,000 annual limit on all immigrants from the Western Hemisphere on a first-come, first-served basis that has created a paper bottleneck resulting in delays of from six months to a year for a Canadian to get an immigration visa.

Barbara M. Watson of the state department testified that Canada, which for some years averaged more than 20,000 immigrants a year, dropped to under 18,000 in the fiscal year 1968.

The law is particularly hard on technical, personnel, managers and executives from abroad who are offered jobs with the parent company here for a period of perhaps five or six years.

"We now have people whom we have selected for assignment in the United States but who now are effectively frozen in their present jobs," said Iltmann.

Robert M. Norris, president of the National Foreign Trade Council Inc., said such restrictions "could invite retaliation against Americans going overseas."

"If other countries, particularly Canada, Great Britain, and the other countries of northern Europe place restrictions on Americans entering their countries to manage the American subsidiaries, the result could be extremely adverse."

Miss Watson, testifying on the significance to foreign relations, had said:

"For example, the Canadian government has stated that the imposition of numerical limitations on Canadian immigration is having a restrictive effect on the movement of people between our countries which constitutes a regressive development in the relations between the two nations.

"This would lead to strong pressures in Canada for reciprocal limitations on United States citizens going to Canada." Canada applies no numerical restrictions on the immigration of United States citizens and in fiscal year 1969, immigration to Canada of U.S. citizens exceeded Canadian immigration to the U.S. for the first time.

She also noted that U.S. citizens may be and are employed in Canada without being required to have landed immigrant status.

Canada not only applied no quantitative restrictions but fewer qualitative restrictions in admitting U.S. citizens for employment "than does any other country."

THE PICK OF Punch

"Surely you jest?"

Settlement Opposed

Inco Workers Jeer Union Team

SUDBURY (CP) — Boos and catcalls greeted the 11-man negotiating committee for Local 6500 of the United Steelworkers of America at a meeting of International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. shop stewards Wednesday night.

The committee outlined details of a tentative settlement agreed upon earlier this week after prolonged negotiations in Toronto.

The local's 16,000 members have been on strike since July 10.

The jeering came as the negotiating committee left the meeting hall after telling the shop stewards of the proposed settlement, which includes an across-the-board increase of 93 cents in hourly wages over a three-year contract.

The committee is to report on the package at a full membership meeting today. Voting on the proposed settlement is scheduled for Friday.

The strike by the Sudbury local and 1,700 members of USW Local 6200 at Port Colborne, Ont., has caused a world nickel shortage. Inco is the western world's largest nickel supplier.

The Port Colborne negotiating committee has not accepted the proposed settlement. The committee refused to sign a memorandum of agreement Monday and the two locals are expected to meet here today to discuss differences.

Jim Babirad, president of Local 6200, said Tuesday that a membership meeting Monday in Port Colborne gave the local's five-man bargaining team the go-ahead to continue negotiations in an effort to add another two cents to the offer.

But Maurice Keck, the union's international representative who attended the meeting, said Wednesday Mr. Babirad only presented a report on the leadership's position and informed the meeting he would try to persuade the Sudbury local to adopt that position.

Caouette Sees Student Loan Scheme As Official Means to Mortgage Youth

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's student-loan program was denounced by Creditiste Leader Real Caouette in the Commons Wednesday as an official means to mortgage the future of Canadian youth.

"Everybody is in favor of youth," Mr. Caouette said in a debate over amendments to the Canada Student Loans Act.

"Everybody agrees how important they are, how they're the future of the country. . . ."

"But with this bill we tell our young people, 'Come, see how generous we are. Come, get into debt. Come and mortgage your future, and the country's future!'"

The bill, now at second reading, will enable trust, loan and insurance companies to deal with students under the plan. The right had been confined to chartered banks when the act was first passed in 1964.

The amendments also provide for government guarantees on a potential loan total of $100,000,000 in the 1969-70 school year and of $115,000,000 in 1970-71. Future increases in the ceiling will be tied to increases in post-secondary school enrolment.

Another revision will enable students to borrow $800 a semester for a total of $1,500 a year. The maximum for the entire post-secondary period will be $5,000. The present annual maximum is $1,000.

The bill also restricts the availability of loans to foreign students to those qualified as landed immigrants. Previously, a foreign student could qualify by expressing intent to stay in the country after graduation.

Under the loan act, the government guarantees the loans and pays interest while the student is in school and for six months after he leaves. Since introduction of the plan, most provinces have tied their bursary assistance programs to the loan system.

Herb Gray, minister without portfolio, told the House the volume of loans in the coming year could approach $90,000,000. When the program began in 1964-65, 42,000 students obtained more than $28,000,000 in loans and last year the increase reached 107,000 students with a total of nearly $66,000,000.

Several opposition speakers looked past the amendments to attack the entire scheme itself.

To Mr. Caouette, it was a "bandaid on a wooden leg."

Young people, he said, are reluctant to go into debt but if they accept the loans they emerge from school at least $5,000 in debt and, in the case of dentists, doctors and other professional workers, face debts of up to $18,000.

He asked whether Parliament was surprised at student revolts when 21-year-olds were forced into a position where they had to ask their fathers for money to go to the movies. He noted that during a recent trip through the West he found many students unable to pay their fees for the year or paying them with bushels of barley.

In the Soviet Union, he said, the 30,000 students of Moscow University not only receive free tuition and lodging but are paid an allowance as well. The Canadian government will not increase its aid to the provinces to enable free education, he said, because it claims to be fighting inflation.

"But if there was a war tomorrow, that same government would find billions of dollars to enrol these same young people in the army and is house them and train them and prepare them to fight."

The scheme was also attacked by Edward Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby). Student loans are seen as nothing but a debt by working-class parents and students. Free university education should become "a basic and fundamental right."

The amendments were dismissed by Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) as housekeeping. He recalled once again the 1963 election pledge of former Liberal finance minister Walter Gordon of 10,000 scholarships of $1,000 each for students.

The promise, he said, was not realized by the past Liberal government nor by the present. "What we want is pioneering in the area of university finance."

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) urged Mr. Gray to consider extending the loans to women who wanted to attend university on a part-time basis.

She also asked for a provision that would enable students to postpone repayment in certain circumstances, such as where they were unable to find employment after leaving school.

Peterborough Land Deal Probed

TORONTO (CP) — Leslie Rowntree, Ontario financial and commercial affairs minister, said Wednesday he gave the go-ahead last week to an order to investigate Whiterock Estates, a land developer in the Peterborough area.

Mr. Rowntree said in an interview the investigation is still under way and refused to elaborate.

Whiterock Estates is buying farms in the Peterborough area and subdividing them into smaller plots for sale to city dwellers under the slogan, Own a Piece of Canada.

Bodies Are Recovered

LABRADOR CITY, Nfld. (CP) — The bodies of six business executives and two crew members were recovered Wednesday after a plane crash near this Newfoundland mining centre in mainland Labrador.

Killed in the crash were three key officials of British Newfoundland Corp. Ltd., including Donald McParland, president and chief executive officer.

Their de Havilland DH 125 jet plummeted into an open-pit mine Tuesday night while attempting an instrument landing near this town 350 miles northeast of Quebec City.

Hazardous weather marked by fog and drizzle stalled rescue operations until Wednesday morning. Federal department of transport investigators were forced to make the eight-hour trip from Sept-Iles, Que., by train.

Mr. McParland, a 40-year-old native of North Bay, Ont., succeeded Donald Gordon as Brinco president following the death of the former CNR head last May.

He also was president and chief executive officer of Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp., Ltd., the Brinco subsidiary set up to build the $952,000,000 Churchill Falls, Nfld., hydroelectric power project.

Mr. McParland was on a whirlwind speaking tour of the lower St. Lawrence and Labrador-Quebec regions.

Wreckage around the Iron Ore Co. of Canada mine was scattered over a wide area. Loose gravel and steep drops made it dangerous to proceed with rescue operations in darkness, so RCMP officers postponed them until dawn.

The bodies were taken to a makeshift morgue in a section of the airport terminal.

A memorial service for all eight men will be held Friday at Notre Dame Cathedral in Montreal.

'Professional Job'

Trio Rob Armed Truck of Race Track Receipts

NEW YORK (AP) — "It was a most professional job," said the police official heading the investigation of the $1,370,000 Wells Fargo armored car holdup by three gunmen—the second largest cash robbery in U.S. history. "They were very cool."

"There were times they could have shot the guards, particularly the one who went for his gun," added Deputy Inspector Thomas J. Gleason. "But they didn't."

Wednesday's daring daylight theft of Aqueduct Race Track receipts was nearly foiled by an unidentified housewife who became suspicious when she peered out her window and saw three men not in uniform transferring money bags to a car.

Her call to police brought patrol cars to the scene minutes after the bandit trio had roared off with the stolen money, leaving the three Wells Fargo guards handcuffed inside their truck.

The cash haul surpassed the $1,219,218 taken in the 1950 Brinks robbery in Boston and in U.S. history is exceeded only by the theft of $1,551,277 from a U.S. mail truck in Plymouth, Mass., Aug. 12, 1962.

Robbers got $7,500,000 in cash in the Great Train Robbery in Britain in August, 1963.

Frank Basil, president of the New York Racing Association, said the loss was insured by Aqueduct and Wells Fargo.

The day for the armored truck crew began routinely when they left the track in Queens at 11:35 a.m. and began the drive to the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. at 23 Wall Street in lower Manhattan.

They were carrying approximately $1,400,000 representing receipts from Monday and Tuesday. The Monday receipts had not been deposited because banks were closed Tuesday for Veterans Day.

Locked in the back riding shotgun was Barry Kateridge, 25. The driver, James Kerrigan, 50, and crew chief, Thomas Raffety, 35, were up front. Each carried a sidearm.

They drove to Pine and Fulton Streets in Brooklyn where they stopped so Raffety could eat. His partners remained in the locked truck.

When Raffety returned he was followed by three armed men in their 30s. As Kateridge opened the door, the guards said, the trio jumped him and Kerrigan went for his gun.

"If you want to live to enjoy your pension, drop that thing now," the robbers warned. With guns at Raffety's back and head they added: "Don't make a move or we'll kill him."

They disarmed the guards, handcuffed them in the rear and placed canvas bags over their heads. Then one of the robbers drove the truck two blocks to a quiet residential side street where a 1968 Chevrolet was waiting.

Hurriedly they transferred 19 bags filled with bills—mostly used, dirty currency that could easily be passed. They left eight bags of coins and two other bags of bills they apparently overlooked.

Then they took off in the getaway car, later discovered to have been stolen two days earlier. Roadblocks were set up when a car fitting the description was seen heading for downtown Brooklyn but the bandits escaped.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Profit taking seat the Toronto stock market headlining to active midmorning trading today.

The market climbed sharply from the opening Monday as investors reacted to tax reforms proposed by the federal government last week.

The profit taking actually began in mid-session Wednesday although the market still closed the session with a sharp advance.

The total gain since Monday was the best three-day gain on record.

The industrial index, in the three days, rose 11.38 points, or 4.34 per cent.

But on index today, industrials dropped 1.89 to 190.38. Golds gained .18 to 137.67, base metals .22 to 119.23 and western oils .38 to 207.65.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,918,000 shares compared with 1,102,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Losses outnumbered gains 185 to 156 with 213 issues unchanged.

Trading in Metagami and Alshibi was delayed at the opening while the companies released further drilling results from their property in the Sturgeon Lake, Ont., area.

Matagami opened down 1½ to 26¼ and Alshibi, ¼ to 13¾.

New Quebec Reglaur lost 2¼ to 21¼. Bank of Nova Scotia 1¼ to 25, Imo 1¾ to 43¾ and CPR 1 to 77¼.

On Wednesday, the industrial index closed up 1.49 to 192.18 after being up 2.27 in the first 2½ hours.

The index has risen 11.38 points, or 6.34 per cent, since Monday, breaking its previous three-day record of 4.28 per cent set April 1 through April 3, 1968.

The three-day upswing has moved the index to within six points of its record high of 198.77 reached last May 29.

Western oils rose 5.37 to 207.37 and base metals 2.16 to 118.91. Golds slipped .17 to 137.49 after touching their low for the year of 137.24.

Oils and metals appeared to be caught up in the buying excitement of the general market while golds apparently reacted to declining European bullion prices.

The industrial advance was widespread with 14 of the 17 industrial components showing gains. Chemicals, merchandisers and utilities were lower.

Oil refiners, general manufacturers and banks paced the advance.

Oshawa A rose 1 to 31, Canadian Imperial Bank 1 to 33 and Imperial Oil ¾ to 47¾.

Falconbridge jumped 3¼ to 153½ and McIntyre, which holds about a 27-per-cent interest in Falconbridge, 6 to 145.

Observers said the moves appear to be in anticipation of a possible settlement of a strike by Mine, Mill and Smelter workers that began in March.

Central-Del Rio slipped ¼ to 11¾ although the company increased its semi-annual dividend to 17 cents from 10 cents.

Sherritt rose 1¼ to 16¼ after a brief trading halt to match orders. The company increased its semi-annual dividend to 25 cents from 10 cents.

Kaps was up ⅛ to 9¼. The stock first traded Wednesday after being split 3-for-1.

Volume totalled 4,721,000 shares compared with 2,920,000 Tuesday. Gains outnumbered losers 400 to 309 with 213 issues unchanged.

Manpower Starts Horsepower

Elmer Young demonstrates the art of cranking one's vintage 1917 Ford to get it started. The automobile, one of eight owned and restored by the Ameliasburg farmer, is on display at the Canadian Tire Store.

Those Old Tin Lizzies Really Turn Him On

By BARRY GRILLS
(Staff Reporter)

What has wheels, has to be cranked to be started and travels the highways?

The answer is a 1917 Ford — now considered an artique, such as the one on display at Canadian Tire Corp. in Belleville as part of open house celebrations that begin tomorrow.

The car, found, owned and restored by Elmer Young of RR one Amelisburgh, is one of eight vintage automobiles owned by Mr. Young.

"I collect them and restore them," said Mr. Young. "I've traveled all over Ontario and Quebec to get parts."

At present, he is working on a 1908 Ford, the first made by Ford manufactured by Henry Ford.

Mr. Young is actually a farmer and his interest in cars is merely a hobby. "It comes after a quite a lot of study."

He keeps the cars he restores, despite the fact there is a great demand now for vintage restored cars.

Other cars owned by Mr. Young include a 1916 Chev., a 1915 Ford and a 1926 Ford.

His car is on display at Canadian Tire to give that store's open house beginning tomorrow a historic flavor.

Mr. Young will be at the store during the rest of the week to talk about his hobby to spectators.

TRY OUT A CHEVY at VOLKSWAGEN

Try out any of the cars people trade in for new V-We. We get all kinds.

But we don't sell them again just like that. We check them out first. Give them a safety and performance inspection. Fix whatever needed fixing. Then guarantee the repair of every major warranty part 100% for 30 days or 1000 miles. Whichever comes first.

Incidentally, the guarantee comes with all our used cars.

Even the Volkswagens.

Student-run College Is on Rocks But Sale Would Bring Profit

TORONTO (CP) — "This is the first time we can't hang our troubles on anyone else," Rochdale College president John Bradford said Wednesday in announcing the college's 13-storey building likely will be put up for sale.

He told a news conference that the failure of many residents of the experimental educational community to pay their rent has put the college on the financial rocks.

The college was opened 14 months ago in an ambitious attempt to give students a place where they could live and learn, free from the rules and regulations of what they termed the Establishment.

"This time it's the kids themselves," said Jack Jones, the college's minister of information. "We don't know what to do about that—there's no external angry man."

The 18-man college council decided to recommend selling the building because nearly half the 850 residents refused to pay rent. The college was unable to meet the $26,000 mortgage payment owed Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. at the beginning of this month.

Although the council expects some college members to pay for refinancing at a general meeting Tuesday, Mr. Jones said they would only provide a financial collapse for another six months.

He said the college already has two tentative offers to buy the building for close to $2,000,000. This would yield a profit of nearly $2,000,000 after mortgages and other obligations were met.

Despite this latest upheaval in its short lifetime of internal crises, some Rochdale leaders hope that a profit from the sale of the building could be used to start a new community on a more modest and realistic scale.

Rochdale began tentative operations in 1967 as an outgrowth of Campus Co-operative Residences Inc., a student run co-op providing cheap accommodation in 30 Toronto houses.

The first Rochdalers, including 25-year-old Brad Read, started seminars and discussion groups in the house in order to fill the educational gap for those who found university learning stifling or irrelevant.

Campus Co-operative got together with a city real estate development firm to build Rochdale, with the co-op contributing $200,000, the real estate company arranging mortgaging and the CMHC putting up 90 per cent of the $5,700,000 total cost. Ownership was vested in a company called Co-Operative College Residences Inc.

Rents in this cross between an apartment building and a college ranged from about $80 a month Ir a single furnished room to $130 for an unfurnished one-bedroom apartment.

All residents pay $25 a year membership dues in the college itself, but only about 200 resident are full-time Rochdale students. The other live in Rochdale and attend regular universities, mainly the University of Toronto.

The concept of total freedom raised problems from the start —ranging from who was to take out the garbage to the control of drug users and sellers, gate-crashers looking for free meals, and wandering hippies wanting a place to sleep.

When a college council was formed after the initial period of chaos, residents engaged in interminable debates on the pros and cons of adopting rules and committees to keep some semblance of order.

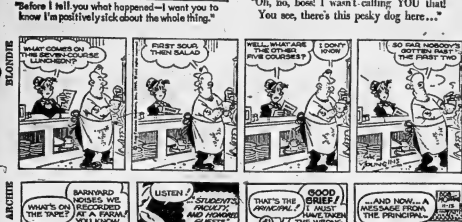
In the end, a form of do-it-yourself government was established which had the effect of clearing out some of the non-residents and stopping the sale of hard drugs such as speed—methedrine.

Mr. Jones said that although a significant minority of Rochdale students made a success of their attempts to learn through open seminars devoid of normal classroom structure, many could not adjust to the wide-open atmosphere.

Too few students could make the leap into commitment that was needed for self-starting activities to succeed, Mr. Jones said.

At their news conference the council members answered with a chorus of "never" when asked if Rochdale had failed.

Mr. Jones said they had learned "a certain realism" which they would put to good use in establishing Rochdale's successor.



Wells Seeks Support For Ontario Medicare

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Health Minister Thomas Wells Wednesday defended the province's adoption of the federal medical health insurance plan and called on Conservative party members to back that decision against "the socialists."

He rallied an about 500 party members at a Conservative businessmen's club luncheon not to "fall into the hands of those who seek to divide us . . . into the hands of the socialists."

He said Ontario entered the health plan on the basis of a "political decision" to get back tens of millions of dollars in taxes it pays to Ottawa.

Of the $188,000,000 the province is receiving in medical health grants from the federal government, "every cent of it is being spent on health," he said.

Mr. Wells assured his audience, which included Premier Robarts and four other cabinet ministers, that there will re-view its policies on premium levels and payments to doctors in the light of experience.

He said the government is conducting surveys of whether doctors are charging patients more than the 90 per cent of the Ontario Medical Association fee schedule provided under OHSIP.

The present policy will be reviewed when results of these surveys are available, he said.

"I don't want to lead this province down the road of state-socialistic medicine" that had been taken in Britain and Belgium, he added.

"We have to be very careful that we don't jeopardize the high plateau of health services we have achieved in this province."

Lazy Praise Common Sense

It is a universal delusion of mankind that while other people's true motives are transparent to us, our motives remain opaque to them.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Think of the impact of your comments about people, and stick with the unquestionable facts rather than indulge in speculative opinions or gossip.

Charges Made U.S. Officer Murdered 109 Civilians

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — U.S. Army officials say they have completed an investigation into charges of multiple murder of Vietnam civilians by a young American lieutenant, but that a decision whether to try him remains to be made.

A civilian lawyer representing Lelut, William L. Calley Jr. of Waynesville, N.C., said Wednesday night he was unsure how many killings were attributed to his client but had heard the figure 109 mentioned. He said Calley was not guilty.

The lawyer, George W. Latimer, said the slayings were alleged to have occurred in March, 1968, when Calley commanded a platoon of the 11th Infantry Brigade in a raid on a village near Quang Ngai.

The charges were brought against Calley Sept. 5, one day before he was due to be discharged after two years of service. Officials said he was retained by the army pending disposition of the case and attached to a company at Fort Benning.

A preliminary hearing, at which Latimer represented Calley, was held two weeks ago. Officials said a report on the hearing would be submitted to Maj.-Gen. Orwin Talbott, post commander, who would decide whether the lieutenant should be tried by court martial.

They added that Calley was not under arrest or confinement.

Post authorities declined to give any details of the murder charges. In Washington, the Pentagon refused to comment.

Mafia Said Active in Major Canadian Cities

MONTREAL (CP) — Tentacles of the Mafia extend into every major Canadian city, flourishing because of lack of communication between police forces and the public, a former Montreal police sergeant said Wednesday.

Georges Springale gave the Montreal Advertising and Sales Executive Club a list of Mafia enterprises:

—In Montreal, it "dominates the pizza trade" among other activities.

—In Toronto, it has large investment in real estate and a Bay Street brokerage firm.

—In Halifax, it has set up an elaborate white-slave trade.

—In Vancouver, heroin is smuggled into Canada and then distributed through Canada.

—In Calgary, the Mafia has its finger in a huge betting centre that handles millions of dollars weekly.

Mr. Springale described a Montrealer as a kingpin of the Mafia's entire Canada operations.

The organization's rules were silence, fear, loyalty and terror.

The penalty for non-compliance was death "but the ultimate penalty" is not reserved exclusively for gang members.

FBI Questions Four About Bombings

NEW YORK (AP) — FBI agents and New York City police have arrested three men and a woman after two of the men allegedly attempted to place time bombs aboard U.S. Army trucks in a midtown National Guard Armory.

The arrests Wednesday night came hours after a bomb exploded in the Criminal Courts Building—the fourth major blast in the city in less than two days. One woman suffered minor injuries.

The FBI said the four arrested persons—two of them identified as being associated with radical publications—would be questioned about "additional bombings in the New York City area."

Early Tuesday bombs were set off in the RCA Building in Rockefeller Centre, the General Motors Building on Fifth Avenue and the Chase Manhattan Bank Building in the downtown financial district.

No one was seriously hurt but those blasts caused heavy property damage. There have been a dozen unsolved blasts in the city in recent months.

Fordham, Wisconsin and Princeton Students Stage Protests

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some students at New York's Fordham University wielded lead pipes to turn back unarmed campus guards, then ended a sit-in Wednesday night before police arrived. Fourteen guards were injured, police said.

Elsewhere, protesters flew the Viet Cong flag at the Milwaukee campus of the University of Wisconsin and a group of Princeton University students tried unsuccessfully to blockade a building.

At Fordham, about 75 students seized administrative offices in mid-afternoon to protest the former Roman Catholic school's Reserve Officer Training Corps program. About half left, but 36 vowed to stay all night.

Unarmed campus police tried to break through barricades of broken furniture and overturned file cabinets. Some of the students hit them with lead pipes and threw hot water.

After the guards retreated and city police were asked to help, the protesters broke two windows and scattered across the campus. Six were arrested.

The 14 injured guards were taken to several hospitals. Police said two of the injuries were serious.

A university spokesman estimated the damage at "thousands and thousands of dollars." He said students did not try to break into the files.

Fordham has 12,000 students, 8,000 of them undergraduates. For 128 years it was a Jesuit institution, but earlier this year it added 15 laymen—a majority—to its board of trustees and became nonsectarian.

Last month, a referendum on the ROTC program found 53 per cent of the students participating favored continuation of its current voluntary status.

At the Milwaukee campus of the University of Wisconsin, several dozen persons behind a Viet Cong flag tried to take over the ROTC office. None of them —one a professor—got inside before 15 ROTC cadets barricaded the door.

Shell Gas Increase Is Called Inflationary

OTTAWA (CP) — Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford Wednesday branded as inflationary the recently-announced increase in prices by Shell Canada Ltd.

He was replying in the Commons to Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) who asked whether he would refer the increases to the prices and incomes commission.

Mr. Basford said there is "no doubt in my mind" the increases were inflationary. But it was up to the commission which areas it studied.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked whether Mr. Basford's singling out the Shell increase means the government now is ready to specify "what does in fact constitute restraint in a given situation."

Mr. Basford said he was not reluctant to specify given increases as inflationary.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) asked whether the proposed wage increase in the dispute involving International Nickel Co. Ltd. of Sudbury may prompt the minister to express a similar opinion.

Mr. Basford said that if such a statement seems desirable he will make it.

Moon Shows Set Up

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Live and in color from the Ocean of Storms, astronauts Charles Conrad Jr. and Alan L. Bean will star in two television moon specials — an early-morning walk-on and a late, late show lasting nearly five hours.

The two moon shows will total eight hours, 35 minutes and 11 separate transmissions during flight and on the lunar surface will cover 13 hours, 25 minutes.

"We'll show you as much as we can of the things that we're doing," Bean said in a recent interview.

"Our idea on television is one of showing the people on earth what we're doing. We haven't got anything special thought out as far as programming, or fun-ies or anything."

First of the moon specials starts at 6:52 a.m. WEDnesday and lasts 3½ hours as Conrad and Bean leave the lander and begin setting up equipment for experiments before collecting moon samples.

How much of the telecasts is relayed to the public depends, of course, on the various television networks. In Canada, invaluable aspects of the space flight will be carried by the CBC and CTV.

The second moon show starts at 12:42 a.m. Thursday and lasts four hours and 55 minutes. With the astronauts off-camera during their more extensive explorations TV networks will have a visual problem. NBC plans to use marionettes to simulate the astronauts in one-sixth gravity environment.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Light snow continues over Northern Ontario. Cold westerly winds and snowflurries will develop throughout southern Ontario and continue Saturday.

'March Against Death' Starts in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The muffled drums stuttered their funeral cadence, the bobbing candles flickered in the chill breeze, and the solemn "March against Death" filed before the White House.

"My son, Timothy Clark," a middle-aged man with tears on his cheeks called out as he strode past the gate of the executive mansion, his slain son's name flapping against his coat.

The night grew colder Thursday and it rained but still it came, the long procession — widely gapped by its own obedience to traffic lights—bearing candles and the names of Vietnam war dead, Vietnamese villages ruined.

The first day of the second moratorium of the peace movement seeking an immediate end to the Vietnam War ended quietly. The second day, prelude to what could be the biggest peace demonstration in the United States annals, began the same way as the march continued through the night.

The march, which began at dark in a tangle of commuter traffic, was all that was happening. There were no incidents. The marchers said they would continue until dawn Saturday, until the name of every U.S. soldier slain in the long war had been called to the president's house, then dropped in coffins at the foot of the Capitol grounds.

Washington police guarded intersections along the 4.2-mile route to direct traffic. At the White House, a sidewalk barricade was opened to allow the single file of marchers, headed by their seven drummers, along the wide sidewalk.

The order had gone out to Washington's 3,000 policemen from Chief Jerry V. Wilson:

"Members of the force, in handling the many unusual circumstances that arise, shall be patient, discreet, and solicitous of the citizens of our own city, as well as the multitude of visitors here during the demonstration. . . .

"Arrests for minor infractions shall be held to an absolute minimum. . . ."

Demonstrators Begin Journey to Capital

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Church services, vigils and rallies today marked the course of the second Vietnam Moratorium as the Vietnam protest demonstrations headed toward a weekend climax across the United States.

Amid the protests, there were expressions of support for President Nixon's Vietnam policies.

Busloads of demonstrators, many of them from colleges and universities in the northeast and midwest, headed for Washington to take part in the mass march scheduled for Saturday. A similar march will be held in San Francisco.

Generally the level of local activity was down compared with the first Moratorium Day Oct. 15 as organizers concentrated on getting people to Washington where march sponsors expect a turn-out of 250,000.

There were exceptions. In Gallup, N.M., a city where no m a j or peace demonstrations ever had been held before, 100 persons turned out for a peaceful candlelight vigil Thursday night.

They were opposed by 50 anti-Moratorium demonstrators who kept up a stream of shouted insults and then sang God Bless America. The anti-war group was quiet through the insults but joined in the singing.

Two rallies protesting U.S. policy in Vietnam drew more than 5,000 persons out into cold, windy weather in Chicago. The first at the downtown Civic Center Plaza was sponsored by the Business Executives Move for Vietnam Peace.

Ernest Gruening, former Democratic senator from Alaska, told the rally that Nixon's Vietnam peace plans were "a blueprint to prolong, even to perpetuate" the war.

In New York City, 2,000 attended a rally in Times Square where pediatrician and war critic, Dr. Benjamin Spock, criticized the president as "unable to end the war."

Again and again the crowd was urged to make the trip to Washington Saturday. Entertainers who participated include Pete Seeger, Tony Randall, Mitch Miller, Shirley MacLaine, Peter, Paul and Mary and Leonard Bernstein.

Astronauts Off to Moon

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 12 astronauts rode a Saturn V rocket into earth orbit through a thunderstorm today, successfully completing the first step in man's second moon-landing expedition.

The world's most powerful rocket thundered away at 11:22 am. EST to start Charles (Pete) Conrad Jr., Richard F. Gordon Jr. and Alan L. Bean toward a hoped-for pinpoint landing in the Ocean of Storms to begin the first detailed exploration of the moon.

The weather conditions were the worst for any American space launching. The storm moved into the area about an hour before the liftoff and for a while threatened to delay the launch.

But officials decided the conditions were satisfactory and gave the go-ahead.

Conrad agreed with the decision, saying: "Sounds good to me."

President and Mrs. Nixon were among the thousands of spectators watching the launching in the rain. They had only a brief glimpse of the rocket before it was enveloped in clouds seconds after launch.

To reach the moon, Apollo 12 first must orbit the earth 1¼ times in 2½ hours while the spacemen make certain their spaceship systems are functioning. Then a second burst from the Saturn V booster rocket's third-stage engine is to propel them toward their target, 227,272 miles away.

Several seconds after the spacecraft cleared the launch pad, mission controllers reported a sudden drop-out in data and Conrad later said: "I don't know what happened. I'm not sure we didn't get hit by lightning."

Observers noted two lightning bolts offshore just after the launching.

The signals returned quickly and Conrad said: "That was one of the better simulations of trouble."

"We've had a couple of cardiac arrests down here, Pete," said a mission controller.

"We didn't have time up here," replied Conrad. "We're all organized again."

Drug Ban Said Aid To Organized Crime

WINNIPEG (CP) — Current laws restricting sale and possession of marijuana create "new markets for organized crime" and should be done away with, Rolland Penner, professor of criminal law at the University of Manitoba, said Thursday.

Mr. Penner said sale and possession of the "soft" drug should be legalized in a way "analogous" to restrictions on liquor.

He was speaking during the first of two hearings being held here by the federal commission investigating the non-medical use of drugs.

An indication of drug use at the university was quickly given as an instructor in political science revealed the results of an anonymous poll of 107 first-year students who were asked two questions: Have you ever taken marijuana or hashish and have you used it three or more times?

Thirty-three per cent of the students answered yes to the first question and 25 per cent said yes to the second.

Police Unhappy At Curbs

TORONTO (CP) — Imminent changes in regulations governing the behavior of Ontario policemen drew criticism Thursday from police association spokesmen.

OWRC Report Prompts Concern Over Moira River Arsenic Content

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

County health officials are keeping a constant eye on Moira Lake after an Ontario Water Resources Commission report questioned the lake's arsenic content.

Health authorities yesterday emphasized there is no cause for alarm and the present levels of arsenic pose no human threat.

"We're keeping continual watch on it and the OWRC even more so," confirmed Dr. C. R. Lenk, Hastings and Prince Edward Counties health officer.

The situation is outlined in an OWRC biological survey of the Moira River and its tributaries.

Moira Lake, a popular local summer resort south of Madoc, is one of the watershed's major features.

The OWRC report warns that concentrations of arsenic confirmed in water and certain fish raises the question of "suitability" for human consumption.

"Considering existing concentrations in Moira Lake, the possibility of acute toxic effects would seem remote," the report says.

"However, the implications of the seasonal use of (the lake) for domestic supplies by cottagers and resort owners and the consumption of game fish, should be assessed by health authorities."

Dr. Lenk said domestic water supplies around the lake are mainly drawn from wells and that the arsenic level "is not harmful in its present condition."

Health officials had been keeping tabs on the situation for "at least a year" and "there is no danger," he stressed.

The OWRC report quotes the arsenic content at 0.16 parts per million in water and 0.06 parts per million in game fish.

"The standard for drinking water of 0.05 ppm has been generally accepted, although maximum permissible concentrations as high as 0.5 ppm have been recognized," says the report.

It is estimated that a dose of 130 milligrams of arsenic causes death and 10 milligrams is sufficient to produce acute toxic symptoms, says the OWRC document.

By comparison, Dr. Lenk estimates that consumption of about 260 pints of water would be necessary to produce a fatal effect — a phenomenon, he observed, which would mean the victim dying from something other than poisoning.

However, the OWRC report notes that "arsenic excretion is slow and cumulative toxic effects may occur from frequent consumption of smaller dosages."

A source of the arsenic contamination is near Marmora — the community of Deloro, once the company village of the now - defunct Deloro Smelting and Refining Ltd., operation.

The company ceased operations in the late 1950s.

There has been a substantial decrease in arsenic concentrations carried down stream from Deloro since 1958, says the report — attributed largely to control measures taken by the company.

"Nevertheless," finds the OWRC, "concentrations below Deloro are consistently higher than those above Deloro and represent significant contamination in view of the (OWRC) objective of 0.05 parts-per million.

The arsenic contributions also appear more widely distributed in the past nine years, says the report, and now exceed downstream into Stoco Lake at Tweed.

Further control measures to contain arsenic-bearing wastes should result in more acceptable levels downstream, says the OWRC.

However, the report poses another possibility: Re-contamination of lake sediment from arsenic in sediments. Long term detrimental effects on lake-bottom organisms must also be recognized.

Dr. Lenk also noted the possibility that arsenic could be contained in runoff from mineral-bearing rocks.

The OWRC surveyors recommended further study to delineate arsenic contamination sources.

Further control measures are required to ensure that arsenic concentrations downstream from Deloro meet the OWRC 0.05 ppm objective and permit normal propagation of aquatic life, says the report.

Chemical and biological studies should continue to monitor all levels of arsenic in water, sediment and aquatic life downstream through the watershed to Stoco Lake.

The report also surveys results of domestic waste at Madoc and Tweed.

It recommends improved treatment, including "adequate chlorination to protect water quality in the Moira River, Stoco Lake and Deer Creek, near Madoc.

Further south, the OWRC surveyors noted steps taken by Corby Distillery to cool, clean and control process wastes — which "should lead to improved water quality" in the river.

New Anti-Pollution Equipment

Elevated view of industrial waste purification plant at Corby Distilleries Ltd. north of Belleville with capacity of 200,000 gallons per day and removing up to 1800 pounds of organic matter. Picture taken from one of the plant's, elevated water storage tanks, shows aerator tank at bottom right, clarifier tank and 1,100,000 gallon capacity lagoon covering an acre of ground.

Purification Plant Will Cut Down River Pollution

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Industrial water pollution and the increasing need for its control is headline news these days but Corby Distillers Ltd. here is taking corrective action.

Last month, following three years of planning and construction costing more than half a million dollars, an industrial waste pollution control plant went into operation at the Thurlow township distillery.

It is believed to be the first ecomplete pollution abatement plant for a Canadian distillery.

The end result is that water used in the plant operation is returned to the Moira river clean and rich in oxygen.

Planned and designed by industrial waste pollution control plant started back in 1966 when the company approached a series of experiments in conjuction with consultants and with scientists from the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Following laboratory and pilot scale tests lasting more than two years, a successful method of purifying plant wastes was developed and led to construction of the half million dollar plant at Corbyville.

The Corbyville waste treatment plant consists of two water cooling towers capable of cooling a total 1,900 gallons per minute from 155 degrees down to 80 degrees, and a waste purification system with its 200,000 gallons per day capacity.

The waste purification system includes an aerator tank of 200,000 gallons capacity, a clarifier tank of 50,000 gallons and a one-acre sewage lagoon holding 1,100,000 gallons.

In the whisky distilling process large quantities of water are used and most of this must be eventually discharged through sewers back into the Moira River.

All this waste water is hot — up to 155 degrees — and some of it contains a small portion of the grain used in the distilling process which cannot be recovered either as alcohol or animal feed.

"We recover up to 98 or 99 per cent of the unused part of the grain which is processed as stock feed, but it was that last one or two per cent which was causing the trouble," stated F. H. Bellstedt, assistant distillery manager.

The combined effect of the heated water and the small percentage of organic matter spells pollution as food enough to deprive the Moira River of life giving oxygen.

The two water cooling towers which constantly emit heavy clouds of steam, have been in operation at Corbyville for up to a year with the waste purification plant having been constructed during the past summer.

All clean, but hot, waste water from the distillery is segregated in a separate sewer system from which it is pumped over one of the cooling towers to be discharged into the river.

Water containing grain residues is collected in a separate sewer system and then pumped to the treatment plant for chemical and biological purification, followed by clarification and final stabilization in the lagoon where it remains for five days before being returned to the river.

Water containing plant wastes reaches the treatment plant at about 60 degrees which is warm enough to assure efficient wintertime operation of the plant.

The final result is a cool, practically clear water, suitable for discharge into any river system.

PECI Students Aid Mentally Retarded

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — What's the matter with kids today?

A group of teen-agers belonging to a Prince Edward Collegiate Institute group called PEYMR (Prince Edward Youth for the Mentally Retarded) are rapidly proving that many county "kids" are pointed in the right direction.

President of PEYMR, Dorothy May, Grade 13 student at PECI assisted by co-worker, Liz Carman recently organized a walkathon that has raised $2,200, to date, for mentally retarded adults in the county. This money will be used in the erection of an adult workshop where mentally retarded persons over 18 can learn trades geared to their abilities.

As Dorothy explained, "Nowever small the project these people work on, it gives them a sense of achievement."

For the mentally retarded in Prince Edward the adult workshop will represent a special kind of college. Those who attend will be graduates of Happy Hours, Elmbrook. The two-room, 36-pupil school is now affording educational facilities for county children who could not cope with the main stream classes in other public schools.

Without YAC (Youth Across Canada) it is conceivable that PEYMR might never have evolved. Last year two PECI students, Connie Wight and Suzanne Martin were delegated to attend a YAC conference in Hamilton. All girls enjoy gala feats but YAC represented a whole new language for the county students who joined the conference. When PECI's two delegates returned home, a meeting was called at the school and all pupils were "clued in" on the facts surrounding mental retardation. It was decided to form a club that would meet twice monthly to devise money making plans to support such projects as the adult workshop.

"There is no list of members," observed Liz Carman, for the kids come to the meetings when they feel like it. When we held our walkathon last month 139 students, not all regular attendants at our meetings, turned out to support PEYMR."

With a successful walkathon only a few weeks behind them Dorothy and Liz already are planning for a puppet show at PECI next week with benefits, of course, to PEYMR.

A "big brother, big sister' program is also checked on their calendar. Members of PEYMR, under this plan would each "adopt" a pupil at Happy Hours School for an ultra-special day on the town. The child might be taken to see the Santa Claus parade next month, or whisked off on a sight-seeing tour of the historic points that made Prince Edward. This would represent the first direct contact between members of PEYMR and the youngsters they are eager to aid.

Not just a school days "thing" PEYMR has led two of its members into nursing careers in the past year. Former PEYMR workers Pamela Foster and Debbie Beazley, both of Picton, have begun their training with hopes of eventually working with mentally handicapped children.

Prince Edward Collegiate guidance teacher Larry Richardson has been with PEYMR all the way and as far as Liz Carman is concerned he represents "our stand by and our guiding light." He is also chairman of the Adult Services Committee of the Prince Edward County Assoc. for the Mentally Retarded.

What is the general attitude of youth toward the mentally retarded? According to Liz, most of the students at PECI are aware of the fact that these youngsters are handicapped. "But some of them don't like to think about it, it's easier to make fun than it is to do something," she noted. Dorothy supported this statement adding, "Many adults hold backward views on the mentally retarded."

Both Dorothy and Liz are anticipating next week's puppet show, then there are decorations to be made for the PEYMR Christmas Party, and after that . . .

What's the matter with kids today? Many of them are just too busy helping others to make a list of their problems.

Aiding Retarded

Liz Carman and Dorothy May, both of Picton, examine possible props for next week's puppet show for PEYMR, a student group that aids the mentally retarded.

Very Rewarding Year, Appeal Members Told

By LINDA GELDART

Victory is not always 100 per cent. Sometimes it is a little less.

In the case of this year's United Appeal Campaign, it was 94 per cent of the projected goal of $130,000 — with returns still coming in.

The picture was far from black, however, at Wednesday night's United Appeal victory dinner held at the Club Canara.

The atmosphere was distinctly one of satisfaction with a job well-done, as an audience of about 300 applauded some of the individuals responsible.

Giving her report on the 1969 campaign, chairman Mrs. Jean Smith looked back on her year, terming it "very rewarding", adding she welcomed the opportunity to meet so many fine people and community-minded citizens of Belleville.

Mrs. Smith, obviously pleased with the results saw the $122,000 collected as a "good amount of money for our community at this time."

Mrs. Pauline Clare won the Enos David Award for going more than 100 per cent over the objective set for the special residential division Mrs. Smith announced.

Master of ceremonies for the evening, Linton Reed, introduced Mayor J. R. Scott, who congratulated the organizers of the Appeal "who worked on behalf of all the citizens of Belleville."

A special award presentation was made on behalf of the United Community Services by public relations and publicity chairman, Ken Fleming to Gerry Putnam.

Mr. Putnam, an art teacher at Prince Edward Collegiate, was responsible for swathing the United Appeal Campaign Caboose headquarters in psychedelic colors.

Next year a campaign chairman, Jack Bennett, who acted in the capacity of treasurer for the 1969 Appeal, when asked how he viewed his appointment, termed it as a "big responsibility."

"I have been involved with the Appeal since last April, and I enjoyed it. Naturally to succeed in this job, you have to have help."

"If I can get some of the tremendous workers that helped make this campaign such a success, I will consider myself lucky. All I need are the volunteers — I'll organize them if they are willing to do the work." he added.

Mr. Bennett was retired after working at Northern Electric for 42 years, is past chairman to the advisory committee of the Bay of Quinte High School Board.

Election Race Broadens

TRENTON (Staff) — George Greer and Dr. W. R. Patrick have announced they will enter the Dec. 1 municipal election as candidates for town council.

"It's time for a change — as long as we have a split in council Trenton will not progress," Mr. Greer stressed.

"Like any thinking Trentonian I am disturbed with the lawsuits that the town never seems to win and the negative approach from some areas, plus of course the bad publicity that Trenton has received in recent months."

"If elected to council I would like to see us look to the future and forget the errors of the past," he continued, adding "I'll do anything I can to improve the image of Trenton."

Mr. Greer has long been active in civic affairs, having served for more than a decade as chairman of the Trenton branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses, on the Trenton Recreation Committee and also on the Trenton Board of Education prior to its dissolution.

He emphasizes the need for attracting industry to provide jobs for the youth of Trenton and was in accord with the decision that the new future Trenton council, Hastings County Board of Education and Trenton Public Utilities commission elections should coincide.

"I am convinced that if we take a positive approach with the support of service clubs, churches and other organizations, we can forge ahead with a new purpose," Mr. Greer concluded.

A member of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board for the past four years, Dr. Patrick feels that he has become familiar with the problems of development and expansion.

He stressed the great need for council to plan for the future of the town and said that he felt a responsibility to help in developing this objective.

A resident of Trenton for the past 16 years, Dr. Patrick has been associated with the Chamber of Commerce and the Boy Scout Association and he is a past president of the Rotary Club of Trenton.

He graduated from the University of Toronto and has served as President of the Bay of Quinte Dental Society, Charter President of the Kente Society, Academy of General Dentistry and is a Directors of the Ontario Division, Academy of Dentistry.

Dr. Patrick was also active in the organization group that funded the Tri-Service Club swimming pool at the Trenton High School.

In summation, Dr. Patrick emphasized that the town must look ahead and leave the problems of the past behind.

'Wanted' Santa Found

By BARRY GRILLS
(Staff Reporter)

"Better watch out; better not cry; better not shout — I'm telling you why . . . Santa Claus is coming to town."

With no Santa Claus parade in Belleville this year, the grand old man of Christmas will not be making his sojourn down the streets of the city.

However, the giver of gifts will be at Towers department store from Nov. 22 until Dec. 6.

An advertisement in The Intelligencer calling for applications for the job of Santa Claus at that store, created a flurry of calls.

The ad asked for two men with suitable build and a liking of children.

It did not in particular ask for the more detailed characteristics of the man from the North Pole — the very vocal "ho, ho ho," for instance — but that could be an automatic requirement.

As Kenneth Gear, store manager, put it, "I don't think it's any different now. The tradition is the same."

Still, he added, a little more padding may be needed for the recipients of the position to obtain that "large" joviality that is characteristic of St. Nick.

Of course the applicants, like Santa, have to have a happy disposition and a love for children.

After all, a lot of Belleville children are going to be sitting on his knee before Christmas Day arrives.

COLLECTION OF LEAVES AND RUBBISH

Leaves and rubbish will be collected from all streets in the City commencing on Monday, November 17th. Householders having leaves and rubbish for pick-up are requested to place same in piles at the edge of the travelled portion of the street before 8.00 a.m. of the above noted date.

Work crews will be working on both sides of the River at the same time, commencing at the centre of the City and working outwards.

Enquiries relevant to this program should be directed to Telephone No. 968-6481 - Extension 48.

Please do not place leaves and rubbish out after your street has been cleaned.

Mr. Sharp's Journeys

Assured of the support of the Prime Minister if not of the public, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has put near-disaster behind him and stolen away to the Middle East and (just to show Canada does not play favorites) Israel.

A stop in Teheran came first, for trade talks, and then he winged his way on to Israel — but not before he had received a "very warm invitation" from the Shah of Iran for a future visit by Prime Minister Trudeau.

If as seems likely Mr. Trudeau also receives an invitation to Israel he is going to have a busy schedule of State visits. Next year for instance there is Japan, for Expo 70. Now these new possibilities.

As for Mr. Sharp, his flights over the timeless deserts of the Middle East may have caused him to muse that time does heel those wounds; that while his less than perfect performances over aid to Biafra and the continuing attempt to establish relations with Communist China are still fresh in mind, the political fallout from them at least is receding.

If the minister keeps getting those invitations for Mr. Trudeau he should find himself in even stronger favor with the Prime Minister and who knows but somewhere along the road, ultimately, there may be an ambassador's post. But first he must show the flag around the world — In those places at least where we still are represented following the recent elimination of a number of posts deemed unnecessary under the government's austerity measures.

School Additions

The prospect of another secondary school being established in Prince Edward County and an addition to Kente public school is encouraging in light of the overcrowding and lack of facilities that now exist.

A recent meeting in Amelisburg addressed by County Education Director John McNeil revealed not only lack of space (some 400 Amelisburg secondary school students for instance are educated in Belleville schools) but a lack of library, gymnasium and special education facilities in some elementary schools.

The proposed new secondary school would complement the public school facilities of Kente and enable those Amelisburg students now studying in Belleville to stay on home ground.

On the recreational side, libraries and gymnasiums are of prime importance. Sport must be encouraged; that all too often it is not is one reason why work tends to get the students down. Outdoor sport in particular promotes physical fitness and a proper mental approach to studies. A well-organized program of competitive recreation would go a long way toward eliminating the need for psychologists.

That is the whole purpose of recreation, to stimulate both mind and body. In the provision of new school facilities there is an opportunity to ensure that these facilities are included where they have been lacking in the past.

Key Men Die

While it is easy to quote the old axiom about no one being indispensable, it is not difficult either to appreciate the enormity of the loss of six key executives of the Churchill Falls power project in Labrador.

There are people, families and prominent business personnel for example, who make a practice of travelling in different aircraft so that in the event of one crashing the others will survive. It would have been a prudent move in this case, but of course now it is too late.

One wonders also why Churchill Falls (Labrador) president Donald J. McPartland, reported to have been engaged on a whirlwind speaking tour of the lower St. Lawrence region and north to Labrador, required no fewer than five top executives along with him.

While the chances of such a tragedy being repeated are remote, the possibility nevertheless must be considered. Thus the lesson of this affair will not be lost upon other companies.

Individuality

As Life Magazine pointed out recently, high school fashion these days is a case of doing your own thing. A recent lineup of seven Ontario scholars at Prince Edward Collegiate's graduation exercises was eloquent of what Life termed this "happy protest in school fashion."

Aside from two young men in dark suits there were five young ladies — all but one in regulation style graduation dresses, hemlines knee-length or slightly above. The exception was a brave lass in a blazer and micro-mini with ankle boots.

Ontario scholars all — but each with her own particular flair when it comes to contemporary fashion.

Nasser Keeps Pot Boiling

Arab-Israeli Conflict Jeopardizes Business Activity

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

NEW YORK (AP) — The 22-year-old Arab-Israeli crisis has exploded three times into major war. Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser now has called for a fourth round, proclaiming "fire and blood" the only answer for Arabs.

Is war, then, just around the corner?

Well-informed sources think a major war at this time is unlikely, but they report an atmosphere of gloom pervading the American business community in the Arab East, where United States' interests run into billions of dollars.

Endless Middle East conflict could eventually drive all Americans out and also be a heavy blow to Western Europe, which depends on Arab oil.

Nasser's domestic front remains weak and brittle. Now 52 and frequently ailing, he can hardly afford another disaster like that of 1967.

The Russians have spent about $2,000,000,000 since 1967 rebuilding and retraining Arab forces. Their 3,000 military advisers in Egypt are often reported frustrated by the difficulties they find in trying to get Egyptians to think in modern terms.

But Moscow has brought Arab forces—Egyptian and Syrian—back to the point where they were when Israel destroyed much of their equipment in the 1967 lightning war. The Arabs heavily outnumber the Israelis in manpower—but know-how, not manpower, has counted in the past.

The danger, the American sources say, is of endless fighting short of major war, with no solution in sight.

For Israel the problem is how to hold her occupied territories, including Sinai and Gaza, and more recently-occupied East Jerusalem. Syria's Golan Heights and the west bank of the Jordan River. She considers the Golan Heights vital to her security. East Jerusalem she considers permanently hers by right of conquest.

A 1967 UN Security Council resolution told Israel to withdraw from all conquered territories, but little has been done to persuade the Israelis to comply.

The situation has been festering for two years. Some of the issues between the contending sides now seem so formidable as to defy any solution at all, and deep resentment of the United States, the sources say, is rising rapidly among millions of Arabs.

Vacations Abroad Dismal Experience for Russians

A Winnipeg Free Press writer's view of the Russians as tourists

Last month my wife and I were staying in a pleasant hotel on Anacapri, a village on the island of Capri off Naples. Despite the late season the hotel was crowded with guests from America and Canada, Britain and France, Germany and Scandinavia, Belgium and Italy. We were a happy family — in those enchanted surroundings one cannot be other than happy. We chatted gaily to each other in a babel of tongues, exchanging our experiences on shopping or walking exhibitions, on food and wine and similar holiday topics.

There a large group arrived at the hotel. They were Soviet tourists. At breakfast they sat in the middle of the terrace, well insulated from all other guests. Two muscular men took up positions by the door through which one entered the terrace from the dining room. They ate their breakfast silently, watching their charges. A man belonging to the Soviet group left the breakfast table, presumably to attend to the requirements of nature or else to pick up some room. Before leaving the terrace he sat down at the watchmen's table and engaged them in earnest conversation. Chances are that he had to explain.

In due course the entire group left. We later saw them in Capri, moving closely bunched together, with none of the individual darting into shops and boutiques so characteristic of other conducted tours. I met some of them in the hotel elevator. I asked courteously if I had a what floor they were going in. There was a stony silence although the man I asked had earlier been speaking in Italian to the barrender. Now he surely pressed the button for his floor.

All this came to my mind as I was reading the exasperating naive speeches of the Canadian delegates to the North Atlantic Assembly in Brussels advocating increased East-West contacts.

If we cannot get through to the Russians on an ordinary human level, what is the point of parliamentary delegation coming and going and exchanging platitudinous speeches?

Ian Wahn, the Liberal member for Toronto, told the parliamentarians that NATO no longer was enough, and that Canada looked increasingly to the United Nations. I presume we shall soon be sending Canadian troops to Russia to implement the UN resolution about handing over the freedom-loving Gibraltarians to the Fascist dictatorship. Or help the Arabs to get rid of Israel in deference to all the resolutions passed at the UN.

Mirages usually occur in hot, dry climates. With all that snow and cold one would think that Canadian politicians would have their feet firmly on the frozen ground. Instead, they are pursuing a fata morgana, liable any moment to slip on the hard ice of unpleasant reality and fall flat on their face.

Many Turning to Smaller Centres

Urban Sprawl Threatens Quality of Canadian Life

Shaun Herron In The Winnipeg Free Press

Whatever you do for a living in Canada, I suppose Toronto is the Mecca.

There's nothing surprising in this: It used to be Berlin for the Germans, it's Paris for Frenchmen and London for Englishmen, and for Americans, whatever they may say in Chicago and San Francisco, it is still — at least for the young — New York. But perhaps the day is passing? Is it Mecca only for the young in all these great centres of population?

Every day, people appear to be succeeding at something without going to live in the great cities. Fewer of the people who have already made it go on living in them and among the ones I know who no longer live in them, the majority tell me they went there in the first place only to get started and never intended to remain there.

I'm told now that great corporations, like great cities, are beginning not to attract the best. The last time I heard this was from a student at the University of Manitoba, but it has been a recurring theme for seven or years, popping up here and there wherever the future shape of our society is under serious discussion. The best men, the record seems to show, are choosing to be in lesser jobs, at smaller salaries, in quieter places, with greener fields and happier wives and less neurotic children, and cleaner air, and better law enforcement.

It is true that, in the past, what were regarded as great cities were the nurturers of civilizations and cultures; I question whether it is true today or will be true tomorrow. They may indeed be the destroyers of culture and civilization tomorrow.

The growth of cities will go on. Maybe it will even go on until the mega-cities cover as much ground as the suburbs of doom predict. Could it be, on the other hand, that we will revolt in time or that the flow out of the cities will increase enough to demonstrate that the people who care most and most effectively about the quality of life in our civilization live in small cities, small towns, on farms and in country places?

Orillia Packet and Times

* * *

It is time Canadians became aware of the declining quality of life enjoyed by a growing proportion of our population as a result of the uncontrolled growth of urban sprawl about our half-dozen megalopolises. The fact is today that only these Canadians fortunate enough to live in the towns and small cities of the country are able to enjoy the rich and varied life which Canadian once accepted as their birthright, while a majority of their contemporaries are doomed to an existence of increasing frustration and deprivation in the urban antheaps of swollen inner-cities.

A policy of heedless concentration rather than the decentralization which would have served the nation's industrial growth more widely across the land has brought to this sparsely-settled country all the hideous urban problems normally associated with overpopulation: overcrowding, pollution, inconvenience, and above all, an appalling human environment.

In a very real sense, the spawning of violence and animalism which is gnawing at the heart of civilized standard s, while ever the enormous wastelands of suburbia, those soul-destroying miles of bungalows and carbon and supermarkets, boredom hangs in an almost visible miasma. Only in the small er communities, beyond the taint of the great urban sores, does daily life retain the dignity and flavor appropriate to human society, as contrasted with the aimless, jostling scurry of the anthill and the beehive. In Canada's smaller centres, the full spectrum of social amenities is available to all, from unenrolled golf courses to little theatres groups, from Rotary to sailing clubs.

November is an in-between season. There are days of cold, driving rain, snow squalls and stinging sleet. The countryside lies dripping and sodden and the hours of darkness increase. November is an in-between season. There are days of cold, driving rain, snow squalls and stinging sleet. The countryside is depressing as the color fades and the cold increases. But there is beauty on the land in the muted hues of brown and grey; there is music in the evergreens and in the brooks sing their way down from the highlands.

Time is the essence of life and he who makes the best thing of living knows that each month of our turning year offers a distinctive harvest. November is the end of one season, but it is the beginning of another.

Fog-Smoke Hazard on 401

Cornwa'l Standard-Freeholder

Another fatal accident on Hwy. 401 near Boundary Road — the sixth so far this year — has brought a new demand for closure of the city's industrial dump, located north of 401 near Boundary Rd., and a reserved suggestion — so far unsubstantiated by any evidence divulged by anyone — that fires from the dump, mixing with fog, could have been a contributory factor.

The call for action comes this time, at last, from a Gananoque trucker, Ernest Hamlin, who collected nearly 600 signatures following a 37-vehicle pile-up in January in which four died. Like the present petition, that one called for the dump to be closed. It was not closed, but the city ordered all burning halted at the dump the same day — Jan. 20 — as the multiple accident, and no burning has been done there since that time, according to city engineer Charles Adams. The industrial dump now is strictly a land-fill operation.

The basic cause of the rash of accidents in the area appears to be that there are low-lying spots on the highway which fill in under foggy conditions; fog patches were the cause of the day morning's two-truck collision. But to this point, nothing has been done about the area's warning signs in the area, a highway s department spokesman said they'd just be ignored anyway.

It may be that the whole section of the route should be changed if the peculiar fog conditions cited can't be overcome. But no one else should have to die on that stretch of highway to prod the department of highways into some type of action to reduce this recurrent hazard on a high-speed highway.

Adult, Teen Group Wants Drop-in Centre

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

During the next week, Bellevillians are being asked to be legal pushers — for a city youth centre.

A pushathon from Tweed to Belleville will kick off a fund-raising campaign for the new type of centre — a meeting place for teen-agers and adults, specially designed to bridge the generation gap.

The group of young people organizing the event plan to push a bed 27 miles on Saturday, Nov. 22, and are seeking both walkers to assist and supporters to pledge money on the participants.

The decision to open a new centre was made by a group of young people and adults who have been meeting during the fall in what one describes as "an interesting experience in communication." They have asked to remain anonymous.

The committee has no formal sponsoring organization behind it — its objective is to involve the young people concerned in raising the necessary funds themselves.

The Living Room — Especially for People, is the name the committee has chosen for its proposed centre.

Backing the project is a group of concerned adults — clergymen, teachers, businessmen and housewives, who are tired of complaints about restless young people walking the streets. They have decided to do something about it.

The unique factor in their approach is their willingness to allow the teen-agers to determine the type of centre they themselves want.

As one of the clergymen involved put it: "I have dealt mainly with square kids too busy doing their own thing in activities organized for them. Now I want to lend my support to people who want to do something for themselves."

A high school student no longer living at home brought her picture of the centre into focus when she said, "I didn't believe there were adults who cared about me before I joined this group. Because I never experienced this concern before, and I want to share my experiences with others."

Plans for the centre include discussion rooms where teen-agers and adults can hold informal conversations about matters that concern both groups. Already, a corps of people willing to discuss their differing viewpoints with young people have been rounded up.

The values gap between adults and youth is wider and more important than the so-called communications gap, the committee members of both generations agree.

"In our city there are homes where young people are not welcome, although they live there," one adult committee member asserted. "Young people can't express a view in these homes — there is no listening ear. These teen-agers need a place where they can find something lacking in their homes. The youthful outreach for adult companionship of this kind is great."

The same spokesman mentioned an unrecognized community need that has been brought to the committee's attention since they began their work.

"Many young people in this city, still going to school, have been thrown out of their homes. They have no place to go. A hostel for these students in the over-16 category is desperately needed. If we can make The Living Room work and prove the competence of this group, perhaps we can tackle the larger hostel project later."

Pledge forms for the bed-pushing caper Nov. 22 are available in all city high schools and by telephoning 968-2237.

Cancer Society Will Crown Miss Hope

Final details are being arranged for this year's Miss Hope contest to be held Monday at 7.30 p.m. at Education Hall in Belleville General Hospital.

This is only the second year of competition among student nurses of Ontario. The project, the brainchild of the Canadian Cancer Society, although new, has been successful.

Last year's provincial winner was Miss Ruth Anne Campbell, formerly of Trenton.

This year three Belleville nursing students will attempt to represent Belleville as Miss Hope 1970 and one of them will advance to Kingston before, if again winning, moving to the provincial competition.

The contest is open to all unmarried students in recognized schools of nursing and training centres for nursing assistants throughout Ontario.

Candidates will be judged on appearance in uniform, intelligence, personality and presentation on cancer nursing and the Cancer Society.

The competition provincially will wind up in Toronto on Jan. 24 with the selection of Miss Hope of Ontario, 1970.

Each contestant will be asked to give a three - minute address on some phase of cancer nursing, the cancer problem, and the Cancer Society.

In Toronto, the provincial winner and runners up will receive $200, $100 and $75 respectively. The winner will then represent the Cancer Society in personal appearances throughout Ontario.

Locally, judges for the event will be Miss Hazel Naudette, former administrator of Trenton Memorial Hospital, Philip Rickard, administrator of the Belleville General Hospital, and Barry Grills of The Intelligencer.

A 29 - minute film concerning nursing management by student nurses for cancer patients will also be a featured part of the evening.

A reward of $1,000 is being offered by Theo Balvers, Marmora, for any information leading to the whereabouts of his 16-year-old son, Billie, who vanished from his home on Thanksgiving Day, more than four weeks ago.

Any person having any knowledge which could solve the mystery of Billie's weresbouts is urged to call any of these numbers: Mr. Balvers, Marmora — 472-3034; Theo's Bake Shop, Marmora, — 473-2321; Madoc OPP, — 473-4234, or, Belleville Zenith 30000.

Takes Over New Post With Board

Msgr. J. P. Sullivan has assumed the position of vice-chairman of the Hastings and Prince Edward Separate School Board, filling the vacancy left by the resignation of Neil Robertson.

Mr. Robertson resigned from the board to seek a seat on Trenton town council in the Dec. 1 election.

The board has yet to appoint a Trenton trustee to fill Mr. Robertson's seat for the unexpired year of his term. According to legislation the board is responsible for the appointment of a replacement for a resigning trustee.

Neutrality Policy Topic of Speech

The policy of neutrality will be the subject of the Canadian Club lecture Nov. 18 at 8.15 p.m. at Sir Winston Churchill School.

Norman K. Rebin, now on the staff of the secretary of state in Ottawa, will be the speaker. He first became interested in the concept of neutrality in Sweden and pursued the study further in Indonesia on a Canadian Universities Foundation fellowship.

Mr. Rebin was graduated from the University of Saskatchewan and later took his master's degree in social science at the University of Stockholm, Sweden. He has travelled widely in Asia, south and central America and Europe. He is fluent in Russian and once was the interpreter for a student tour of Russia.

Work Begins On Water Storage Tank

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford Public Utilities Commission broke the ground on Friday morning for the construction of a new 300,000 gallon water storage tank on a high elevation bordering the town familiarly known as Candy Mountain.

The tank which is approximately 55 feet in diameter, will extend about 34 feet above ground level and five feet below ground level. It will contain about 500 cubic yards of concrete and the wall 15 inches thick.

The contractor Lightfoot Construction Company of Bellville reports that due to a special process used by the construction company which prevents freezing of the ground that concrete may be poured during the winter months which will hasten completion of the project.

Up to the present time pumps have been used to supply the town water supply.

It is expected that storage of water in the new tank will give increased water pressure to areas in the town which have had low water pressure and also be a safety protection if at any time the pumps cannot be operated.

The work on water mains will be done by the local Public Utilities Commission.

Attending the breaking of ground for the new tank were P.U.C. chairman, Glen Vandewater and commissioners H. Scheunert, H. A. MacArthur, Everette Steele, manager Marvin Plunkett and Reeve R. J. Locke.

Datsun 1600 automatic gives you everything you want. Just put your foot down.

There's only one way to handle the Datsun 1600 automatic. Briskly.

When you want to pass on the freeway, just swing out, tramp on the gas and your Datsun will jump to it. You see, the Datsun 1600 is not like most small automatics. Small cars generally don't have the engine capacity to handle an automatic transmission properly. And most of them only have a 2-speed transmission, so you don't get any pick-up at all.

What you do get is a gutless wonder.

Datsun 1600 is different. It's got guts. 96 hp, and one of the best power/weight ratios in its class. A silky three (count 'em, three) speed Borg-Warner transmission. 100 mph performance. Datsun 1600 has poke. And with all that poke you get contoured bucket seats, front discs, all independent suspension, choice of two doors, four doors or a wagon . . . all the extras, all the luxuries and all the performance of the standard Datsun 1600. Just no gearshift. If you like a gearshift, you can get one for about $200 less than the automatic option. But if you don't, put your foot down and demand a Datsun 1600 automatic. And then you can really put your foot down.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID ALBERT MacCORMACK

MacCormack – Wood

Tabernacle United Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Nancy Ann Patricia Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Edward Wood Belleville, and David Albert MacCormack, son of Mrs. Walter MgcCormack and the late Mr. MacCormack. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. Robert Crooks. Organist was Clifford Templer and soloist was Mrs. Betty Gardiner.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white full length gown of peau de soie featuring a graceful cape-like collar of antique lace attached to a scooped neck. The same lace ran down the front of the dress and was repeated in the train attached to the shoulders. The sleeves were lily point. Completing the attire was a four-tier elbow length veil centred with roses and seed crystals. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, bronze 'mums and ivy.

Maid of honor was Miss Linda Miller wearing a full length Empire styled gown of gold velvet with a high round neckline and Tudor sleeves. The headdress was a gold velvet bow with matching veil and she carried a clutch bouquet of gold and bronze tinted 'mums.

Bridesmaids were Miss Marilyn Parker and Miss Janice MacCormack, sister of the bridegroom. Each girl wore a full length Empire waist gown of moss green velvet featuring a high round neckline and puff sleeves. The headdresses were moss green velvet bows with matching veils and each one carried a clutch bouquet of moss green and gold tinted 'mums.

Best man was Harold Townsend and the ushers were Doug MacCormack, brother of the bridegroom, and Wayne Wood, brother of the bride.

The couple will reside at Bata, Ont.

Campaign Results Gratifying

TWEED — The annual general meeting of the Tweed Branch of the Canadian Bible Society was held earlier this month (November) at 8 p.m. when the reports were heard of the result of the 1968 campaign in Tweed. It was a very successful year and the total raised was $1,218.60. The meeting marked the beginning of the 1969 canvass for funds and it is hoped that the response will be as generous as in previous years.

The Bible Society is undertaking a very vital and necessary work in the world. Its translation committees have been responsible for the major part of scriptural translation, the Bible, or parts of it, being now available in nearly 1400 different languages. The work must be hastily subsidized since scriptures have to be made easily available for the millions living on the margin of starvation, and since in a world of growing literacy the opportunity to mould the opinions of men is being seized by communists and others, through printed propaganda and material provided free or very cheaply.

The Bible Society depends on the support of all Christian congregations and individuals to carry on its work. A loyal group of canvassers from all the churches, whose numbers can still be increased by needed volunteers will be calling on every household beginning next week.

Every canvasser will wear a signed identification card and it is hoped they will be received courteously and generously.

At the meeting the district secretary, Reverend C. R. Rudd, spoke and showed a fine color film on South America called "Penzotti Pathways". The local president, Reverend V. Earle, together with the other ministers is speaking for the full support of all the Tweed people.

A Time for Tea

Co-convener, Mrs. Ada Scales (left), and Mrs. M. Doyle, president of the Senior Citizens Club, stop for a moment to chat at the main tea table at the Senior Citizens' Tea held Thursday afternoon in St. Thomas' Parish Hall.

Senior Citizens Club Holds Christmas Tea

Belleville's young people are not the only residents with spirit. The city's senior citizens club displayed a lot of it at their annual Christmas tea and bazaar held yesterday afternoon at St. Thomas Parish Hall. Opening the event was Mrs. Guthrie, introduced by Mrs. M. Doyle. Conveners were Mrs. May Palmer and Mrs. Ada Scales.

Covered with a white linen table cloth, the main tea table was beautifully arranged with a centrepiece of orange and yellow 'mums, green and red candles set in silver candelabra and red candles in silver candle holders. A silver tea service highlighted each end of the table. Small tables each had a centrepiece of holly.

Adorning the piano was a basket of yellow 'mums, asters and white gladioli.

Pouring tea were Mrs. S. Smith, Mrs. Calbury, Mrs. Gist, Mrs. Bly, Mrs. Revel and Mrs. Neil.

The following were in charge of the various booths: fancy work Mrs. Copeland and Mrs. McCullough; aprons Mrs. Bowers, Miss Ayling, Miss Barkley and Mrs. F. Sills; home cooking Mrs. Mac Wilson, Mrs. Farestell, Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Thomas; country store Mrs. Loucks, Mrs. M. Clapp and Mrs. Mathews; candy Mrs. Vickers; men's table Harry Taylor, M. Bowers and Sheldon Smith.

Door tickets were sold by Mrs. Bedell and Mrs. K. Ferguson; tickets for the quilt Mrs. Lamburg, tickets on the basket of groceries Mrs. Cook and Mrs. A. Longhurst. Touch and take was run by Mrs. Enid Armstrong and Mrs. E. Murphy. Mrs. Jessie La Londe sold tickets on the Christmas wreath.

Family Honors Octogenarian

Cain, Stirling, Mrs. Hazel Griffa, Hallowray and Mrs. W. Corrigan, Ottawa. His seven grandchildren and four great grandchildren were present as well as Miss Sharon Dills and Miss Barbara Begoby, Belleville and Ross Roeburough of Gatineau, Quebec.

A second miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mrs. Jerome Edward Eiler given by the bride's co-workers. She was also presented with a gift from the staff of the Royal Bank. Missionary Talk Will Be Given

Miss Gayle Lindsay of Kingston, will speak at Centennial Free Methodist Church on Sunday at services devoted to Missionary Outreach.

On graduation, with high honors from high school, Gayle works in an office. Sensing a growing conviction that she should serve in an area of greater need in the world, she applied to the Missionary Board and was accepted as a prospective candidate.

She trained at the Ontario Hospital in Kingston and became a Registered Nurse. At Greenville, Illinois, she received her Bachelor of Science degree. She helped to pay her expenses by taking charge of the Student Infirmary.

Miss Lindsay is now on the staff at Kingston General Hospital. She has been appointed to go to Rhodesia in March of next year.

Miss Lindsay's aunt, Miss Naomi Lindsay of Ottawa, who spoke here at the Missionary convention last April, is now serving her third term in missionary work in Egypt.

Advisory Board Of C.N.I.B. Meets

NAPANEE — A meeting of the advisory board of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind was to have been addressed by Mr. Gordon Sheppard, field secretary for this district. Unfortunately, Mr. Sheppard had to enter hospital for emergency surgery on his eyes. He had previously had successful cornea transplants, giving him 40 per cent vision, but something had gone wrong, making it necessary for him to re-enter hospital. However, his fellow field secretary, Mr. Roy Lawrance took his place. He has been blind from birth.

Judge G. F. Smith reported on the eye bank, pointing out that he is available to address meetings at any time to explain what is involved in this. He also has pledge cards for those who desire to contribute their eyes to the eye bank. The need for supplies is urgent, he stated, as the bank is almost empty. Many people desire to donate their eyes at the time of death, but do not know how to go about it, he said. He will be glad to direct them to the proper course.

A report of the recent canvass was made, but final results cannot be given as it is not completed. The Lions Club carried out a blitz in the town, and the pupils of the public school, through the kindness of Principal Gordon Presque, sold tags Friday after school and all day Saturday. Conveners in the larger villages of the county organized canvass areas have not yet been canvasses of their areas, but canvassed. However, this is now being carried out. Teachers of the North Addington School at Cloyne, and members of the Students' Council, have all but completed the canvass of the county to Highway No. 7. Members of the Students' Council of the Napanee District Secondary School have undertaken to canvass areas south of Highway No. 7 which have not been covered.

December 9 was announced as the date for the annual dinner for the blind at Quinte-St. Lawrence Hall in Kingston.

Counsellors Want Pilot Project In Dealing with Sex Education

By DORIS CLARK

A counsellor for teen-agers told me about a girl age 15 who came in to ask him for "the pill". She had been in trouble once and said she did not want to get pregnant again.

An argument ensued. The counsellor argued that if he were to supply her with the pill, he would be giving her licence to do what was wrong. Said she had never learned any discipline herself, and this she would have to do before she could become a socially well-balanced adult; and that she still needed to learn what physical relations were all about.

Then Miss Fifteen argued, "We all do it." The counsellor said, "Oh no, not all." He declared (and I agreed with him) that our more fortunate young people have parents sufficiently comfortable about it all to discuss what such intimacy means; that the ramifications can be for the licentious young person; and just what this physical expression, properly used in marriage, can mean to eventual married happiness.

We agreed that we would like to have a pilot project on the topic. We would take a group of teen-agers, develop a course about all aspects of physical relations and their emotional repercussions. Counsellors would discuss pros and cons, as well as good methods of self-discipline and self-expression.

Then we'd see what would happen to the behavior of the counselled group. Wonderful idea! Who'll try it?

* * *

Dear Doris: My husband left us when my oldest boy was 12. Since then it was just a series of troubles with the boy: truancy, petty theft, other bad behavior. He was in training school, then reformatory. Finally at 20 he came home, much changed for the better.

But then he married a no-good girl and got involved in a shooting accident which was not his fault; but because of his record he was sent to jail. He is a model prisoner and all the guards like him. He is due for parole soon.

All of this has had a terrible effect on my nerves. My psychiatrist says I must give up my heavy job, which will mean giving up good pay. I don't know what to do. I'm mixed about my son or about myself. — IN Deep

Dear In Deep: You raised a family of three boys, in circumstances that would have thrown a less rugged person. I wonder you have any nerves left! My best advice to you is to heed the personal and skilled counsel of your psychiatrist and consider the following points:

1. Your son needs your continuing reassurance and love, by letter.

2. Money isn't everything. Find a less demanding job and get your health back.

3. Begin some new, positive thinking by resigning; and by joining an inspirational study group.

4. Write again and report progress.

Confidential to Dead Silence: Carry on. This childish game of "not speaking" long enough and you'll have no marriage left. It eventually makes both partners mystified and wondering what gives. Surely a lively air-clearing row couldn't pile up more agony, in the end!

Some men tend to bottle up their fuming; women like to be gabbier. Just remember that it is the bigger personality that capitulates first, and start a conversation — about anything.

Wine, Cheese Party Successful

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: Having discussed our plans for the wine and cheese party with you first gave me the great boost of confidence I needed. Dan and I both thank you — for your sage recommendations.

On the sideboard was our wine rack, festooned with pretty artificial grapes, flanked by Beaujolais in one of our wicker wine baskets, with a few glasses, and on the other by sherry. On the lift-top table were the champagne and Riesling and Rose, chilling. I covered a big, old enamel bread pan, deep with sloping sides, with royal purple florists' paper, which clung well, like a foil, and it held 3 to 4 bottles surrounded by ice.

The dining table held the cheeses and fruit. A beautifully shaped bunch of grapes was draped over my heirloom silver "grape leaf" with tiny seedless grapes cut into small clusters "spilling" from the stand beneath.

My party cloth is a cotton, floral, in tiny overall design. Across from the grapes at the other end, were my bent-glass dish with a pineapple in the centre, surrounded with redskinned and green-skinned apple slices. Your suggestion to dip them ahead of time in lemon, as I sliced them, worked beautifully!

The cheeses: Gourmandise, which was the most popular, and Brie (which I'd had at room temperature for 8 hrs., all the others for 2), a pale Cheddar, a pleasant Bleu, and Bel Paese.

The Crackers: I'd gotten 2 tins of wafers — lightly salted, starit white, small round or rather oval cracker. Bland, but not dull by themselves, they were just perfect with the variety of cheese.

We've learned so much from this party, never have we had a party that was easier to prepare for! No last minute baking, no prior culinary tricks — just an effortless way to entertain. — Becky.

ANSWER: Such enthusiastic feedback is rare Becky and I'm delighted with your detailed description and success.

Points for Parents
By MARY EATSON

Father: "Where is Johnny? I thought he was with you. I'll have to go back in the house and find him."

Child: "There he is — over by the Craig's garage."

A complete plan of action may prevent from needlessly endangering his life because of the panic and chaos that can follow a fire in the home.

Don't let your family fire drills stop with getting everybody out of the house. Alert the family to meet, immediately after each one is out, a preappointed place so all can be accounted for.

Plane Trip Risky For Pregnant Woman

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 19-year-old daughter is in her sixth month of pregnancy. Her husband is in Vietnam. He will be going to Hawaii in seven weeks for his R. and R. Vanessa is very eager to join him. Both her father and I think it would be risky since she will be in her eighth month by then. My brother, who is an attorney, says most airlines would refuse to fly her.

Vanessa is carrying very small and she insists that if she wears a loose coat the airline authorities won't even know she is pregnant. She also says airline stewardesses are trained to meet all emergencies.

ANN LANDERS

We have received so much conflicting information we don't know what to believe. Can you clarify this situation for us? — AKRON QUERY.

DEAR AQ: The best authority is Vanessa's doctor. It is doubtful that he would give the go signal to a woman in her eighth month. If Vanessa should go into labor 30,000 feet over the Pacific, the loose coat won't help her much.

It is true that airline stewardesses are trained for emergencies, but this is expecting too much.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Yesterday I took my children to see "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang." This is a wholesome movie in color, full of good music, joy, fun and laughter. Ideal for children. When I saw it advertised I was so pleased — at long last a movie that didn't deal with drugs, dope, lesbians, insanity, killing and raw sex.

While waiting for the feature, the previews for coming attractions flashed on the screen — As are murder ! ! It frightened my youngest so bad she literally screamed out loud. This is not the first time such a thing has occurred. A few weeks ago when I took my brood to see a revival of Peter Pan, I had to hustle them out fast. Another hideous preview. That time it was one of those sex orgy films. My child yelled, "How come they go on dates with no clothes on!" Everybody in the theater roared.

Please, Ann, tell us how we can get the messages across to the theatre operators. — A MOTHER WHO MISSES WALT DISNEY.

DEAR MOTHER: Don't we all! Walt Disney was a genius and the likes of him will not pass our way soon again.

The best way to register your feelings about what is seen in the theatre is to write to the manager. I recommend it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My legs are well shaped and without question the best thing I have going for me. The only problem is that I am developing varicose veins. I kept hoping the bemlines would drop, but it looks as if they are going to remain sky high for a while, at least. The question is this: Would I be better off to wear my skirts a little longer than is fashionable and feel out of it? Or, should I forget about my ugly purple network of broken blood vessels, wear the micro-minies and feel younger than springtime? You decide. — QUO VADIS.

DEAR QUO: You didn't give me the most important fact - - - your age. If you are under 30 I suggest a cosmetic cream to cover the veins, dark or opaque hose and the shorter skirts. If you are over 30, the cosmetic and opaque hose are still a good idea, but please forget the micro-mini, dearie. No matter how good your legs are, the rest of you will look ridiculous.

History of Roblin Dramatized At Historical Meeting

NAPANEE — The first fall meeting of Lennox and Addington Historical Society was held recently in Roblin, following a new policy of holding at least one meeting of the society a year outside Napanee. Roblin Women's Institute were hostesses and the meeting was held in the Institute Hall.

President of the Historical Society, Mrs. N. W. Hutchison, opened the meeting then called on Mrs. Roy Babcock, Institute president, to take charge of the program. Mrs. Babcock made a presentation to the county historical society, an oil painting of a winter scene by a French Canadian artist. The painting, the gift of Mrs. John Kennepohl, was taken to Germany in the last century by her great-uncles, as a gift to their sister, her grandmother. The painting returned to Canada with Mrs. Kennepohl when she emigrated here.

The program, which was based on historical background of Roblin and Richmond Township, was presented in two parts. In the first half Mrs. Ronald Baker told the history of the hall in which the meeting was held. It was first a Methodist church, then an Orange Hall, and now an Institute hall. Mrs. Olive Brown, with a patchwork quilt on her knees, and a corncob pipe in her mouth told the story of the patchwork quilt. Garnet Brooks sang. Mrs. George Brooks read her story of the development of the area, with special reference to the changes in roads through the township. Of the one - room schoolhouses mentioned her husband, Mr. George Brooks, had taught in two, Roblin and Leinster, a small school at Ebenezer.

Mrs. Horace Paul, who began the Roblin Tweedsmuir History, was introduced. The history was one of many items of historical interest on display.

The second half of the program was a dramatized version of the history of Roblin, from the time in 1829 when Ezra Spencer bought Lot 21, ninth concession of Richmond, built a dam across the Salmon River, erected a saw mill, and later a grist mill. The first schoolmaster was Robert Marlin, and the early religious groups, like the school children, met in the homes. Stephen Woods and his wife were among the figures who strolled across the stage. Stephen Woods' wood turning business is perpetuated today in Woods cheese box industry, the oldest in Canada.

Mrs. Jean Pratt was commentator for this part of the program and Garnet Brooks was master of ceremonies. Costumes worn by those taking part were authentic in many cases, and some were replicas. The authentic costumes ranged in age from the Confederation era and earlier to the early 1900's. Handsome eyelet embroideries, silks and calicos recalled more gracious times, in sharp contrast with today's simple outfits. Many of the costumes had been lent by Mrs. Ruth Gnaedinger of Melrose.

Later the audience, which filled the hall, had an opportunity to mingle and examine the many historical displays.

Presbytery Couples' Clubs Hold Rally

The Couples' Clubs of the Belleville - Cobourg Presbytery, met for their annual fall rally at Emmanuel United Church, Foxboro on Sunday.

The Energetic Club of Halloway Street United Church was in charge of guest registration at the door.

A welcome was extended to the gathering at the beginning of the afternoon session by Mr. and Mrs. Harold King, presbytery presidents; also by Mrs. Maurice Dafoe on behalf of the Foxboro and Halloway Clubs.

The club from Grace United Church, Napanee, led in a devotional using "Home" as their theme.

Mr. King introduced the guest speaker, Rev. George Ambury, B.A., B.D., field secretary, Christian Education Committee.

Rev. Ambury, with the assistance of his wife led the group into considering ways of "Communication," out of which discussion, it was decided that "Understanding" was necessary for "Communication." The assembly, at this point, divided into eight groups for discussion. Several solutions were presented as short skits, for better understanding.

Following the discussion period the Wedding Ring Club from College Hill, conducted a music time.

At the executive meeting the following slate of officers was brought in as follows: past presidents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold King, Newburgh; presidents, Mr. and Mrs. Clare McFaul, B.B.C. Club; 1st. vice-presidents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jeffs, Tabernacle; 2nd vice-presidents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Taylor, Energetic Club; and secretary-treasurers, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald McDonald of the Wedding Ring Club.

Supper was catered to by the Foxboro and Holloway Couples' Clubs.

Newburgh Couples Club led in the evening devotional. Taking part were Norman Chapman and Sidney Millen.

Rev. Ambury and Mrs. Ambury once again led the group in discussion, thinking along the lines, "How do we communicate the 'Gospel' or 'Good News' to people?".

Fireside entertainment by the 'Friday Nighters' of King Street, Trenton was a most enjoyable half hour of music by the Junior Orchestra of Elsie's Accordion College and Miss Ruth Hillis.

During the social time, at the fireside, looked after by B.B.C. club, brief talks were given by Mr. King, the retiring president and Mr. McFaul the incoming president.

Mrs. McFaul presented Rev. and Mrs. Ambury with a gift from the rally, in appreciation of their leadership in the day's program.

St. George's Guild Holds Tea and Bazaar

A fall decor was the setting at the St. George's Guild tea and bazaar held on Tuesday. Welcoming the guests at the door was the president Mrs. M. Welch.

Convening the home bake table were Mrs. J. Garrow and Mrs. L. Quirt. Candy table was convened by Mrs. H. Sharp, Mrs. H. Armstrong and Miss A. Decter. Mrs. W. Rowe and Mrs. R. Ferguson looked after the fancy work table and the kitchen duties were carried out by Mrs. A. Pierson, Mrs. A. Hall and Mrs. Anderson.

A white linen table cloth covered the main tea table which was centred with a bowl of bittersweet. Crystal candle holders sat on each side. The small tables had centrepieces of cups filled with colored peppermints and encircled with sprigs of bittersweet.

Serving tea were Mrs. F. Askey and Mrs. W. Colman and Mrs. J. H. Wright along with Mrs. D. Stewart poured.

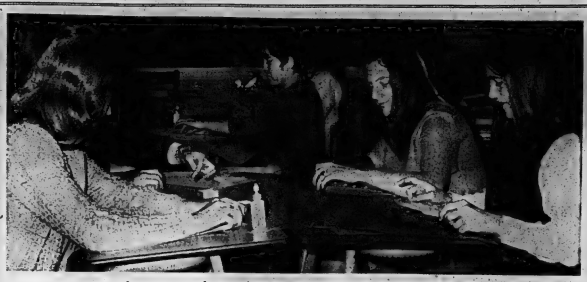
That Last Minute Touch

BCI student Robin Way makes a few last minute adjustments to the display she hopes will sell successfully. Actually, it is all a part of the two-year Business and Commerce course, which deals with retail merchandising and store organization and management.



Grade Nine and Ten BCI Students Work in Assembly Line

Students Learn 'Free Enterprise' First-hand

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

A little less academic ability once worked completely against a student, not only eliminating him from the school system, but often alienating him from society.

Such an individual was quietly called an "under-achiever", and often lopped an ever - growing list of drop - outs that plagued school officials.

This inability to cope and compete in an academic situation squeezed students like these right out of school leaving them to fend for themselves undereducated and underskilled.

Today this picture has been drastically altered. Educationists have succeeded in implementing a diversity of subjects and courses geared to this type of student, with the emphasis on special skills and the development of basic knowledge.

The best examples of this whole new picture are the two-year courses offered in high schools — bridging the gap between varying academic abilities.

Courses are offered in every high school in the city, the only prerequisite being the student does not necessarily have to have been promoted from Grade 8 to Grade 9, but must be at an age where high school environment will be beneficial.

The only exception to this is at BCI, where all the students in the two-year business and commerce course are Grade 8 graduates.

Teacher, Mrs. Olga McNair explained that Grade 9 students deal with retail merchandising, while Grade 10s study store organization and management.

Craftwork is part of the course, but only incidentally. It teaches the students to use their hands, but gives them the opportunity to design something worth selling.

Their idea of making soap, something more than just soap — unique kinds of decorator items — has caught on, and the girls are reaping the success of their inventiveness.

"The girls are so enthusiastic and excited about this whole venture. They are even coming in on lunch hours to do more work on it," admitted Mrs. McNair.

The students plan to use the money they make from the sales to pay for an excursion to Yorkdale Shopping Plaza in Toronto. There they will be able to see at first hand many things relevant to their course — shipping and receiving, selling, display and so on.

Also as part of their course, the girls sell typing paper and office supplies to the typing classes in the school to teach them more about selling and operating a cash register.

Mrs. McNair is particularly pleased with the good response the crafts have been receiving.

"The thing that is intriguing about the whole venture is the success, because these students are not accustomed to it, and the value of this fact alone is monumental."

The two-year courses are also known as "occupational" courses in the high school curriculum.

According to Ross Fleming, head of the occupational-department at Centennial, this type of course is designed to fit the students into the work, or, if they successfully complete the two years, back into a regular Grade 10 four-year course.

"What the student gains from a course like this is a pattern of attitudes that will fit him into life, with the way of further education open to him," he added.

Principal of Moira Secondary, Linton Reid, emphasized the course was geared to the student who is not "academically strong".

"It is for the student who needs the maturing social process of a high school atmosphere, enabling him to develop at a natural rate. A general education is made available to him, while at the same time making him employable."

A man who has been teaching occupational students for the past several years, Murray Brydson of Quinte Secondary sees the whole point of the two-year program directed to "making better citizens equipped for the working world".

A true testimony to the real success of the course lies with the statistics. Mr. Brydson related that more than 85 per cent of his students are hired at the end of their two-year stint.

But the things learned from the pages of textbooks that will soon be forgotten are not really that important. What is important are the attitudes that the students take away with them.

Mr. Brydson told of a recent canoe trip he took his Grades 9 and 10 boys on.

"We went north of Peterborough for a weekend. I tried to make learning a fun thing for them, something all of them will want for themselves. The trip combined things like geology, basic forestry, along the shore science — that sort of thing."

Courses like these prepare a student, in a practical way for the world outside of school — the working world.

"In the end, they are better for it. They are better human beings", Mr. Brydson pointed out.

The Barber of Seville: Special Treat in Store For City Music Lovers

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Opera returns to Belleville this weekend the happy occasion for music lovers scored with some of the happiest music ever written.

Onstage at Centennial Secondary School will be the Canadian Opera Production of Rossini's Barber of Seville.

Tickets have been selling steadily for the production and up to 75 per cent of seats for the performance — sponsored by Belleville Rotary — are now believed booked.

The quick sales response is part of the opera's tradition.

First presented in 1816, Rossini's masterpiece has never lost its magnetic appeal for audiences in more than 150 years.

Rippling with merriment, in its score, words and situations, its happy sheen still is the brightest sparkler in the classical opera repertoire.

Saturday's production here will feature Donald Rutherford, Sheila Piercy and Jan Rubes in leading roles in the favorite work.

The cast will be supported by the 15 - piece orchestra specially assembled for the current COC tour.

For Belleville, it's the second time the company has played the Quinte city in recent years.

Its last production here, also a comic opera — Donizetti's Don Pasquale — drew a packed house in 1967.

Because of the territory involved, the COC must alternate its annual tours between Eastern and Western Canada. Since 1964 Some 25 states of the U.S. — from Alaska to Kentucky — have been added to the itinerary.

Most time is spent travelling, covering distances up to 300 miles on performance days. 600 miles on free days. In 1967 the Belleville visit was part of a tour that logged 20,000.

Government and private subsidies underwrite much of the cost — opera is still the most expensive of the performing arts, and tours add to the financial strain.

However, the steady increase in the number of responsive communities visited by the tour demonstrates the growing popularity and demand for opera, say COC officials.

Smythe Returns To Leafs' Helm

TORONTO (CP) — Stafford Smythe and Harold Ballard today were officially restored to their old positions at the helm of the National Hockey League's Toronto Maple Leafs.

Fired last June on a vote of the board of directors due to a reported difference of opinion on policy, Smythe is back as team president and Ballard as executive vice-president.

Following last June's firings, Smythe and Ballard were charged July 8 with income tax evasion. The charges involved the finances of Maple Leaf Gardens over a four-year period and the case is now pending in the courts. Smythe is alleged to have evaded paying tax on $278,929 of income and Ballard on $134,680.

William Mara, named to replace Smythe, remains as head of the Maple Leaf Gardens executive while Smythe and Ballard, along with vice-president Frank (King) Clancy, will run the hockey operation.

Smythe and Ballard retained their positions on the board of directors and at NHL governors after their removal from the top jobs.

"They (employees) had to come to us for authorization for anything anyway," Smythe said Thursday. "Even though we didn't have any positions, they knew we called the shots."

He said the decision to restore his and Ballard's power officially was made at a meeting of Gardens directors two weeks ago.

"What's happened," Smythe said, "is that we've all compromised a little. What we've done covers the actions that were taken in the past and, at the same time, will allow the building and the team to be run properly."

He explained the Maple Leaf club is operated as a subsidiary of Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd., which is a holding company.

"The other board of Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd. is removed from the phase of operating the building or the team," Smythe said.

"In effect, the management situation is the way it was before," he said. "There was a lack of direction that he will be supplying. Previously, every decision was difficult because people didn't know what we were doing.

"For example, say some singer named Pumpernickel, or somebody, was available to us for a night at $50,000. Previously nobody would know because it's worth $50,000, or if Barbra Streisand would be worth $150,000 or whatever. Now it is made perfectly clear that I or Harold ... will be the one to go for a decision."

John Bassett, chairman of the board, refused to talk. "You have Mr. Smythe's comments and I have nothing to say on the matter," he said. "Good night." Smythe had claimed Bassett cast the deciding vote that resulted in the firings.

A rumor circulated Thursday that Bassett had resigned from the board of directors after Smythe and Ballard were restored to their old positions, Smythe denied the report.

Smythe has been involved in the Leafs decision-making with new coach John McLellan and new manager Jim Gregory, but he thinks more is necessary.

"The team has suffered from a lack of direction. Sitting on the sidelines as I have been, with no title, I haven't had the enthusiasm to do the things that needed doing. But now I will be giving some direction as we start to rebuild this team.

"How long will it take? Well, they used to say it took five years to rebuild a team. But that was when there were only six teams. Now, with expansion, who knows?"

"But Gregory has a great record with our organization," Smythe continued, "and McLellan has a great personal record. People like these you don't throw in the ashcan. With the former captain that existed here, they couldn't operate with any confidence they need."

The new president expressed concern over the Leafs four-game losing streak and position at the bottom of the East Division, referring to Wednesday's 3-0 loss to Pittsburgh Penguins.

"The new coaches—McLellan and Gregory—have started with a horrible mess. But I'm not saying anything about Imlach (Punch Imlach was fired as general manager-coach by Smythe last spring after Leafs were bounced from the playoffs by Boston Bruins). Imlach will always get the last word on that he's a newspaper columnist, so I don't want to start anything about who is to blame.

"But this is what has to be done," Smythe said. "We have to put a team on the ice that's going to play a pleasing brand of hockey. Not like that game Wednesday night. . . . In a tight game like that one, . . . you need an Eddie Shack or a rushing defenseman to break things open. We don't have one any more.

"They don't sell tickets in Pittsburgh because the team there isn't playing pleasing hockey. With a team playing like ours did Wednesday, you can't expect to sell tickets here either."

HE WANTS TO PLAY HOCKEY — Bobby Hull, superstar of the Chicago Black Hawks and Tommy Ivan, general manager, tell a news conference Thursday afternoon that Hull will remain on the team. Hull has sat out the first 12 games this year because of a contract squabble.

Orr Helps For 21st Time In Bruin Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Every hockey fan knows Bobby Orr is one of the best defencemen in the National Hockey League. But at the rate he is picking up points this season it appears he is out to prove he is also one of the best play-makers too.

Orr picked up an assist Thursday night—his 21st of the season —in Boston Bruins 3-1 victory over Detroit Red Wings to maintain his lead in NHL scoring with 23 points.

If Orr continues his scoring pace, he could possibly break his own record for most points in one season by a defenceman. He set that record last season, scoring 21 goals and 43 assists for 64 points.

Also scoring at a fast clip is Phil Goyette of St. Louis Blues. Goyette, second behind Orr among scoring leaders, got a goal and an assist as the Blues dumped Pittsburgh Penguins 4-0.

Goyette's points kept his scoring streak with the Blues alive. He now has at least one point in every game played this season.

Meanwhile, the NHL's goal scoring champion last season has ended his contract squabble with Chicago Black Hawks and has rejoined the team.

Bobby Hull, citing differences between his attorney and the hockey club for the contract dispute, has dropped his hard-line position against the club and is expected to practise with the Hawks today after missing the first 12 games.

Orr's assist Thursday night came as Boston's 16th power-play goal in 47 games this season. Detroit's Gary Bergman was off for tripping in the third period when Phil Esposito scored a pass from Orr and scored on a 15-foot screen shot. It was the final goal of the game.

Earlier in the third period, rookie Garnet (Ching) Bailey also scored on a power-play goal for Boston to break a 1-1 tie. Rick Smith scored the other Boston goal while Billy Dea tallied for Detroit.

The win moved Boston ahead of Detroit into the first place.

At St. Louis, Ab McDonald led the Blues with two goals. Phil Goyette and Larry Keenan also scored for St. Louis.

The shutout was Ernie Wakely's first of the season as he made his first start on home ice. The win also kept the Blues unbeaten in six home games this year.

BOBBY ORR

Hull, who scored a record 58 goals last season when the Hawks finished last in the NHL's East division, announced settlement of his dispute at a news conference attended by himself and Tommy Ivan, the Hawk's general manager.

Ivan, who had publicly reprimanded Hull Tuesday for airing his grievances to reporters, told the news conference: "I'm happy to announce that an agreement has been reached between Bobby Hull and the Black Hawks."

GALT (CP) — Oakville Oaks forward Jim "Obie" O'Brien scored five times within Kingston Aces Tuesday, in his team's 7-1 win, and took over the Ontario Hockey Association Senior scoring leadership.

The big night doubled O'Brien's goal production to 19 and shifted him one point above Grant Moore of Orilla Terriers. The Oaks centre has 18 goals and 19 assists.

Orilla's Gary Milroy and Ron Smith of the Hockey Association Hornets are tied for third with 18 points, one behind Moore.

Moe Leland of the Terriers, in fifth spot with 15 points, leads in goals with 11 and Moore has the most assists, 15.

Galt's Ron Boomer has a narrow lead over team-mate Errol McLishan and Gerry McNamara of Orilla in the netminders' race.

Apologetic Hull Returns

CHICAGO (AP) — Bobby Hull, the Golden Jet who scored a record 58 goals in the National Hockey League last season, announced at a news conference Thursday he is rejoining Chicago Black Hawks.

It was more of a capitulation as Hull ended his 12-game sitout by apologizing to management.

He signed a four-year contract calling for a reported $100,000 annually a year ago. He didn't report to the Hawks this season because of personal and business matters involving "fringe benefits."

A battery of advisers, said to number up to 17, and lawyers tried to tie the things together for both sides.

Hull will give up his attention to innumerable outside business interests during the hockey season. It was reported also, he had borrowed money for business reasons from Black Hawk owner Arthur Wirtz on an agreed repayment plan.

The hat-in-hand return was forced mainly because the Hawks suddenly found themselves on a four-game winning streak, without Hull.

Fans for the most part were mollified. They weren't screeching "We Want Bobby!" In fact, many of them let it be known that they were getting tired of hearing about his wampum wrestling.

General manager Tommy Ivan said Hull will have to skate himself back into the lineup and probably won't play this weekend against Oakland Seals or Montreal Canadiens in Chicago Stadium.

So humbled was Hull that he asked Ivan's permission to read a statement at the news conference.

He said all differences between him and the club have been resolved, the club has accepted him back and he has apologized to president William W. Wirtz, but said coach Billy Reay for "having made certain statements which were printed out of context."

"My wish is that the whole episode will soon be forgotten and I pledge my utmost efforts to helping our club to a playoff berth and winning the Stanley Cup for Chicago," Hull said.

"I've learned that I shouldn't open my mouth sometimes."

He said that disputes arose over "differences between my advisers and the club on matters which I now realize are entirely unrelated to my functions as a hockey player."

He expects to be docked on a per-diem basis for missing the season's first 12 games — a total of about $17,000.

He said he had sold his Ontario properties and moved his operations to Saskatchewan — "the only place to raise cattle."

Bobby raised breeder Hereford on his Picton area farm and recently sold 241 head for $135,000 at a private sale in Sawyerville, Que.

"I hope to earn my position back on the team," Bobby said. Ivan made the understatement of the meeting:

"He has an excellent chance."

Petes, Rangers

Junior Rallies in Vogue

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes and Kitchener Rangers both rallied from behind in the final 20 minutes Thursday to produce Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series wins. The Petes scored three times without reply in the third period to overcome London Knights 4-2 and a goal by Bob Hurlburt with 40 seconds to spare won for Kitchener 4-3 over Hamilton Red Wings.

Danny Gloor scored at 16:12 of the third period to power Peterborough into a tie for first place in the 10-team league with the idle St. Catharines Black Hawks, one point up on Toronto Marlboros.

Rick MacLeish and Jim Mahon also scored during the Petes recovery. Clyde Simon and Rick Kehoe scored for the Knights in the second period for a 2-1 London lead after defenceman Ron Plumb collected the only goal of the first period for Peterborough.

At Hamilton, Hurlburt's winning goal extended last-place Hamilton's winless string to 10 games.

The Red Wings led by one goal three times on scores from captain Ron Climie, Gary Crosby, Hurlburt, with another third period goal, and Dave Cressman brought the Rangers back on even terms. Kitchener advanced into a tie for fifth place with 11 points with Ottawa 67s.

Peter Kostek, obtained from Peterborough earlier this week, started his first game in goal for Hamilton.

The Rangers lost the services of starting netminder Cam Newton early in the opening period when he was struck on the knee by Williams' hard shot.

Glen Sepcrich finished the game in goal for Kitchener.

Later in the first period, Hamilton's Gord Brooks was knocked out of action when he collided with Ralph Hopkinvori. Brooks suffered a concussion, whiplash and a broken nose.

First place could change hands tonight when St. Catharines visits Toronto in one of four scheduled games.

Aces Have Pat Hand

Crawford's Aces will be defending their Bay of Quinte Men's Basketball League title in the hard way.

The Aces held their first practice of the 1969-70 season last night with only three holdovers from last year's championship squad.

"We have Tom Lornie, Mark Sheridan and Don McCormack back from last year's team with hopes of getting the scoring ace of Trenton's team, Joe Theriault," said Aces' organizer David Hurst. "We lost last year's top scorer John Chambers, now attending Waterloo - Lutheran University."

"This was the only practice we will have had before our first league game Tuesday night," added Hurst. Game time is 8 pm at Centennial Secondary School.

The Bay of Quinte Basketball League opens Monday night with Picton starting things off against Brighton, while Crawford's Aces' arch-rival Belleville Teachers' team supply opposition at Centennial Tuesday.

The Aces last year dropped their two opening games then came back with fourteen straight victories to capture the Bay of Quinte crown.

"We have a young club," added Hurst. 'But when the boys get used to playing with each other, I know we are going to be a contender."

The Aces' schedule calls for ten games with teams from Cobourg (two teams), Brighton, Picton and Belleville Teachers.

"We hope to do better than we had last year," added Hurst. "We had a good turn out last year and this year's league looks as if it is going to be even more interesting and exciting.

play for the all-Ontario Volleyball championships at Napanee Collegiate, Saturday. Local "AA" teams from Quinte and Picton will represent this area. Guelph Collegiate, "AA" winners the last three years in a row will try to make it four straight this year.

"I am very pleased with the growing interest in Volleyball," commented OPSAA Volleyball Chairman Hyalie Brant. "Competition has grown from a twelve to sixteen-team tournament to a record forty-two teams this year."

Mo-Hawks Wear Sunday Best When Woodstock Comes to Town

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Local hockey followers may take a while to recognize Belleville Mo-Hawks when they make their next home appearance in the Memorial Arena Sunday afternoon against Woodstock Athletics.

There will be about 18 veterans missing from the lineup.

Not players, sweaters.

Going into their fourth year of use, the tattered club red and whites were officially retired this week, thanks to the efforts of the team's Booster Club. Under the leadership of president Jim Graham, the Mo - Hawk Boosters embarked on a sweater replacement project and presented club general manager Robert Temple with a cheque for $468.30, enough to cover the cost of red road sweaters and stockings, and white home uniforms.

The new sweaters now bear a decal-type Indian head below the word "Belleville", but this will be replaced by proper felt crests in the near future.

The existing sweaters, in use since the club's first year of operation four winters ago, are in a sorry state of repair.

Holes big enough to shoot a puck through are common. Lorne Connolly's No. 19 looks like a fan spilled a percolator of coffee on his back, and Ralph Plante's 14 has had its crest torn right off the front. (The club captain has scrawled his own "Mo-Hawks" in the gap with ballpoint pen.)

Most people don't even remember what the old crests depict. Now blurred beyond recognition, the design consists of a pair of crossed hockey sticks bearing Centennial Year Flags.

An indication of just how tattered the old colors are comes from playing-coach Dave Jones, who is hoping to find sponsored sports tradition of not changing any part of a winning combination.

Riding a three-game winning streak, Jones says the Mo-Hawks will nevertheless wear their new sweaters at the first opportunity, that coming in tonight's road game against Barrie Flyers.

"Sure I'm superstitious", Jones noted, "but we're not going to go out on the ice wearing those old rags anymore".

Glad Rags

Belleville Mo-Hawk captain Ralph Plane admires new club sweaters purchased as a project of the team's booster club. Booster president Jim Graham was on hand for the "unveiling" of the new club colors in the Memorial Arena.

Aces Steal Mo-Hawk Thunder

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP-Staff)—Kingston Aces have stolen Belleville Mo-Hawks' thunder by announcing the signing of veteran professional Doug Senior.

Mo-Hawk general manager Robert Temple expressed surprise at the news today. "We've been negotiating with Doug and were optimistic," Mr. Temple noted. "And he promised he would contact me before making a decision either way."

The 28-year-old centre started the current season with the Americans Hockey League's Cleveland Barons and was waiver-out of the AHL Wednesday.

Last winter, Senior was the leading scorer, (22 goals, 38 assists) for Memphis South Stars of the Central Professional League. Senior and brother Bob — coach of the Kingston Junior B Frontenacs — are Kingston natives.

At the same time, the Aces also announced the signing of veteran defenceman Bill Burega, in and out of their club plans for the past three seasons.

Burega spent 14 seasons in the American and Western Hockey Leagues.

OSD Chasing Volleyball Title

Belleville's Ontario School for the Deaf's senior boys' volleyball team are doing everything in their power to help the Secondary School Junior Trojans, the COSSA Junior "AA" football Champs, and Belleville on Ontario's school sports map.

In COSSA senior "A" volleyball district championships, the OSD seniors who placed second in the Bay of Quinte High School League, went on to beat North Hastings High School of Bancroft in semi-final play and North Addington High School of Cloyne in final play two straight games each.

OSD are now looking forward to the Ontario Federation of Schools Athletic Association "A" Volleyball Championships being held at the OSD gym this Saturday at 10 a.m. Nineteen teams from as far away as Elliot Lake, Cochrane, Tilbury and Hawkesbury will take part in this round-robin tournament.

Merlin District High school, the 1968 OFSSA "A" champions, will be on hand to defend their title. OSD's sister school for the deaf at Milton will also be represented. OSD won "A" honours in 1958, 59, 60, 63.

In a similar tournament, "AA" schools over 750 students will

Imperial Midgets After Remedy

Belleville's Blake Kerr Imperial Midget all stars have to come up with a remedy that will put them in the winning column.

The city's midget all-stars have dropped their first two league games to Trenton, 2-0 and Cannonque, 1-0.

With hopes of maintaining the form of hockey needed to be a contender in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, the midget club has scheduled an 8 p.m. exhibition game against Peterborough's minor all - stars at the Memorial Arena Sunday evening.

Juniors Eager

Belleville's Ellis Juniors would like tonight to be the night they beat Trenton's Golden Hawks for the first time in two years when the two teams clash in a 8 p.m. game at the Memorial Arena.

Belleville defeated Trenton 10 in a exhibition game at the start of this season but hasn't recorded a league victory in two years against the Golden Hawks. During league action last year the locals managed just one tie.

The Ellis Juniors have a good chance to move past the fifth place Golden Hawks with a victory over Trenton Friday night and a win against Oshawa's Crushmen in Oshawa Saturday night. The locals just missed recording their first win of the Eastern Ontario Junior B season Sunday when they tied Oshawa 6-6 in the Memorial Arena.

The Golden Hawks have a game in hand over the Belleville club with two wins and four losses. The locals have one tie to show for five outings.

"If the boys skate tonight the way they skated in the games against Peterborough and Oshawa we should beat this Trenton club", said Belleville coach / Floyd Crawford. "We have to start winning sometime and I could think of no better time to do so than against Trenton". "It would be a big boost to the boys if they beat this Trenton club".

"Tonight is Nicholson Catholic College night at the Memorial Arena with any student in the possession of a Nicholson student card being admitted for 25 cents.

TORONTO (CP) — The local television blackout for Sunday's first game of the Eastern Football Conference final in Toronto between Toronto Argonauts will remain in force.

The EFC executive Thursday rejected a plea from Ron Hunka, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation national director of sports, to lift the blackout.

The request was made in a letter to Canadian Football League president Lew Hayman of Toronto.

"Actually it's a conference matter and should have gone to Eastern Conference president Joe Wright," Hayman said. "I called Joe and he said we should poll for a vote of the clubs. We did this and the blackout will not be lifted."

Blackout regulations involve a radius of 75 miles from the game site and, in this case, affects CBC affiliated stations in Toronto, Barrie and Peterborough.

"It's no different than in the past," Hayman said. "There's no reason to change it."

OTTAWA (CP) — David Loeb, president and owner of the Ottawa Rough Rider football club said Thursday that changes will have to be made in Canada's television laws if the Canadian Football League is to survive.

And in a speech to the Ottawa branch of the Canadian Club, Loeb also warned that the possibility of American football setting up shop in Canada could be a second major factor in wiping out the CFL.

He said present television copyright laws allow cable television, to re-broadcast "free of charge" the CFL football games without league or TV network authority.

"The cable systems, in re-transmitting the signals of football games without league or network authority, appear to be guided by a 1954 Exchequer Court ruling, a judgment which apparently was based on copyright laws which had been written before the televising of games and therefore before cablevision was a reality," he said.

The Rough Riders' owner also made it clear he feels that a United States football league franchise in Canada would put the finishing touches to the effects of cablevision on the CFL.

He said such a franchise system would result in further dilution of finances because interest by fans would be divided.

O'Quinn Denies He's in Market for Als

OTTAWA (CP) — An angry Red O'Quinn said Thursday he is not associated with any group seeking to buy Montreal Alouettes.

O'Quinn, general manager of Ottawa Rough Riders, said his main concern now is with the two-game, total-points Eastern Football Conference series against Argonauts starting Sunday in Toronto.

It is "embarrassing to me and unfair to the coaches and players" for these rumors to circulate at this time, O'Quinn said.

The Ottawa Citizen reported that Rider director Sam Berger has bought the Als for about $1,300,000 and that O'Quinn would be the new Montreal general manager. The story also said that Ottawa assistant coach Jake Gotta would get the head coaching job at Montreal.

Berger, a city lawyer, said he might have something to say about the matter later. But at the moment, he was neither confirming nor denying the report.

Gotta said he hasn't been offered any head coaching job. There has been talk that Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Conference want Gotta to replace Joe Zaleski.

And while the rumor factory worked overtime, coach Frank Clair put the Riders through a three-hour drill preparing for the Argos.

The Riders got a slight scare Wednesday when halfback Gene Thomas went lame on a pass pattern run. But it turned out to be a minor injury and won't keep him from Sunday's action.

Linebacker Wayne Giardino also is working out at the position left vacant by the injury to speedster Vic Washington.

Giardino played fullback when needed last year and ran well for Ottawa.

O'Quinn was concerned that the story of Berger buying the Montreal club and taking along two members of the Rider brass might unsettle the Riders.

"If the Montreal club has been sold, there are only two parties that can answer the question—(Montreal owner) Joe Atwell and the purchasers," O'Quinn said.

His concern was helping the Riders all he could to win a second straight Grey Cup.

Ottawa owner David Loeb also said he wasn't aware of the Als being sold and noted that Montreal would need his permission to talk Jobs with O'Quinn and Gotta.

If a club is sold, the purchase must be ratified by other clubs in the CFL. The report says this ratification will be sought when the owners meet in Montreal during Grey Cup week.

Sutherin's Kicking Main Difference Between Riders, Argos During Past Season

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

TORONTO (CP) — When you compare the Eastern Football Conference finalists, take a look at the field goals and interceptions.

Toronto Argonauts play host in Ottawa Rough Riders Sunday in the first game of the EFC two-game, total-point final to decide the Eastern representative in the Grey Cup.

During the season, Ottawa won all three times the clubs met—34-27, 28-23, and 20-9. The Riders outscored the Argos 79-59.

And so far as scoring is concerned, it was kicker Don Sutherin who provided the margin of victory.

each converted seven. Ottawa kicked three singles against Toronto and Toronto kicked four against Ottawa.

But in field goals, Sutherin tried 12 and was good on seven for 21 points. Tom Johansen tried one and Dave Mann two for the Argos and none of the three was good.

Now look at the interceptions. Jimmy Dye picked off one Russ Jackson pass, the only one any Argo intercepted against him. Dye was dropped for no gain.

For Ottawa, Sutherin picked off three and linebacker Jerry Campbell got two. Ed Joyner, Joe Poirier and Bill Van Burkleo stole one each.

In all, Ottawa intercepted eight Toronto passes for 56 yards.

Each team has a star halfback out for the season and contributed significantly to the club's success.

Each team scored eight touchdowns against the other and Toronto has swirled around how much this will hurt each club.

Both Vic Washington and Dave Rainey appeared in two of the three games the clubs played against each other.

Washington carried 12 times for 80 yards and a 6.9-yard average for the Rough Riders. He caught 10 passes for 158 yards and a 15.6-yard average.

Rainey rushed 19 times for 104 yards and a 5.5-yard average for the Argos. He caught five passes for 34 yards and a 6.8 average.

As a team, Ottawa rushed 82 times for 504 yards and a 6.1-yard average against the Argos. Going the other way, Toronto piled up 458 yards on 72 carries for a 6.4 average.

In passing, Ottawa got 782 yards on 43 completions for an average gain of 18.2 yards. Toronto quarterbacks were good on 44 passes for 765 yards and a 17.4-yard average.

Toronto had the edge in punt runbacks but on kickoff runbacks there was little to choose between the clubs.

Jackson was the top rusher for Ottawa with 200 yards on 20 carries for a 10-yard average. Bill Symons led Toronto-32 carries, 208 yards, 6.5-yard average.

Jackson threw 80 of the 81 passes Ottawa attempted and gets credit for all 43 completions for 682 yards and a whopping 53.8 percentage.

Tom Wilkinson completed 27 of the 51 he tried for Toronto, getting 454 yards and a 52.9 percentage. Frank Cosentino passed 34 times, completed 18 for 266 yards and 44.1 per cent.

Jackson lost one pass by interception; Cosentino lost two. Ottawa picked off six on Wilkinson.

Stamps Live or Die By Pass Against Ground-Gobbling Roughies

TORONTO (CP) — If your heart belongs to Calgary, your shirt could end up in the possession of Saskatchewan.

Such is the conclusion which may be drawn from comparative statistics kept by the Canadian Football League.

Calgary Stampeders and Saskatchewan Roughriders embark Saturday on a best-of-three quest for the Western Football Conference playoff title. The first game goes in Regina at 4 p.m. CST and will be televised on the CTV national network.

The clubs met three times during the regular season and Saskatchewan won them all—24-8, 31-12 and 24-18, outscoring the Stamps 79-38.

In doing so, some surprising figures turned up in the statistics.

Calgary came up with a greater total offence than Saskatchewan—1,042 yards to 788. The Stamps went an average of 2.7 yards every time they ran with the ball; Saskatchewan's average was 3.5. However, the Riders outrushed the Stamps 346 yards to 265.

The Stamps, who live or die by the pass, totalled 777 yards through the air while Saskatchewan posted 442. Yet on average, the Riders were better—17 yards per pass compared with 12.7 for Calgary.

The rushing of the western opener, especially to eastern fans accustomed to such rumbling as that of Ottawa's Russ Jackson who got nine yards every time he carried.

Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan ran for one touchdown, but wound up with a deficit of nine yards for the eight times he fled with the ball in three appearances against Calgary. Jerry Keeling of the Stamps scampered nine times for a total of eight yards.

Calgary, the passing club, got all four touchdowns against Saskatchewan through the air. Saskatchewan, with the more balanced attack, got five touchdowns passing and two along the ground.

Self-Government for North Still Many Years Away

OTTAWA (CP) — As bluntly as he could, Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien told the Yukon and Northwest Territories this week there will be no significant advance in self-government for either of them for a long time to come.

And despite the howls from the fully-elected Yukon legislative assembly, and two of the elected members of the N.W.T. council, the government for now will turn a deaf ear to any further territorial demands for governmental reform.

Mr. Chretien merely added two elected members to the N.W.T. council. It now will have nine elected and five appointed members.

He kept the Yukon council at its level of seven elected. But he offered to set up a sort of cabinet which would include three high-level public servants and one elected councillor to be picked by the council.

There were a few other small changes—such as allowing each council to set its own pay rate and to lower the voting age in territorial elections from the present 21 years.

But it leaves the territorial governments in firm control of federal public servants. Each is headed by a federally-appointed public servant who is responsible to Mr. Chretien only.

The commissioner, in consultation with the minister, proposes legislation for each council. The commissioner also is head of the public service force and it is responsible only to him.

Since 1965, when Ottawa appointed an advisory commission to determine how self-government in the N.W.T. should progress, expectations were high in some quarters that the North might have more say in its own affairs.

The commission brought in a number of recommendations along this line. All were aimed at the commissioner gradually taking a back seat and allowing elected people to have more say.

In reality, the chief reforms for the N.W.T. were accomplished in 1967 when it was decided to move territorial government headquarters from Ottawa to Yellowknife and build up a territorial public service to replace the federal employees who had carried out territorial ordinances.

When these measures were announced in 1967, a further statement was promised with government reforms not only for the N.W.T. but for the Yukon as well.

For various reasons, the policy paper kept getting pushed down on the government's priority list. And the longer the delay, the higher the hopes became in the North.

Mr. Chretien obviously was tense when he read the statements to each of the councils. He knew more was expected than each policy statement was giving.

In the N.W.T., the hopes were that the government would follow the advisory commission's recommendations to end by stages the dominant role of the commissioner.

The Yukon council went further. It passed a motion last year calling for a 14-member council and a five-man executive which would run most territorial departments.

Mr. Chretien's statement that neither territory was ready for provincial status went unchallenged. Nor was there a great cry about Ottawa retaining control over the natural resources of the North.

But the absence of any significant changes went down hard.

The N.W.T. council can be expected to accept the statement. The debate could rage for some time, however, in the Yukon where feelings run much higher among the elected members.

The Yukoners, in the first debate after the statement, indicated none of the elected members would serve on the executive committee.

But with elections coming up next year, newer members might take a different view.

Justifying the slight changes he proposed for each territory, Mr. Chretien pointed to small populations and annual budgets that required millions of dollars in subsidies.

He also pointed to the fact that the North is roughly 40 per cent of the Canadian land mass and said the potential natural resources they contain belong to all Canadians.

It can be argued that outside the respective councils, there is little demand for government reform among territorial residents.

Bud Orange, Liberal MP for the N.W.T., says it is not a burning issue among the 22,000 persons there. About two-thirds of that population is either Indian or Eskimo and they have more basic problems.

Erik Nielsen, Conservative MP for the Yukon, says the demand for government reform is widespread there.

Privately, some Yukon council members disagree. Press and radio representatives also say this.

Mr. Chretien said he has yet to get a letter from any Yukoner seeking more power for the council.

But he gets lots of mail from the territory asking about roads, power and other matters.

Hot Debate Erupts At Whiterock Meeting

TORONTO (CP) — Eight firms and two individuals have been named by Leslie Rowntree, Ontario minister of financial and commercial affairs, in the government's investigation into Whiterock Estates, a land development scheme in the Peterborough area.

The Whiterock order, signed by Mr. Rowntree last week and released Thursday, orders an investigation into the affairs of Whiterock Estates, Whiterock Developments, Rekab Investments Ltd., Pall Holdings Ltd., Basvan Investments Ltd., Black Forest Investments Ltd., Lorcland Developments Ltd. and Coldo Investments Ltd.

Also named are Gary Bluestein and Monty C. Bober.

Mr. Rowntree also released an investigation order into the activities of Meadows Land Development Co. Ltd. in Simcoe County's Tay Township.

Officials of Whiterock Estates held a public meeting Thursday to explain their position, but ran into two hours of questioning from a government official, conservationists, lawyers and housewives.

The promoters of Whiterock's own a piece of Canada scheme were accused of perpetrating a fraud.

Mrs. Tom Lawson of Port Hope, Ont., said the company was "perpetrating a fraud on your prospective buyers" by claiming there was no official fear of pollution in the area of the company's property south of Peterborough.

She said Cobourg's medical officer of health, Dr. Charlotte Horner, had said she definitely was concerned about such a threat in the area.

Walter Pitman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Peterborough, said his chief concern was that there were no subdivision controls in the townships in which Whiterock has located, and every land acquisition by the company became a "race for the registry office" before controls would be imposed.

He also wanted to know if soil tests had been made to find out whether wells could be successfully bored and septic tanks installed without pollution problems.

"To the best of my knowledge tests were taken but I'm not sure about Cavan township," said Jack Wall, managing director of sales for Whiterock.

"Can you assure us categorically that water will be obtained and that the properties will take the sewage?" demanded Mr. Pitman.

Mr. Wall said that each purchaser could get an agreement insuring the services.

Send Kierans to Pasture Stanfield Advises PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield suggested Thursday that Prime Minister Trudeau appoint Communications Minister Eric Kierans to the national parole board "or some other refuge" for Liberals.

He made the comment in the Commons after Mr. Trudeau said he does not take the position that Premier John Robarts of Ontario embarks on grandstand plays.

Mr. Kierans said Wednesday that the Confederation for Tomorrow conference convened by Mr. Robarts in 1967 was a grandstand play.

Mr. Stanfield said Mr. Kierans is an embarrassment and liability to the country.

He asked whether Mr. Kierans was stating government policy when he said all provinces except Quebec had contributed little to the constitutional review.

Ontario Educational TV May Start Next Fall

THE PICK OF Punch

The sooner this place becomes a ghost town the better

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's first full-scale educational television outlet will be in operation by the fall of 1970 or the spring of 1971 if an application this month to the Canadian Radio Television Commission is approved.

The application is being made by the CBC, which as agent for the federal government will be the broadcasting arm of a provincial ETV system.

Education Minister William Davis said there will eventually be five regional outlets in the province.

They will fall under the control of an independent ETV Authority, still to be established by legislation, which will be responsible for allocating times of broadcast for programs produced by the educational television branch of the education department, regional ETV associations and the universities and community colleges.

The CBC application, released Thursday to the legislature's committee on education over the protests of the corporation, asks for a licence to operate on ultra-high-frequency Channel 19, with a tower established on property now occupied by CBLT Toronto.

The outlet's range will provide ETV programs in a circle that touches Stouffville on the north, Acton on the west; Hamilton, Port Dalhousie and Niagara-on-the-Lake on the south and Oshawa on the east.

Proposed date of operations in September, 1970. No live programs will be available at the start because of lack of studio facilities, but there will be 1,500 programs on tape available through the resource centre of the education department's ETV branch. These films will for an important part of the programming schedule for 1970 and 1971, the application said.

The primary language will be English, but there will be language instruction for both school children and adults, programs in French for French language schools and for adults, and ethnic languages for the area's needs.

The estimated available audience for UHF broadcasting by next September will be 33 per cent of all TV viewers, or 34,000, with a potential of 800,000. It costs between $15 and $50 to equip an existing TV set for UHF programs, but UHF equipment is included in all new sets.

Robarts Won't Ask Hydro to Rescind Price Boost

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has no intention of instructing Ontario Hydro to "roll back" on its recent six-per-cent average increase in the wholesale cost of electric power.

Premier John Robarts said in the legislature Thursday that such an approach would be "simplistic" and would offer no real solution.

"We wouldn't contemplate it —it's not a sensible approach," he said.

He was replying to a question from Hugh Peacock (NDP—Windsor West).

Mr. Peacock's question arose from a morning meeting of the legislature's standing committee on commissions, which was called to allow Hydro officials to explain the increase, announced Monday.

He criticized the increase as inflationary.

Mr. Robarts said Hydro is caught in the inflationary spiral, an argument put forth at the morning meeting by Hydro chairman George Gathercole.

Mr. Gathercole told the committee the increase was caused by a rise in operating costs and a large expansion program.

He said operation and maintenance costs had risen to an estimated $87,700,000 in 1970 from $41,200,000 in 1966. Seventy-five per cent of operation and maintenance figures is labor costs.

Mr. Gathercole also said fuel costs have risen to an estimated $86,200,000 in 1970 from $34,800,000 in 1966.

Mr. Gathercole admitted during the morning meeting that Ontario Hydro is not sure its $2,500,000,000 nuclear power program will be a success.

But the evidence became such that this wasn't the best way to produce power, then we would have to move in another direction," he said.

Eddie Sargent (L—Grey-Bruce) asked:

"Do you mean to tell us that you're spending $2,500,000,000 on the nuclear project and you're not convinced it's the right approach?"

Mr. Gathercole said Ontario was committed to developing atomic power stations.

Re-assessment Near

Transfer of Tax Burden to Home-owners Will Be Eased

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario might increase the tax on business property or make interim transfer payments to ease an expected shift in the municipal tax burden to home-owners from businesses under the province's new assessment system, Darcy McKeough, minister of municipal affairs, said Thursday.

Mr. McKeough said his department does not yet have enough information to determine just what the effects of re-assessment will be, but will take steps to relieve the situation if predictions prove right and the burden shifts to residential property.

The legislature gave second reading or approval in principle, by a vote of 41 to 30 to the proposed assessment act. Once it is given third reading the legislation will force re-assessment of all properties in the province at market values, and will turn the assessment function over to the province from the municipalities.

Earlier in the debate, New Democratic Party Leader Donald MacDonald said re-assessment may bring a tripling of some residential property tax assessments while industrial assessments only double.

He claimed that in Ajax, for example, the effect of re-assessment would be to shift 12 per cent of assessment values from commercial and industrial properties to the "already-overtaxed homeowner."

Mr. McKeough said the government is worried about such possible shifts and is considering the best way to alleviate them.

However, re-assessment would not always result in a higher municipal tax burden on the already highly-taxed.

Mr. McKeough said the province is moving towards several changes in the property tax system, including a generally-higher rate on business, but must first establish basic reform through re-assessment.

Off-track Betting Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — Seven Ontario businessmen, including pro golfer George Knudson, appealed to Attorney-General Arthur Wishart Thursday to press the federal government into legalizing off-track betting, allowing them to set up an electronic messenger service to relay bets from bookies to race tracks.

Proposing to call their company Tote Investors Ltd., the seven predicted in a brief to the attorney-general that legalizing off-track betting in Ontario would at least triple horse-betting revenue, and the provincial tax cut.

This would bring betting revenue to $1,000,000,000 and the provincial tax yield to $75,000,000.

The seven men, all from the Toronto area, are: Knudson, Ronald Barnett, John Bennell, Courtney Bracken, William Fice, Peter McWilliams and John Alcott. They proposed that their company would also serve as a clearing house and banker for betting shops.

OHSC May Cover Nursing Homes

TORONTO (CP) — A government committee has been set up to study whether nursing homes should be brought under the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, the OHSC commissioner of hospitals said Thursday.

Dr. D. J. Twiss told the legislature's health committee that OHSC insurance coverage now extends only to 39 nursing homes that are being used to provide extra beds for the type of chronic patient who should be in hospital.

Convalescents and infirm elderly patients do not qualify for OHSC coverage and there had been complaints that this situation was unfair, he said.

Margaret Renwick (NDP—Scarborough Centre) said at least 50 per cent of Ontario residents cannot afford to keep a family member in a nursing home. Consequently, helpless old people were dying without care in lonely apartments.

Potash Price Boost Costly for Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Saskatchewan's plans to raise the price of potash fertilizer will cost Ontario farmers at least $1,000,000 more a year, Agriculture Minister William Stewart said Thursday.

He told the legislature he hopes the federal government will be able to persuade Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher not to go through with the increases but, if not, Ontario farmers should start buying their potash from European markets.

Algoma Steel gained ¼ to 18 although the company reported a third-quarter loss of $328,000 compared with a profit of $4,406,000 in the similar 1968 period.

In banks, Royal was down ¼ to 23¼, Nova Scotia ¼ to 25½ and Montreal ¼ to 16¾.

The profit taking actually began in mid-session Wednesday after the market had risen since Monday in response to tax reforms proposed last week by the federal government.

The industrial index, which jumped 11.28 points, or 6.34 per cent, a record for three consecutive days, fell 2.84, to 189.34. This was nine points below its all-time high of 198.77 reached since Monday.

Trading, active for most of the session, tapered off near the close. Volume was 3,998,000 shares compared with 4,721,000 Wednesday.

Losses outnumbered gains 352 to 221 with 229 issues unchanged.

Fifteen of the 17 industrial components were lower. Utility and food processing stocks were fractionally higher.

Real estate, bank, trust and loan and industrial mine issues led the industrial decline.

In the real estate group, Peel-Elder fell 1 to 25 although third-quarter earnings were 21 cents a share compared with 18 cents in the similar 1968 period.

Among banks, Canadian Imperial lost 1 to 23 and Royal 1 to 23¾, and in the loan group Royal Trust slipped ½ to 27½.

In industrial mines, Falconbridge fell 3⅛ to 150, Hudson Bay Mining 1 to 85 and Inco ⅛ to 43¼.

Mattagami lost ¼ to 27¼ and Abitibi ¼ to 12¾. Trading in both issues was halted briefly at the opening while the companies released further drilling results from their Sturgeon Lake, Ont., base metals property.

Mattagami has a 60 per-cent interest in the property and Abitibi a 40 per-cent interest.

Husky Oil rose ¼ to 13¾.

Campbell Chibougamau lost ⅛ to 12¾ although the company reported a first-quarter profit of $1,329,662 compared with a loss of $108,334 in the similar 1968 period.

Alberta Gas Trunk was down ⅛ to 42⅞ although nine-month earnings were $1.94 a share compared with $1.46 in the corresponding 1968 period.

Pure Silver rose 75 cents to $4.25, a high for the year. The company reported further drill results from its silver prospect in Mexico.

On index, western oils were down 1.77 to 305.60 and base metals .53 to 118.28. Golds gained .37 to 137.86.

Stirling

STIRLING — Mr. and Mrs. John Sheridan entertained 50 guests to dinner at their home in honor of the 50th wedding anniversary of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vance.

Mrs. Floyd Armstrong, president of Stirling Horticultural Society, Mrs. Raymond McConnell, Mrs. Dennis Armstrong and Mrs. Ray Rose convened on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ashley Brooks. They arranged the prize list for the June flower show and the fall fair of 1970.

On Friday evening, Nov. 7 River Valley Women's Institute sponsored their first euchre party with 10 tables in play. Members of the agricultural group provided refreshments. The prizes for high and second were women's: Mrs. George Heasman and Mrs. Kenneth Tompkins and men's were won by Mr. Ross Bush and Harold Carr.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

The reverberating sound of power saws was heard as a work party cleared trees in dead wood at the camp Sagonaska camping ground last Saturday.

The Oneida site received special attention as group committee-men manned the saws and venturers from First Avondale, Fifth Belleville and Fifteenth Belleville cleaned up and piled fire wood for next year's activities. The boys also swept out the sleeping cabins and storage shelter.

There was activity of a different nature in the camp parking area. The Hastings and Prince Edward army cadets, under the command of Capt. Hubble, were having a weekend outing.

The Knights of Columbus trophy, won at last summer's cuboree, was formally presented to the grey six of the 18th Belleville Pack by Assistant District Commissioner George Fisher at a recent ceremony.

At last Monday's district council meeting District Commissioner Arnold Welch spoke about training. At first aid course, directed by Basil Kirby, and beginning on Nov. 11, has attracted a registration of nearly 50 scouts.

The previously announced St. John's Ambulance course has been postponed until next March. The annual swimming course will probably begin in early January at the local YMCA. Lewis Andrews will, as usual, be chief instructor.

The council meeting itself was following a new routine; business discussions were kept short and members enjoyed a short social session of movies and refreshments.

At Tuesday's Armistice Day ceremonies the boy scouts were represented by George Fisher, who laid a wreath at the cenotaph.

TRY OUT A CHEVY AT VOLKSWAGEN

Try out any of the cars people trade in for new V-Ws. We get all kinds.

But we don't sell them again just like that. We check them out first. Give them a safety and performance inspection. Fix whatever needed fixing. Then guarantee the repair of every major working part 100% for 30 days or 1000 miles. Whichever comes first.

Incidentally, the guarantee comes with all our used cars.

Even the Volkswagens.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Hiatal Hernia Scares Patient

He was a big man, in his early 40s, and sat across from my desk hunched up in fear. It all began a few weeks ago when a doctor discovered he had a hiatal hernia (enlarged opening in the diaphragm). Let him tell it:

I have been having pain around my left breastbone and centre chest - wall, off and on for the past few years. Recently it became more severe.

I thought it was my heart. I went to a doctor who took X-rays and found that I have a hiatal hernia. He said this is the cause of my pain. Electrocardiograms and other tests show my heart is not enlarged and the heart beat is good.

Well, you can imagine how good I was beginning to feel when I heard that. He told me to eat small meals, but more frequently. He also said I should sleep on two or three pillows. He gave me a prescription for some antacid tablets and asked me to reduce about 15 pounds.

I was about ready to leave his office when he said something that scared the daylights out of me. He said if I lifted anything heavy I was in danger of rupturing it more. I asked him if I needed an operation and he said no. As it is now I am in constant fear of doing something that would cause it to rupture and send me into a hemorrhage.

Comment: If you don't go in for weight-lifting or exercise unnaturally, I told him, you will not get into trouble. Be thankful that your doctor has made the diagnosis, has removed fear of heart disease, and has outlined the correct treatment.

Most of us believe, as he does, that conservative medical treatment is usually better than operation. Forget about hemorrhage. He didn't say it; it's your own idea. I guess he felt better, because he almost took my hand off in shaking it with gratitude.

* * *

For Mrs. R.: Addison's disease is due to a hormonal deficiency in the adrenal glands. Symptoms and signs vary, but common ones are fatigue, low blood pressure; dark pigmentation of the skin, upset in salt metabolism and susceptibility to infections.

Patients usually do quite well on cortisone and other treatment. President John F. Kennedy, who supposedly had Addison's, overcame his deficiencies and was able to withstand the strain of office. So you see, there is hope that your son will improve, too.

For Mrs. G.: I hope other readers will pardon me for repeating (and repeating) that there is no proof that aluminum cooking utensils cause cancer.

* * *

For Mr. H.: Using a tip or a clean handkerchief—or other safety-first measures, I see no harm in trying to remove a dust speck from someone's eye. But consult a physician if possible when one keeps trying and trying.

If not quickly successful in this minor operation, it's safer to stop. Too much manipulation may cause an eye inflammation. Moreover, what looks like a dust speck may be a piece of metal or other foreign body which requires an eye specialist's intervention.

For Mrs G.: I know of no reason why warmed-over coffee should harm anyone. Excepts, perhaps, insult the tastebuds. It's not as palatable as fresh coffee.

For Mr. M.: A fractured clavicle is a broken collarbone. The treatment is simple and the outlook for recovery usually very good.

PROMOTES CITY

EDMONTON (CP) — The industrial development department has a new marketing program aimed at about 500 companies distributed in Alberta whose major plant in Western Canada is not in Edmonton. Goal of the program is to inform the firms of trends and economic factors that make Edmonton the logical city to service the West. The new program is in addition to existing marketing programs to lure major U.S. and Canadian firms who might be persuaded to choose Edmonton as their manufacturing or distribution centre.

Banks' Attitude to Small Business Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — Chartered banks came in for criticism in the Commons Thursday as the opposition contended there is little to gain in amending the Small Businesses Loans Act unless the big lenders show more interest in this type of loan.

The bill amending the legislation was given second reading and sent to committee for detailed study.

But not before Clifford Downey (PC—Battle River), an Alberta rancher, urged Finance Minister Edgar Benson to make the banks live up to the obligations they undertook when they got their charters—to provide credit.

Among other things, the bill would extend federally-guaranteed lending privileges to insurance, trust and loan companies and credit unions.

Thursday night the House began debate on a bill to provide $201,700,000 capital financing for the CNR and Air Canada, crown-owned companies. This bill—a similar one comes up annually—was to remain under discussion today.

Opposition MPs chose the measures as a debating vehicle for their criticism of the CNR and the Canadian Pacific Railway for their current applications before the Canadian transport commission for abandonment of certain passenger services.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) said both railways are reneging on a moral commitment to the communities along their lines to continue providing passenger services. He called for a full-scale inquiry into the losses on lines the railways want to abandon.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) urged MPs to oppose the money request until the government made a clear statement on transportation policy. He accused the government of subsidizing unprofitable transport services until they became profitable, then letting private interests take over the service.

The House also gave second reading to a bill extending lending rights under the Canada Student Loans Act to institutions such as trust, loan and insurance companies.

Speaking on the bill, which was debated Wednesday and also goes to a standing committee, Herb Gray, minister without portfolio, said opposition proposals that basic changes should be made in the legislation are premature pending a review being conducted by the provinces.

He said banks had made about $23,000,000 available under the scheme since its inception in 1954. Students meeting their full obligations ran about 93 per cent.

Under the proposed amendments, students may borrow up to $1,500 a year. They may not borrow more than $5,000 over all.

On the small-businesses loans bill, Mr. Gray (Essex West) said that to qualify for loans up to $25,000 for development and expansion, firms must have estimated gross annual revenues of less than $500,000. Loans must be repaid within 10 years.

Lending under the act had ranged annually since 1960 between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000. The total volume dropped to $11,000,000 in 1968.

The act does not place the banks under any obligation to make such loans. In fact, it is a requirement that they exercise the same care . . . as they do in the general conduct of their business."

Mr. Downey contended the banks were exercising this care by lending their money to big business where they could draw more than the 6%-per-cent interest allowable at present under the act.

Total loans under the bill would increase to an outstanding value of $150,000,000 from $100,000,000. Mr. Downey said the $25,000 ceiling for individual loans should be $40,000 to $50,000.

Rod Thorpson (NDP—Battleford-Kindersley) asked Mr. Benson to remember that small businesses are in a less favorable position than big firms when it comes to paying high interest rates.

Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin) said Mr. Benson's tax proposals as outlined in a white paper last week will effectively wipe out small businesses.

Computers in Schools Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — They had to lock the classroom doors to get the students to go home at night. The students were learning twice as fast and with better grades than before.

Those are the kinds of claims about computer-aided teaching systems which are coming under scrutiny by scientists and educators at the National Research Council.

As part of a program to evaluate computer-aided teaching, NRC Thursday unveiled a new $431,000 computer. It will enable research workers at the other centres of study to plug into the work at the information science section of the NRC labs here.

The Ontario Institute for Studies in Education at the University of Toronto will be the first educational body to join the system next January or February. Other universities will plug in at later dates.

Course material in French and English is stored in the computer's memory bank. Classes at distant points will be able to plug in to it at the teachers' choice on a time-sharing arrangement.

CYC Conducting Purge Of Political Activists

OTTAWA (CP) — A purge of political activists is under way in the Company of Young Canadians, a Commons inquiry was told Thursday night.

The assurance came after the committee learned that the CYC's St. Hyacinthe, Que., volunteers help the separatist Parti Quebecois organize.

"Can you understand now why we are worried?" said Jacques Guilbault (L—Montreal St.-Jacques), who raised the matter. "We are paying for the organization of the Parti Quebecois."

CYC Executive Director Claude Vidal replied that MPs can look forward to a number of cases of "deselection" when the CYC council metes Dec. 13.

"Deselection," in CYC jargon, means dismissal.

Mr. Guilbault, digging into CYC files, also raised the case of the CYC volunteers who helped organize and lead a citizens political party in St. Jerome, Que. The mayor was defeated in recent elections as a result, Mr. Guilbault said.

He was told volunteers can no longer get involved in political parties.

CYC Reject Declares Belief In God Got Her Thrown Out

OTTAWA (CP) — An "ingroup" at one of the Company of Young Canadians early training camps allowed open discussion of "anti-religious or atheistic views" but squeezed out anyone who expressed religious conviction, a Commons inquiry was told Thursday.

The allegation came in a letter written to a former member of Parliament Aug. 28, 1967, by Ruth Watson, who said she was "deselected" as a CYC trainee the year before at the Moncton, N.B., camp.

Two "hippies" from Kingston helped in training, discussed "living with common-law wives," and told of being trained in the United States to "conduct riots."

She was told after the Moncton Camp that she was being "deselected," or given the boot, because she wasn't objective enough, hadn't "projected," and hadn't contributed in discussion. She said she was told privately later that her "allegiance to God" made her partial and would not allow her to relate effectively to the people she would work with as a volunteer.

Poverty Ugly in City

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Walking downtown at night in a big city like Chicago, which is quite typical, I thought of the dramatic difference between "poverty" in rural areas and "poverty" in urban areas. They are hardly the same thing at all.

I spend my summers in a part of Wisconsin which is officially classified as "economically distressed" — meaning that the average income hovers somewhere under $3,500 a year. This is hard and tight, but it is not mean or cheap or ugly.

Poverty in the big city is mean and cheap and ugly. The downtown districts, despite their best (if belated) efforts, are losing their more affluent customers, and have been forced to seek newer and more prosperous markets in the suburban shopping centres.

The sights and sounds and odors of a downtown night-time crowd are depressing and lawdry. The people are ill-clad, sullen or frantic, badly behaved, seeking for bargains that don't exist or pleasures that turn out to be expensive and joyless.

In contrast, the "poor" people shopping in the county seat on summer nights are clean and well-mannered, self-respecting and proud of their ability to "make do" on a meagre income.

But these people are dying out or moving away, while the urban complexes are growing at a frightening rate of population. So that the very character of "poverty" is changing radically year by year; it can no longer be clean and dignified and prideful, as it can in an agrarian economy; it can only be squalid and bitter and resentful.

When we consider that nearly one-third of all Americans still live near or at the poverty-line (which is defined by the Bureau of Labor Statistics as under $4,000 a year for a family), it becomes easy to understand why the cities are in such fiscal trouble — as well as why crime, disorder and general rebelliousness threaten the stability of all urban governments.

It is not "poverty" as such that breeds crime — this is an over-simplified and outmoded view — it is a particular kind of urbanized poverty, where the sense of community has been lost, where the future seems nothing but a repetition of the past, where the old-fashioned values that sustained the farm living and the town family have been broken up by the rootlessness of industrialized living.

It is relatively easy, and sometimes almost bracing, to be poor in the country; it is hard, and usually demoralizing, to be poor in the city — with so much opulence at hand, and so little to obtain it with. We must recognize this difference before it is too late.

Added Jobs Prove Existing Industry Not Slow Growth: Joyce

A 14 per cent increase in the past two years in the employment level of Belleville's established industry was hailed today as "clear evidence we have industry which cannot be categorized as slow growth.".

Belleville Industrial Commission president Alderman Gerald Joyce today said "figures compiled by industrial commissioner Ray Brown indicate clearly the interim urban renewal study is not accurate in its references to our established industry."

Mr. Brown, in a report to the industrial commission on Thursday, told directors "the labor force at established industry had increased by 307 employees in the past seven months. Added to 325 new jobs at existing industry created between November, 1967 until April of this year it meant nearly 700 additional employees."

"This proves that new industrial settlement has not been at the expense of existing industry," said Ald. Joyce. "The new plants have put people to work as well. The Unemployment Insurance Commission now has over 300 people on the job and Brooke Bond and Chromalloy will begin hiring in November. Wilson Sporting Goods and the Four Seasons will add considerably to the total in 1970."

Among added benefits, Ald. Joyce said, was the accepted standard that every industrial worker represents an increase of 1.4 employees in the community's supporting service industries.

In discussing the implications of the commission's research on employment, Ald. Joyce said: "Obviously our existing industry has faith in the city's future and is prepared to invest heavily. This is clear by the expansion programs which have been undertaken in the past two years and brought doubly home when you look at the increased employment figures.

"The interim urban renewal study states Belleville did not partake of industrial expansion and employment growth on the same scale as other communities during the period 1966 to 1967.

"No one argues with that. But what we can quarrel about is that the study was to provide us with an up to date survey and the developments of 1968 and 1969 are not reflected in the reports, statistics, tables and charts."

Moon Men At Rest

Module Tests Okay

HOUSTON (AP) — Jolted but undamaged by a violent electrical surge during launch Friday, Apollo 13 streaked through space today toward man's first detailed exploration of the moon surface.

Astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Richard F. Gordon Jr. and Alan L. Bean shook off the effects of what may have been a lightning strike to search for damage in both the command module and the attached lunar module.

They found all systems were intact and Apollo 13 continued toward man's second lunar landing.

More than 18 hours after the blastoff the tired trio ate a light snack then stretched out for a 10-hour rest.

"Have pleasant dreams. See you in the morning," Mission Control told the crew about 5 a.m. The wake-up call and breakfast were scheduled for after 3 p.m.

Only seconds after the spacecraft rode the Saturn V rocket from earth, communications were interrupted momentarily as the astronauts reported their spacecraft instruments were alive with blinking warning lights.

The astronauts spent most of the first day of their mission checking systems and resetting navigation data lost by the power failure.

Conrad and Bean twice crawled into the lunar lander to check the electronics of the spindly-legged machine that will carry them to a moon landing at 1:53 a.m. EST Wednesday.

The troubles did not dent the good humor of the crew or dim the excitement of discovery for Bean, a space rookie. Conrad and Gordon, who have both previously made space flights, were more subdued in their enthusiasm, but still bubbled occasionally.

Conrad, a fan of country and western music, later serenaded mission controllers with an onboard record of The Sah Antonio Rose.

"We're just trying to make Al feel at home," said Conrad of Bean, a Texan.

Protest Crisis Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Violence marred one Washington demonstration but elsewhere in the United States capital and across the U.S. tens of thousands participating in the second Vietnam moratorium held peaceful protests.

Sporadic clashes Friday night between police and a splinter group of protesters attempting to march on the South Vietnamese embassy increased tensions as the capital awaited today's climactic mass march.

Opponents of the Vietnam protest demonstrations continued to speak out at rallies and in newspaper advertisements. One group of 25 St. Louis college students burned a Soviet flag to express support for U.S. Vietnam policy.

The anti-war activity extended to Canada. In Vancouver, more than 1,000 persons carrying candles marched through the streets. Irene Foulks of the Voice of Women organization, said the march was not anti-United States.

"We are just trying to bring peace and end war," she said. "This march is in support of peace by helping the American people end the war now."

Police in Washington used clouds of tear gas to break up the militant group estimated at 3,000 that tried to march on the South Vietnamese embassy. Leaders of the over-all protest disavowed the militants' action.

Army troops were bivouacked in several downtown government agencies as a precaution against violence today. Police alone handled the clash Friday night although District of Columbia National Guards were called on to patrol the scene.

'Butterfly Net' Required

TORONTO (CP) — Stanley Randall, Ontario minister of trade and development, said Friday the Ontario government is thinking of buying Rochdale College to use as a student residence.

He told the legislature:

"But first we'll have to get a butterfly net and a couple of guys in white coats to clean the place out."

The governing council of Rochdale, an experimental, student-orientated school, announced Wednesday it was trying to sell the building because about half of the students were behind in rent.

Mr. Randall, whose department includes the Ontario Student Housing Corporation, said housing officials may negotiate to purchase the 18 storey building in central Toronto when they find out how much Rochdale officials are charging.

Rochdale officials recommended Thursday that the college, built at a cost of $5,800,000, be sold because they cannot raise a $28,000 mortgage payment owed to the federal government at the beginning of the month.

The college, owned by Campus Co-Operative Residences Inc., was an experimental venture in which students and counsellors studied and lived together in a free, voluntary, co-operative atmosphere.

Discretion, Tact Breath Test Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — Dec. 1 is the day when even the freshest mouth in town won't save boozers pulled up in their cars from a compulsory breath test to determine alcohol levels in their blood.

The risk will be unequal, depending on where you live. Only so many municipalities have breath-testing equipment and policemen trained in its use.

But for those that have, Dec. 1 is the effective date of new sections of the Criminal Code making it a crime to have an alcohol level in the blood higher than .08 per cent or to refuse to undergo a breath test administered by a police officer.

The minimum penalty is a $50 fine for either offence. But the penalties can range up to $1,000, six months in jail or both.

Justice Minister Turner, announcing the effective date for the breath-testing legislation, told a news conference Friday he is confident the police will act with discretion, reasonable judgment and tact.

The alcohol level is hard to equate with the number of drinks of liquor or bottles of beer consumed because individuals vary in the rate at which alcohol is absorbed into the blood stream from the stomach. But here are some rough guidelines:

—A 200 pound man who drinks 7½ to eight ounces of the standard 75-proof liquor in an hour will have a blood level of .08 per cent an hour later.

—A 150 pound man who drinks 5½ to six ounces in the same time will hit the crucial .08 blood level in an hour.

—A 100 pound woman would reach the danger level on 3½ to four ounces in the same time periods.

—The beer drinker can convert these examples to pints by multiplying the ounces of liquor by two-thirds.

Blowing Bubbles May Take Hour

OTTAWA (CP) — Breath testing means an automatic trip to the station house and a wait of at least an hour for motorists suspected of drinking come Dec. 1.

At the station you're allowed 15 minutes before the test begins. This allows the police to see if the breath-testing machine is working properly, and gives you time to clear all alcohol from your mouth so it won't jeopardize the final reading.

Then you are asked to breathe deeply into a small heart-shaped filter, attached to a tube running into the machine.

After you blow into the filter, the police switch a black knob at the upper right-hand corner of the machine to the left, and your breath starts being analysed for blood alcohol content.

Your breath then passes from the filter through the tube, into a container of yellow liquid, a potassium solution which fades in color when alcohol passes through it.

After waiting 30 seconds for your breath to bubble through the container the police wait another 90 seconds before taking a final reading.

After 90 seconds, the police check a balancing needle at the top of the machine. If it isn't level, they push a wheel in the bottom right-hand corner until the needle goes back to level. This procedure moves a larger gauge with a red arrow at its end in the right. This red arrow points to a number which signifies the amount of alcohol in your blood.

If the red arrow points to an amount less than .08 per cent, you usually have nothing to worry about. If it's .08 per cent or over, it can mean a fine from $50 to $1,000; six months in jail or both.

Home of the Hasty Pees

"Welcome to Belleville, the Friendly City, Home of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment" reads this newly erected, dual sign at the east and west Highway 2 approaches to the city. The "Hasty Pees" signs are the direct result of a visit to the city last spring by Major General George Kitching, former regional commander, who at an officers' association dinner urged co-operation between the regiment and the city. City council on the suggestion of Mayor J. Russell Scott voted to allow erection of the signs. Viewing the new sign are Mayor Scott and H and P.E. Regiment commander, Lieut.-Col. Ross Allen.

Patients Transferred

Hospital Opens New Extended Care Unit

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

A careful procession sped Belleville General Hospital's latest project yesterday.

Through the afternoon steady stream of patients transferred from the hospital's new wing to its first full scale extended care unit.

While the unit is new, the quarters — even after refurbishing — are still vaguely familiar and with good reason.

Patients in need of lengthy care and convalescence now will be transferred to what formerly was the hospital's second west floor.

Since the new seven-level BGH wing was opened last February, second west has been undergoing a major overhaul.

Redecorated and refurnished it now can house some 30 patients confined to hospital for lengthy periods.

Number Of Eligible Voters Rockets

The number of eligible voters in the Dec. 1 Belleville municipal election has been boosted to more than 20,000 as result of the voters' list court of appeal.

City Clerk Adam Stalker said yesterday that the names of 19,275 persons were now on the voters list — an increase of 1064 since the list was posted late in October.

In all, 1307 names were added, with 243 being taken off for a total increase of 1064.

Many of the names added were those of new residents coming to the city since the assessment roll was completed earlier in the year. Also this year there were an increased number of names added of young people turning 21 years.

"I can't explain it," commented Mr. Stalker. "I expected that only about 200 names would be added to the list."

City Firm Enters U.K. Pakex '70

Now the British are in for a glimpse of Belleville's industrial potential.

The Quinte city will have an exhibit at one of Britain's big industry shows next year.

And it's all courtesy of a firm participating in the current industrial expansion of Belleville's economic potential.

Directors of the Belleville Industrial Commission heard from their vice-chairman Robert Aitken Thursday that his company will have a booth next summer at Pakex '70, a big display for the packaging industry at Olympia, in London.

Mr. Aitken is general manager of Capran Wrapper Film manufacturing plant in the city.

His company, said Mr. Aitken, has offered free floor space to display Belleville's benefits to British industrialists. The Allied display will be part of an Ontario government exhibition.

Poster Contest Planned For Canada Music Week

By LINDA GELDART
(Staff Reporter)

This year marks the tenth anniversary of Canada Music Week — a week devoted to promoting Canadian interest in Canadian music.

Since its inception, musical groups throughout Canada have been attempting to sort and educate the public about the music in their own country, through recitals, church programs and other activities.

In addition to the usual recitals that the local musical group, the Belleville Registered Music Teachers hold, they will actively join in sponsoring another project planned for the week of Nov. 24 to Nov. 30.

The project — a national poster contest — is open to any student from Grade 4 to Grade 8. The top three winners will take home prizes of $100, $50 and $25.

According to Mrs. Julia Van Ochten, secretary and publicity convener of the Belleville Registered Music Teachers, the point of the contest is public relations.

"We hope the students will be responsive to this contest. We want more of the public to know and understand what Canada Music Week is, and what it means."

"Actually," she continued, "the contest could be termed a medium in this respect. We want the people in this country, but particularly here in Belleville, to appreciate the music and the musicians that they have right here at home."

There will be three contest winners from each province, and their entries will be judged to determine the three top posters.

"Each competitor will save the task of depicting any type of music-making in Canada, leaning towards Can-da Music Week, of course. We are hoping there are many young people in the city who have musical interests, and who will want to participate in this contest," said Mrs. Van Ochten.

"Entry forms are available from any registered music teacher and from Kammer's Musical Supplies on Front St. Deadline for entries will be April 1, 1970," she added.

Also as part of Canada Music Week, the Belleville music teachers have, for the past four years, held a recital on the final Saturday of the week.

Pupils with the highest area standing in conservatory exams for the current year are then presented scholarships at the completion of the competition.

This year, the branch will again hold its recital at the Sir John A. Macdonald School on Saturday, Nov. 29 at 7.30 p.m.

More Investigation Needed

Cold River Pollution 'Not Critical' Yet

STOCKDALE (Staff) — A visual examination Thursday revealed that the problem of pollution and contamination in Cold Creek was "not too critical" at present, but warranted further investigation at the spring of 1970.

This was the evaluation of Robert Dunn, an engineer with the Eastern Ontario Branch of the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Residents near this small rural community 12 miles northwest of Trenton had complained this summer of waterborne illness and had caused area children to become sick after swimming in Cold Creek. Tests later revealed that the water was unsafe for swimming.

A specific complaint of area residents was the increasing amount of foam in the fast-flowing Creek.

Engineer Dunn cited two causes for the excessive foam: (1) an increase in the amount of detergents in the water. These detergents contain fatty acids which emulsify and produce foam, and (2) more algae (caused by an increase in nutrients in the water from wastes and run-off) which emit vascular algae upon decomposition and then the algae emulsify in the wind and water turbulence.

Dunn said that the Ontario Water Resources Commission, in conjunction with the Ontario Department of Health, would re-assess the situation in the spring.

Insufficient treatment of domestic waste and the effects of cattle in the creek (water pollution and increased erosion) were named by the engineer as the reasons for the high bacteria count in Cold Creek this summer.

The bacteria count is a test in the bio-chemical oxygen demand of the water and a high bacteria content indicates danger for wildlife.

Paul Heisler, a farmer and Trent Valley Conservation Authority member who lives just east of Stockdale, noted that the number of wild ducks and geese along the creek had decreased greatly since he situated on Cold Creek's shores in 1951 and also that the number of fish caught had also appeared to drop drastically.

Water Pollution Check

Paul Heissler, who farms on the shore of Cold Creek near Stockdale, points out foam and detergents in the water to Ontario Water Resources Commission engineer Robert Dunn. Engineer Dunn made a visual examination of the creek Thursday and indicated that further investigation will be carried out in the spring of 1970.

Delivery of Thurlow Fire Pumper Delayed

Delivery of Thurlow Township's second new fire pumper has been temporarily held up, but accommodation for the new equipment to be stationed at Corbyville is now ready.

Corby Distilleries have renovated a company-owned storage building for use as a second township firehall and will lease the building to the township.

When the new $25,000 fire pumper arrives, Thurlow will have a single fire department but two fire stations — one at Corbyville and the other at Point Anne.

At Point Anne a former grocery store has been purchased and is being renovated for use as a firehall. When alterations are completed, equipment now housed at the cement plant will be transferred to the renovated building.

The Point Anne equipment will serve the south and west section of the township, as well as providing fire protection for the cement plant.

The Corbyville station will serve the north and northwest parts of the township and at the same time afford protection for the distillery plant.

One of the township's new fire pumpers, delivered during the past summer is already stationed at Point Anne.

In addition to the new pumper still to be delivered the Corbyville firehall will house a 1,000-gallon tank truck.

Due to lack of water facilities, tank trucks are considered essential for provision of fire fighting service in rural areas.

Book Week Promotes Children's Library Habits

PICTON (Staff) — With today's opening of Young Canada's Book Week, many youngsters in Picton will be "turning over new leaves."

An annual event endorsed by the dept. of education and sponsored by 33 national organizations, Book Week emphasizes community effort to promote children's reading material.

The purpose of Young Canada Book Week is two fold — first, it encourages youth to read worthwhile books at home, at school and at the library and secondly, it is planned to increase adult awareness of the fine children's books available today.

Picton Public Library will celebrate Book Week with a poster contest. Each entrant will illustrate what Book Week means to him or her. The winner's prizes — good books, of course.

Picton librarian Miss Kathleen Keech said that a children's party will be held later this month to mark the close of "the week that was."

Celebrated from coast to coast, Young Canada's Book Week stresses the necessity for good library service for boys and girls wherever they may live.

While Young Canada Book Week is not being held in Prince Edward County's five regional library centres, children's reading material is there constantly receiving promotion. Mrs. Jack Breet, librarian in charge of the regional deposit centres, reported that Prince Edward County children are using the books made available with enthusiasm. Each of the five centres, Milford, Hillcrest, Northport, Consecon and Hillier contains children's reading and reference material.

Holstein Brings $4,200

The Eastern Breeders Holstein sale following the Ottawa Winter Fair saw an average price of $998 — the highest ever reached.

Most of the 45 lots consigned for the sale were of high quality and were mainly purchased by Ontario and Quebec breeders with a few going to the United States. The sale was held at the Winterdome arena.

The grand champion of the show "Garden Acres Duchess Mandi" topped the sale at $4,200. She was a Sundream Dijax Duke daughter consigned by Arthur and Ken Kilgour of Sharonville, Quebec. The buyer was Ken Baker of Elginburg, Ont.

The second highest selling animal at $3,200 was Bromelyview Rockman Sylvia, a two-year-old heifer consigned by Terry O'Gorman, Cobden, Ont., and purchased by Alex Geddes and Sons, Almonte, Ont.

Loyalist College Registrar Murray Election Candidate

William Ellis, Loyalist College registrar, will seek election to Murray Township Council.

Mr. Ellis, a member of the township ratepayers' association conservation committee, announced his election bid today.

Rapid expansion of the township area calls for a "more- business - like" approach to municipal affairs, he said.

Mr. Ellis promised to work for establishment of a committee form of administration, as practised by councils in surrounding communities.

Planning and development of the township must be on an organized basis — carried out in such a way that present home owners will be protected.

A graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, he served three years with the RCAF, he later attended the Ontario College of Education and taught agriculture and has been active with 4-H clubs and farm forum groups.

He moved to Murray Township five years ago and was vice-principal of Trenton High School, until his Loyalist appointment two years ago.

He served four years on Trenton Boy Scouts' Association executive.

A Fresh Look

Succesful as it may be, there comes a time in the life of every organization when its work and image need reappraising.

That time has come with Belleville's United Appeal campaign which has just completed another fund raising campaign, achieving a total of $122,000 of the larget of $130,000.

In the last year or two the campaign has enjoyed a measure of success, in sharp contrast to its dismal record in times past. But even as the picture has been improving so too have a variety of influences been militating against total success. Tight money is one . . . a degree of reluctance if not hostility, on the part of the public, another.

As Monsignor J. P. Sullivan noted at the recent dinner winding up the campaign, "it is time to say that the public is not wholeheartedly buying what we are selling — no matter how sincere the sales pitch."

The result is that the board of directors is planning to re-negotiate all agency contracts for the year 1971. Overall, according to Monsignor Sullivan, a new United Appeal "must find a new way of doing things." As an association of donors, he suggested the Appeal badly needed greater community participation in determining how money is disbursed.

As it is, a great deal of volunteer public effort goes into the campaign each year. As a campaign dedicated to the welfare of the community it deserves to succeed. At the same time this does seem to be the psychological moment for close examination of the entire operation of the campaign with a view to more adequately fulfilling its objectives as a community effort.

Problem Youth

David L. Booth, the 14-year-old Cincinnati youth who recently tried to hijack an airliner by holding an 18-year-old girl hostage at knifepoint, does not look the "incorrigible" youngster whose father has placed in the hands of juvenile court.

Young Booth is of pleasant and well-groomed appearance from pictures released of him. The boy was also said to be weeping when turned over to juvenile authorities and this does not seem to measure his father's description of him either.

Yet appearances can be deceptive and the elder Booth may have felt he had no alternative. If nothing else, pulling a knife and holding the girl hostage for more than an hour, not to mention the wild notion he could have the aircraft diverted overseas, is sufficient reason for ordering corrective training for the teenager.

While father has admitted to being unable to correct, improve or reform his son — that is the meaning of "incorrigible" — now others must try.

When all the facts are known there may be revealed a youth who, like countless others in the frenetic, materialist society of the United States, lack many of the basics that make for personal stability and a happy outlook on life.

Sport for Girls

Women's hockey in Belleville is showing a lot of promise as a recent sports page story on the successes of the Mel Barriage squad showed.

It is indicative that the girls can skate and guide that puck with the best of them. It sets one thinking too of the whole range of competitive sport and how the younger members of the fair sex are really missing a lot by non-participation.

To be sure there is a bit of gym, track and field, volleyball and basketball, but not really enough of it to make the blood tingle or the muscles ache in the manner that makes for top physical fitness.

We were reading the other day that seven Canadians, three of them women, were to compete in the United States international team table tennis championships in Detroit at the weekend. This is a game which played at the top level involves a very high degree of skill. It provides not only a thorough physical workout but also demands mental control, concentration and co-ordination — the kind of qualities moreover, that make studying all the more.

It is a game the girls can learn to play as well as the boys and it would make for good competition between the schools here, in the winter months. If it is going to mean anything however, from a fitness and competitive viewpoint, it should be played with some degree of seriousness, not just patting the ball back and forth. This takes practice — but there is no reason why the schools should not produce some good players and competition in this sphere.

Plaza ? What Will Be Will Be

Mr. Wills Urges Further Attempt at Downtown Renewal

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It is certainly not my special desire to address a letter to the Editor and embroil myself further in this continuing debate on the "plaza" and "urban renewal" issues. However I believe the future of our city is now at a critical stage and therefore every individual view should be expressed even though such views may be divergent from those of city council and some of our other citizens. It is certain we all want to take that course toward the future which promises to lead to the best development of our community and the maximum benefit of our citizens.

So far as the "plaza" issue is concerned I took a stand on this at the time of the first public hearing for reasons which I still think are justified. I later withdrew my objection mainly because federal assistance for such urban renewal had been temporarily withdrawn. However I very strongly believe we must still fave up to the problem of urban renewal particularly within the heart of our city. It is therefore with dismay that I learned of the city council's decision to discontinue the urban renewal study and completion of the physical plan.

This decision of city council to discontinue the study is both perplexing and unfortunate in view of the facts. We could not have had a better arrangement to obtain a good plan for the redevelopment of our downtown.

The planning consultants have a good reputation with wide experience in their field and were approved by all levels of government including our own city council. The study itself was approved by all levels of government including our own city council. The major portion of the cost of the study was to be borne by the two senior levels of government leaving only 25% of the cost to be borne by the city.

Why then did our city council decide to discontinue our urban renewal study? According to the minutes of council and the news media it was because they received a letter from the developer of the proposed plaza to the effect that if they did not discontinue the study, the developer would not make application again for rezoning because he felt the OMB would not look favorably on such an application if the urban renewal study was still in progress. This would be a ridiculous conclusion on the part of the developer and I certainly do not believe he is stupid enough to believe that the OMB would rule differently on such a situation when, by public record, he used methods of intimidation to accomplish his objective. Is it possible the developer thought that in order to get the city to arrange for another economic study by another firm that might be more favorable to him they city would first have to discontinue the current study? I certainly do not see why the city or the developer could not arrange another purely economic study at their own expense without discontinuing our present urban renewal study.

Why did the city council make a "snap" decision on such a serious matter without even attempting to dissuade the developer from pursuing such a course that would obviously do him no good. The result of all this? The developer gains no benefits and they find such action detrimental to his cause. The most serious effect has been to persuade the city council to discontinue the urban renewal study. A very strange situation!

It was spontaneously suggested to MR Johnston on the November 13th program "What Do You Think?" that the Downtown Merchants' decision to offer $5,000.00 to the city to complete the urban renewal study was a subtle way to stop the plaza development. What a fantastic conclusion! MR, to his credit, did not accept this. Why even the merchants cannot agree on the "plaza" issue. What they really want is the completion of this study which have never been done before and is long overdue. There is no hope for even private development of any significance taking place in our downtown unless there is a good overall physical plan for this area with some genuine assurance from our city that this plan will be guaranteed with reasonable limits to protect new property values. Such a plan would have to include traffic and pedestrian studies, parking, commercial development, new city administration areas, open spaces, green areas and general beautification. The "Magic Circle" concept was not a proper engineering study and was used only to create a vision of what we might have if we were to pursue our objective more seriously. All these things will take time but a beginning must be made. We cannot let our downtown "wither and die." Private redevelopment is a start like if they are assured of serious co-operation from city hall. A realistic and exciting plan could also interest local merchants and property owners to form their own development groups for larger downtown projects.

It is now up to our city council to ensure that the heart of our city will have a vital future place in our community. Many years ago another council lost an opportunity to buy up all the land along the river bank at a very low price. Everything, however, is different — this council now has another opportunity to redeem the action of the former. Our downtown should be focal point of our community and this is well illustrated in an article from Fortune magazine entitled "What It Takes to Make Great Cities." I quote as follows: "The characteristics are common to all great cities. There all have an exciting downtown filled with a great variety of shops, theatres, museums, and other attractions, and laid out as a place of beauty — designed, in the words of architect James Rouse, to be "the cathedral of the city." Equally important, they have a large middle class population residing near downtown possessing the purchasing power and the tastes to help sustain its activities."

Our new Dundas Street Bridge is now almost completed except for the approaches. The proposed Four Seasons Hotel/Bell School complex has been approved by the OMB and construction will soon begin. The new marina at this hotel will attract more yachtsmen than ever to the Belleville area. The hotel itself will attract more tourists and I understand they even plan to hold conventions here. The Bell School will draw people to Belleville from all over Canada. What better reasons can we now have to try and redevelop our downtown so that it will be a place we can be proud of and a delight to visit.

Let me sum up this lengthy letter. This is not a perfect one here, so far as I am concerned, except where the developer has attempted to "scuttle" our urban renewal study. So far as the plaza is concerned — "what will be, will be." As our community grows we will have to consider a sec d development. However we all have a "vested interest" in our downtown. This includes independent merchants, property owners, financial and business offices and many other service stores. Last, but certainly not least, it includes every citizen in Belleville through the assessment values of city hall. But there is more to life than taxes and profits obtained — downtown represents Belleville and ultimately should be an existing monument to our city.

It has been said "where there is no vision, the people perish." Let us take the first step — after all the moon is much closer now.

WILLIAM S. WILLS
A Belleville Citizen.

It's Slick Man !

Jargon of Task Force on Information Is Flip... Hip

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — You know what it has been like. these many puzzling years, trying to figure out what Our Glorious Leaders mean.

They would never dream of using one word when they could make a dozen do.

Like when Agriculture Minister Bud Olson speaks of "greater incremental reward in the national market place." It turns out he means a price increase.

Or when former Transport Minister Paul Hellyer spoke of an elevator, he seemed to call it anything so simple and immediately understood, preferring instead to talk about "a high-speed manual or automatic vertical transporter."

Some of Our Glorious Leaders' helpers, the mandarins, the task force commanders, the commissioners royal and assorted bureaucratic nabobs often went in the other extreme like capsulizing phrases into single explicable words.

Like when you come up with an idea you "conceptualize." Or when the Public Works Department lays off some part-time employees, the process goes under the heading of "deacualization."

But now all that has changed, or hopefully is changing.

The old gobbledegook is out The new flip is in.

Like now, baby, you tell it with a swinging beat.

You make it groovy, like you were reading notes off a coffee-house table.

The new hip style — borrowed from such magazines as Mad and from Advertising Agency Alley — loaded with mod terms and gimmicky phrases has been set by the newest, and by far the jazziest ever of federal government task forces.

It is the one on Government Information Services is what it is.

And right away, this task force, assigned by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau to tell him where it is at with his information services, advises it is at Nowhereville.

There is Pierre piddling away something between $45,000,000 and maybe as much as $150,-000,000 — the task force can not be sure how much — on the care and feeding of the information services staffed by 600 to 800, depending on how you count them, federal public relations officers.

And the stuff they churn out, all these press releases, departmental bulletins, informational flashes and other literary goodies, "just do not," the task force tells the PM, "as they used to say in advertising circles, grab her where she lives."

(Imagine talking to Mackenzie King or even Diefenbaker like that. They would need an interpreter. But the task force knew its man. Pierre digs it.)

The task force goes on to tell "The Man" that maybe he better house-clean political patronage out of the $25,000,000 federal advertising budget, "because that is a very considerable amount of bread."

Then, in a change of pace, comes a word of task force cheer for Pierre. To wit:

"So okay, the government information services are in a mess. So are a lot of other things. Anyway, it is better to have a whole bunch of innocent bunglers in government information that one super-efficient propaganda agency. And what is the rush anyway?"

Maybe because Hellyer's still providing the Canadian Treasury Canadians $1,500,000 of your tax dollars for their fun and foolish games. The task force counsels him that no matter what he does with the government information services, he is not going to get through to the "alienated, the disaffected," variously defined as pot - heads, hippies, rioters, bombers, vandals, looters, student radicals and the rest.

They still all be turned out, the task force warns the PM "because like well, man, they'll ask who needs all that jazz anyway?"

Lest he gets his hopes too high on what informational wonders may be worked by a bigger, better, brighter service, the task force reminds Pierre that "democratic governments are not razor blade factories or house boats." He should be better remember that people are just people and not everybody is a five-star general.

There is more, much much more in the task force report — best officials in Ottawa including Ottawa has enjoyed since, well, since Yvon One—and all in the same flip style.

Only once does the task force lose its hip beat, almost stumble into back into the ponderous plod of federal gobbledegook. That comes in its admission of its aim. "if you can imagine it," the PM is told, "it is a decentralized co-ordination of a major governmental activity."

Hey, better watch that old fashioned talk, men.

Some Catholics Now Worship On Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) — Weekend worship is switching from Sunday to Saturday for a growing proportion of American Roman Catholics.

In stepped-up succession, numerous dioceses have acted recently to broaden the period for celebrating the Lord's Day to include the period beginning in mid-afternoon Saturday.

It's "an extension of Sunday itself," says Rev. Patrick R. Cooney, director of the worship department of the archdiocese of Detroit, where the expanded observance has just started.

He notes that the custom of starting Sunday observances on the eve of the previous day goes back to early Christian times, a tradition perpetuated in Saturday vespers.

Ancient Jewish custom also marks a day's start on the previous evening.

So far, at least 19 of the 155 Roman Catholic dioceses and archdioceses in the United States have acted or intend the change, giving parishioners an option of fulfilling Lord's Day worship obligations either on Sunday or the latter part of Saturday.

And in some areas, such as Boston, the Saturday masses have become so popular that a number of parishes have been able to drop part of their round of Sunday services.

General permission for American dioceses to allow the longer Saturday-Sunday worship period, if they choose to do so, was granted by the Vatican last spring at the request of the U.S. Conference of Bishops.

In most cases, the new period for worship begins at 4 p.m. Saturday and continues through the next day.

Explaining the conditions and pastoral reasons that led to the widened observance, a statement from the liturgical commission of the U.S. Catholic Conference in Washington, D.C., says:

"We now consider Saturday evening in many ways as a part of Sunday just as we think of Sunday nights as sharing in Monday since we already begin then to prepare for the resumption of work the next morning."

In the past, the statement says, the rhythm of the church's life determined the rhythm of human life around it, but this is no longer the case, in an environment that includes unbelievers as well as believers.

In such circumstances, the Saturday-evening worship can be helpful to those entertaining Sunday "guests who are not believers and with whom they wish to spend the entire day," the statement says.

It notes the change also can help those who work Sundays, those wanting to start trips early Sunday, and "in mixed marriages the Catholic spouse could worship on Saturday and then spend all of Sunday with the other partner."

Generally, the change reflects contemporary social conditions, and also "preserves the sacred nature of the Lord's Day," while permitting Roman Catholics to celebrate it "more effectively."

Stirling Couple Celebrate 50th. Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Elliott of Stirling recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a dinner at the Maple Inn, Bloomfield. Fifty relatives attended.

Bronze 'mums, autumn fruit and a three-tiered anniversary cake with golden bells atop it graced the table. Mr. Reg. Elliott, only son of the honored couple, was master of ceremonies. After the singing of grace and the partaking of the sumptuous dinner, remarks were heard from Mr. Fred Elliott, brother of the groom, and Mr. George Sarles brother of the bride and Mrs. Henry Burrell, sister of the bride, who was the bridesmaid of 50 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott voiced their appreciation to their family for this lovely gesture.

Open house was held at their home in Stirling during the afternoon from 3-5 and in the evening from 7-9, when friends from far and near called to congratulate them.

Stephen Flood and David Wilson, grandsons, were in charge of the guest book in which 135 people signed their names.

The rooms were tastefully decorated with white and gold streamers, bells of gold and bronze 'mums, a gift from the the immediate neighbor.

Pouring coffee and tea during the afternoon and evening were sisters-in-law of the bridegroom — Mrs. S. J. Elliott, Mrs. Simon Elliott, Mrs. Fred Elliott and Mrs. Thomas Elliott, and sisters-in-law of the bride: Mrs. Nelson, George, Mac and Thomas Sarles and Mrs. Clarence McGee, sister of the bride. In the evening two of the married granddaughters also poured. They were Mrs. Bob Prudhomme of Belleville and Mrs. John McDonald of Kingston. Serving were granddaughter Sherri Lee and Sharon Elliott, Betty and Mary Lou Sine and Jane Wilson.

The table was covered with a lace table cloth centred with a three-tiered anniversary cake and there were candelabra with golden candles and silver tea services.

The marriage of Clifford Elliott and Gladys Sarles was solemnized in the Methodist Church, West Huntingdon, by Rev. G. R. McQuade on Sept. 3, 1915, with a reception following at the home of the brides parents Mr. and Mrs. E. Sarles. The anniversary had to be postponed to this later date due to the illness of Mrs. Elliott.

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE BOWDEN

Bowden — Beatty

King St. United Church, Trenton, was the scene of the recent marriage of Nancy Jane Beatty, daughter of Mrs. Deneida Milanovich, Glen Miller and Mr. Gordon Beatty, Picton, and Wayne Bowden, Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Bowden also of Trenton. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. W. E. McDowell and organist was Wayne Vance.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length coat and dress ensemble of white peau de soie. The dress had a square cut neckline and was sleeveless, an empire waist was accented by a small bow and the A-line skirt fell in tiered panels to the floor. The coat had an empire waist with three frog fastenings adorning the bodice, bracelet length sleeves and the coat billowed into a full train at the back. She wore a waist-length bouffant veil and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Brenda Conley wearing a dress of autumn gold in peau de soie with an A-line skirt, bracelet length sleeves, an empire waist and matching accessories. Her bouquet was bronze 'mums and trailing ivy.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Dawn Biddle, Mrs. Alice Lewis and Miss Sandra Bowden, the bridegroom's sister. They were ensembles identical to that of the matron of honor. Flower girl was Miss Anlica Milanovich, sister of the bride, wearing a dress identical to those of the other attendants. She carried a basket of bronze 'mums.

Best man was Wayne Lewis and ushers were Jerry Beatty, Gerald Colletis and Jim Reynolds.

For the reception held at Batawa Recreation Centre the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a cerise worsted silk dress and coat ensemble, stand up collar, front belt and self button, matching turban hat and black accessories. Her corsage was white pink tipped carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore a true blue worsted silk dress with a boat neckline and bodice and cuffs of imported guipure lace dyed to match. Her outfit was completed by a matching drape turban hat and a corsage of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to points east the bride wore a gold brocade coat and dress ensemble, black accessories and a corsage of bronze sweetheart roses.

The couple will reside at 16 Alfred St., Trenton.

19th Century Homes Had Own Looms

Most antique dealers stock spinning wheels but few stock looms. Many 19th century households had their own looms and not a few had a special room to house them.

In Ontario, Quebec, the Maritimes and adjoining parts of the United States home weaving reached a high standard of quality by the middle of the 19th century. Sometimes professional weavers came to homes and lived in while working.

Wool was, the original raw material used by the weaver, although flocs, cotton and wool mixtures were used as well. Many looms continued to be used to weave rag rugs well into this century.

The most desired type of weaving collected today is the "overshot" coverlet such as the one illustrated. The most used colors were indigo blue and madder red, both imported colors. Logwood and cochineal were also imported as dyes. Sumach, bedstraw, goldenrod, butternut, walnut, apple bark were used to produce dyes locally when imported colors were not available.

Professional weavers started before the mid-19th century but records of only a few remain. Two Canadian sisters, Rosanna and Hester Young, Samuel Pendlebury, Samuel Fry, and Werlich, a Kitchener weaver, left pattern books and records.

Their patterns are identifiable and many samples are preserved in the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto. K. B. Brett, Curator, Department of Textiles, has written a helpful book, "Ontario Handwoven Textiles" about weavers, coverlets and other textiles. Most library reference departments have a copy.

Although most of these coverlets were woven in the eastern part of Canada they are likely to appear anywhere in the prairies, brought in by settlers when the west opened up.

Moses Grobb, an early weaver imported a jacquard loom. Jacquard looms utilized a punch card which made possible complicated decorative patterns which could be repeated automatically. Readymade standard pattern cards could be bought, which accounts for the standardization of many patterns in Canada and the United States.

The earliest jacquard loom was recorded in Canada in 1834, about seven years after it appeared in the United States. "Four Roses" was a popular design in both countries. "Rose and Crow" was another international design.

Many coverlets with a Canadian owner's name woven in the corner appear to illustrate the White House together with an eagle. "Eagle and Star" is another American design that often appears in Canada.

Coverlets turn up regularly at farm auctions. They are often sold in job lots of bedding. Good ones bring $15 to $25. Antique dealers charge $40 or more. The price is going up.

THE FINE SENSE

"If you bow at all, bow low."—Chinese proverb.

*

Entering a Toronto Coffee Shop for morning coffee recently, two Belleville women found themselves seated at the coffee counter beside young, long-haired English youths, who proved to be the famous Rolling Stones.

This discovery came about, after the group's manager exclaimed in dismay to the Belleville women, "I can't eat that!" pointing to the two glassy, sunny side-up eggs set before him. Upon the sympathetic advice of one of the women, ("I can't eat them that way, either,") the nervous, attentive little waitress took the eggs away to be "turned over once, lightly," then returned shortly with the order, smiling, saying proudly, "These are a brand new order, turned over once lightly. The Chef didn't use the same eggs, sir."

Whereby the ice was broken and an appreciative flow of verbal exchange between the English and Canadians, ensued.

*

The Rolling Stones were interested in everything Canadian and impressed by Canada's vast distance. "One couldn't wish to meet anyone more courteous, until meeting . . .", the ladies said. On their return to Belleville, one found herself near drowning in a sea of awed, wide-eyed admiration as her grandchildren piled her with questions: "Didn't you get one autograph even?" "Did you touch them?"

"A young lad I know," said the other lady, "softly said when I told him of our chance encounter, 'Ma'am, you were privileged' . . ."

From this amusing account of the Rolling Stones rose the subject of courtesy, and the following are some (paraphrased) thoughts and ideas of various teenagers about it:

"To be liked and accepted by one's class-mates and fellowmen is a natural wish and desire. Even the dumbest kids know the currency is courtesy. But how do we come by it? We all come howling into this world. None of us is born equally with it. It is our conclusion that courtesy should be fully, seriously taught at school in every conceivable human situation.

"Why not at home? Fine. But how many are there. On a Belleville bus today crowded with students, one boy gave up his seat for a lady. Not one of us but was secretly envious of his know-how. You knew he had had training, good training, at home.

"The English understand. Gene Vincente, Rock 'n Roll singer, said the other day on TV that he planned to return to live in London where he'd been living for the past seven years. "I've learned to be a gentleman. For this I am grateful," he said.

"A city mayor recently gave special classes for civic employees to raise courtesy standards dealing with the public. We feel such classes ought not be necessary. Courtesy should be taught early in public school, so it becomes a part of you. It is every bit as important as French. You can't hate anyone you are polite with; you get to like him . . .".

Bernard Berenson in his "Sketch for a Self-Portrait" declares: "For love, affection, friendship are based on good behavior, as indeed are all human relations even the most impersonally official ones," and bears out the truth of J. Field's lines:

"How sweet and gracious, even in common speech Is that fine sense which men call Courtesy!"

Breadmaking Recipe Appreciated

By MARY MOORE

Letter: Our bread-making experiment seems to have been a success. Our thanks go to you for your help and the thoughtful inclusion of the yeast. As part of our activity we wrote letters of thanks to you and I'm sure you will know that this is the first time for many of these Grade 2 and 3 boys and girls. I did no corrections so I hope you can decipher the language. By the way the bread was really very good. The smell had everyone drooling. I did read the letters but thought you might enjoy their attempts at spelling and the like. — Wilda R.

"Dear Mrs. Moore: I thank you for the recipe and the yeast the bread taste good. On a filum about Bread we seen. She combleder cuting the Wheat . . . Randy R." . . . "Dear Mrs. M.: I helped the teacher buttered the pan it was fun. We baked it down in the staff room. The teacher gave a piece to the principal . . . Karen" . . . "Dear Mrs. M.: Some cids did a bread mural. Some cids bread is . . . Kelley Monty (Gr. 2)" . . . "Thank you Mrs. M. I wish you had a pies . . . Kimberley" . . . "Dear Mrs. M.: After the bread was baked we ate it . . . Dawn (gr. 2)" . . . "Dear Mrs. M.: We liked the bread. It taste good, we liked your recipe . . . Kelley (Gr. 2)" . . . "Dear Mrs. M.: I help to mak the murle . . . Gary" . . . "Dear Mrs. M.: When we went to school the bell rang and the teacher went to see the bread and it was reddy and asked for a piece but it was to hot and after we had a piece . . . H.S." . . . "Dear Mrs. M.: When the bread was cooked everyone in my group asked for a piece of it. Some boys and I were pailing the story of bread we don't know if we can put anything els on it. We ate it like mad. I don't know how you can stand doing recipes for the newspaper in toronto . . . Henry" . . . "Dear Mrs. M.: The teacher next door said if her door had been open she would of been over sooner . . . Marlee."

ANSWER: I adored them! I took the bound book of letters with bread illustrations on front to a party where there were two high school teachers — one a principal. He said "That girl deserves a medal." Wilda I echo that praise.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Becky: "I hate to do the dishes, but Mother thinks she can cook better, so she always does that. She thinks I would spoil the food and I end up cleaning the messy kitchen."

Joan: "My Mother always does all the fun jobs around the house, too."

A working mother needs help from her teen-agers, but it should not always be help with the least appealing chores. Give the youngsters a chance to learn all the aspects of homemaking in ways that will relieve you of work, but also will be more interesting for them.

Mother: "I think you might enjoy planning and preparing dinner some of the time. Why don't we trade chores every other week and I'll do the washing up when you cook?"

Becky: "I'll have a great idea for a menu. Maybe I can do some of the shopping, too."

On Being Introduced to A Dog

By DORIS CLARK

Move slowly. Speak softly. Touch gently . . .

If the dog comes to you or stands still and wags his tail, he will make friends with you in his own way. He will sniff at you. You mustn't mind that. He is a dog and that is the way dogs are.

You can show him you want to be friendly by holding out your hand — but don't stick out your fingers at him. This could frighten him. When someone suddenly sticks his fingers in your face you blink your eyes and get out of the way. Instead, hold out your hand with the back of it toward the dog and your fingers tucked under out of sight. Let him sniff it and lick it if he wants to. When he licks your hand he is kissing you!

If he is a very friendly young dog he may run right up to you and jump against you with his paws. Don't push away roughly. Wait until he knows you better before you try to teach him manners. The first thing is to show him that you are his friend. It is easier to learn from somebody you feel at home with, isn't it?

When the dog sniffs your hand and shows you he doesn't mind your touching him, then you can touch him gently. Do not pat him. Sometimes it is hard to tell the difference between a pat and a slap! Stroke him on his back in the way the hair grows. Stroke him gently. Gently! — from "Meeting Animal Friends" by Charlotte Baker Montgomery

Dear Doris: When a girl and fellow are going together and they are not officially engaged, is it proper to:

1. Send Christmas cards to the members of the family on both sides from both of us?

2. Give gifts, from both of us, to the children or maybe just the parents? — Wondering.

Dear Wondering: 1. No. Not even engaged couples.

2. Etiquette says you pool gifts only after marriage. But I can see giving jointly a toy or game to a child you enjoy together. This is an exception.

Dear Doris: What would you say that a 16-year-old girl should do in a home without me having to tell her to do it? She would just as soon sit and watch me do the whole house inside and out, yet she thinks nothing of helping her girl friends clean their house.

I asked her what she thinks would be fair for her to do, and she just answered, "I don't know" in a tone of voice that means she just doesn't care. She is really getting to me. I would hate to give a 16-year-old a good old-fashioned spanking, and besides, I don't think I have the strength. — Wit's End

Dear End: She says she doesn't know, so it is up to you to tell her. Any child over five should be able to make a bed and keep a room reasonably tidy.

I smell signs of teenage rebellion, which com plicates things. Yet she must learn responsibility or you are not doing right by her. Spankings are just out, now. Try what a written list of chores might do — and offer praise for whatever she accomplishes.

You can catch more flies with honey than with vinegar.

Doris knows Canadian resources and can guide you to the help you need. Write to her enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

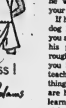
Girl Is Embarrassed By Cancelled Plans

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 13-year-old girl with a terrible problem. I have never read anything like it in your column and don't know what to do.



ANN LANDERS

Several months ago my Dad was told that he was being transferred. It meant we would be moving 2,000 miles from here. My girl friends got together and gave me a lovely bon voyage party. I received many beautiful gifts.

Dad was told yesterday that his transfer fell through. I am so embarrassed I don't know what to do. I hope you don't say "give the gifts back" because I have sheeted to use most of them already — like perfume, bath powder, skin lotion and a wallet. I need your advice right away. I can't show my face. — CANCELLED PLANS.

* * *

DEAR CAN: Telephone each of the girls and tell them there has been a change in the family's plan. Ask your Mom if you can have a party at your place and repay the girls who were so nice to you. I'll bet she'll say yes.

(P.S.) If you can see the funny side of this you've got it made, Tools.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A year ago my folks bought me a guitar. I still can't even play "Old MacDonald Had A Farm." A couple of guys who live near me learned from a book. They threw their books away three months ago and can play anything.

I feel like a case of arrested development. My guitar cost twice as much as the two of theirs put together and here I am looking at it and I can't play a single tune. I'm ashamed to ask them the name of the book they learned from. Would you happen to know? Please help me. — FLOWER CHILD OF MONTREAL.

DEAR CHILD: I don't know the name of the book, but I'll bet if you go to any music store in town someone will be happy to sell you one.

Hungerford Conservatives Name Officers, Delegates

TWEED — A joint meeting of the Hungerford Progressive Conservative Association, and the Tweed Progressive Conservative Association, was held in the IOOF Hall earlier this month, (November) at which time election of officers and delegates for the forthcoming nomination convention and annual meeting of the Hastings Riding P.C. Assn., December 3, was held, with Reeve William McCrea acting as chairman.

The following were elected officers of the Hungerford Association: president, Manley Meeks; vice-president, Fred Preston; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Gordon Fraser; lady president, Mrs. Lorne Gunning. For the Tweed Association: president, Kenneth R. Thompson; 1st. vice-president, Robert Coveney; 2nd. vice-president, Jack Woodhouse; secretary, Mrs. Cyril Latta; treasurer, Mrs. Daisy Rosevear; lady president, Mrs. Howard Countryman.

After the elections the meeting was addressed by Mr. Clarke T. Rollins, Provincial Member for Hastings who spoke briefly on provincial assessments, medicare, regional government, pollution, roads and the many aspects of provincial-municipal cooperation.

Mr. Kenneth Smith and Mr. Jack Ireland also briefly addressed the meeting. After adjournment, the women served a delicious luncheon.

Napanee Builds New Free Methodist Church

NAPANEE — The almost completed Free Methodist Church was put to its first use Tuesday evening when the senior choir held its practice in the basement, where considerable work is still to be done. The junior choir will practise there Thursday.

The date when the first service will be held is still uncertain. The carpet must be laid and the pews lined up and fastened down. All the furniture is here and is assembled. Dedication will take place in the spring after everything has been finished, basement included.

It is a beautiful little church both inside and outside. The design is modern, with the emphasis on light ness, both in the interior coloring and in the airy construction. The building measures only 65 feet by 36 feet, but the interior appears much larger. Seating capacity is 178, but aisles are wide, and there is sufficient space both at back and front for chairs for a capacity congregation.

The back entrance leads both to the basement, and to the auditorium, with a hallway behind the chancel leading to the minister's study. Walks leading to the front entrance have been completed, but the one leading to the back entrance must wait until spring as the fill must settle first.

The ground-breaking ceremony took place June 1, and work has gone along steadily ever since. There was some delay waiting for the Hydro to put in a line, but everything is in order now. Heating is by electricity. Volunteers have contributed many hours of their time, both cutting down the expense and speeding up the program.

A name has just been chosen for the new edifice. It will be known as Westdale Park Church.

AIDS YOUTH

HALIFAX (CP) — The Atlantic regional office of the manpower department has started a comprehensive services program to help overcome employment problems faced by youths in the area. J. P. LeBlanc, acting regional director, said the program would meet the needs of young people as they develop, rather than waiting to solve problems after they develop.

There are 285 authorized VW dealers across Canada.
Each dealer has enough parts on hand (or can get his hands on enough parts) to put together a brand new 1970 Volkswagen.

Or a brand new 1940 Volkswagen for that matter, since most VW parts are interchangeable from one year to the next.
And every one of our 285 Volkswagen dealers uses only specially trained VW mechanics, who in turn use only specially designed VW tools and equipment.
So you can get as good a job done in say, Vancouver, as you would in Halifax.

What's more, very soon every Volkswagen dealer in Canada will have the revolutionary VW Diagnosis and Maintenance System. It can spot small problems before they become big ones.
In fact, VW Diagnosis can electronically detect a possible breakdown even before it happens.

Mo-Hawks' Rexe Stops Barrie Cold

BARRIE (Special) — Steve Rexe could make Belleville Mo-Hawk coach Dewey Jones a pretty fair prophet before the OHA Senior A season is over.

"Rexe is a good enough goaltender to win four or five games for us this year all by himself," Jones said after the Mo-Hawks landed Rexe for their 1950-'51 campaign.

The carrot-topped puck-stopper didn't win Friday night's game in Barrie. All he could do was frustrate 42 scoring chances by the Flyers, including a penalty shot, and gain the Mo-Hawks a 6-0 shutout.

The single point left Belleville in undisputed possession of fifth spot in the eight-team senior grouping, two points ahead of Kingston. It made the Mo-Hawks were extending their unbeaten streak to four games, the Rexe's were taking their fourth straight loss on the chin, a 4-0 setback in Oshawa.

The highlight of Rexe's 42-stop performance came at the 12-minute mark of the second period. Veteran Barrie sharpshooter Pete Panagabko was awarded a penalty shot after the Mo-Hawks' Ray Summers was fingered for glueing the puck during a scramble in the Belleville crease.

Panagabko fired his free shot into Rexe's chest after unsuccessfully waiting for the Mo-Hawk goalie to commit himself. He picked up the rebound and flipped it into the goal but Panagabko had used up the only opportunity that counted — the first one.

"We must have had 30 shots," Jones commented, learning that the Mo-Hawks were only officially credited with 29 scoring chances on Barrie's Ken Payne.

"We had plenty of good chances. Al (Ferguson) was in alone in Payne in the first period. And Ralphie (Place) and I each had good chances."

But the infraction had occurred with only 30 seconds remaining in the game, and the mount a power play before the game ended.

Corby Adams provided Barrie with some of their closest calls and most frustrating experiences with Rexe. Last year's leading Senior A point-getter leaves the Flyers Wednesday for a three-week trial with the Canadian National Team.

Bill Armour missed his first game of the season, remaining in Peterborough on the sick list, Armour's spot on Greg Marchen's defence mate was taken over by "Weiner" Brown, playing only his fourth game for the Mo-Hawks.

The road point was a suitable christening for new Mo-Hawk uniforms. First opportunity for Belleville fans to see the new red and whites comes Sunday in a 2 p.m. Memorial Arena game with Woodstock.

In addition to stretching their unbeaten strings to five games, the Mo-Hawks have another reason for wanting to dish out a loss to the A's.

A 4-2 setback in Woodstock two Fridays ago made Belleville the only Senior A team to drop a game to the cellar-dwellers this season.

Juniors Splurge for Split with Hawks

By GREG McLEOD
Staff Sportswriter

A two-goal splurge within 18 seconds of the third period gave the Belleville Ellis Juniors a 3-2 tie with the Trenton Golden Hawks last night in an Eastern Ontario Junior B Hockey League game at the Memorial Arena.

Coach Floyd Crawford's strategy to move defenceman Dalt Lambert to right wing was a boost to the club's offensive unit.

"I moved Lambert up so he could take some of the hitting pressure off our regular forwards," said Crawford. "He did just that too."

"I said it once and I'll say it again," added Crawford. "We have to put three periods of hockey together — not just one." His charges are still winless in six starts, with two ties to their credit, and have still to beat Trenton in two years of regular season play.

The Belleville club who outshot Trenton 38-33, played one of the best games thus far in the schedule.

"The students from Nicholson Catholic College had a lot to do with our boys' efforts tonight," said Ellis Junior Manager Jim "Snipe" Matthews. "They deserve a vote of thanks for a very good turn out. If we could get this kind of attendance for all our home games, the fans would see a change in our fellows' efforts. Nobody likes to play in an empty arena."

Late in the second period with Trenton leading 3-1, a Trenton goal was disallowed because of one of their players being in Belleville goalie Paul Hopkins' crease.

"That disallowed goal was the turning point of the game," said Trenton coach, Red Gravelle. "But the Belleville club is a much improved club over the one I saw in exhibition action."

Belleville goal scorers were Dennis McCormack, Dalt Lambert and John Mulvihill, while Mike Hall accounted for all three of Trenton's goals.

Al Jarbeau and Danny Lapenotte played an effective two-way game, with John Mulvihill and Gene Burkitt providing the best protection for goalie Paul Hopkins.

Argos' Cahill Not About to Be Prophet on Playoff

TORONTO (CP) — When someone asks coach Leo Cahill how his Toronto Argos can stack up against Ottawa Rough Riders, he mutters things like "don't go and say we are not concerned."

Cahill won't try to predict the outcome of the Eastern Football Conference two-game total-point final between the Argos and Rough Riders here Sunday.

And there is a reason for his tight-lipped philosophy.

Last season, Toronto met Ottawa in the final and a number of Argos made disparaging remarks about the Rough Riders.

Coach Frank Clair of Ottawa clipped out each newspaper article, underlined the prophesies and hung them up in his dressing room.

The Argos won the first game of the series and then lost the second game and the berth in the Grey Cup final.

So, Cahill has adopted a hail-the-hero approach and mentions all the Rough Riders' merits, reserving special praise for Ottawa was quarterback Russ Jackson.

"When I'm asked about Jackson's strong points, I usually say his toughness, mentality and physically, is what makes him so effective."

"He gets the ball to the proper people at the proper time. If he's unable to do that, then he does it himself."

The Argonauts lost 200 yards when Jackson ran the ball in three regular-season victories by the Rough Riders over Toronto.

Now Cahill must defend against Ottawa receivers, rushers and Jackson's running. In the previous three games, Jackson simply ran the ball when his receivers were covered.

Cahill will probably be forced to sit out either corner linebacker Jimmy Dye or defensive end Vernon Vanzo. Both are instrumental in containing Jackson.

But he must designate one of them as his 14th import, which means he could not send that player into action unless he first takes out one of the other 13 imports for the remainder of the game.

Cahill solved the problem last week in defeating Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the EFC sudden-death semi-final by sitting out rookie halfback Dickie Moore and moving Dick Thornton out of the defensive backfield and into the offensive halfback position.

But this weekend, Thornton will be back playing his regular defensive halfback role and Moore will probably be used as one halfback along with Bill Symons.

Cahill, however, isn't tipping his hand in that direction either and he probably won't until he sends his team onto the field for the 2 p.m. EST kickoff.

The game will be televised nationally by the CBC network with all areas within a 75-mile radius of Toronto blacked out.

Jets On Spot

By MIKE BRYSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Kansas City Chiefs roll into New York Sunday and after it's all over, the Jets may feel they've been railroaded.

The Super Bowl champion Jets, riding a club-record six-game victory streak, are in the unusual position of being rated the underdog in the collision of the American Football League's divisional leaders.

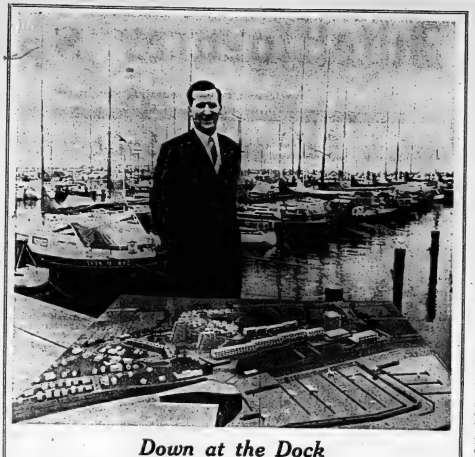
Although the Jets have been winning enough to build a comfortable 2½-game bulge in the Eastern Division, it's been by scanty margins of late.

By contrast, Kansas City, half game ahead of Oakland Raiders in the Western Division battle for top spot, also own a six-game winning streak—but the Chiefs also boast the AFL's best defense.

Joe Namath and Co. could be in for a long afternoon trying to solve a crew of stoppers that leads the league in yielding points (only 88 in nine games), rushing (68-yard average) and passing (125-yard average).

Should the Chiefs falter, Oakland will have a good chance to capitalize on it, playing host to San Diego Chargers who are tied with Denver Broncos for last place in the Western chase.

In other games, Boston takes on Cincinnati Bengals, Houston Oilers go to Denver and Miami is at Buffalo.



Down at the Dock

The mayor of Kiel, Gunter Bantzer, is confident. The Federal Republic of Germany, the State of Schleswig-Holstein, and his city are jointly financing the construction of the Olympic sailing centre for the 1972 summer games. Since the laying of the foundation stone in October, the project, a model of which Bantzer displays, has become a reality.

Gusty Playoff

Stamps Received Chilly Regina Welcome

REGINA (CP) — Winds of 15 to 20 miles an hour and temperatures around 25 degrees will greet Calgary Stampeders and Saskatchewan Roughriders today in the first game of the best-of-three Western Football Conference final.

Taylor Field is frozen, but Roughrider general manager Ken Preston said the ground was fairly dry when the cold weather set in and the field should afford reasonable footing.

The cold, windy weather could hamper the Stampeders who have been most effective this season with a passing attack.

Before the playoffs started, the Stampeder tight end Herm Harrison said the wind was more bothersome for him than the cold.

He said in the wind he would tend to stab at the ball rather than watch it all the way into his hands.

The wind would also appear to continually move the ball out of reach as he tried for the reception, Harrison said.

The Stampeders arrived in Regina Friday afternoon and did not practise before the game.

The game will be televised on the CTV national network from 3 p.m. EST. The second game is scheduled for Calgary Wednesday with a third, if necessary, in Regina Sunday, Nov. 23.

Saskatchewan won each of the three games between the two teams this season and Roughrider fullback George Reed said "we'll be ready" for the playoffs.

"I only hope that the ground isn't too hard by Saturday. It would be nice to get a spot of sunshine and soften up the turf before game time."

Reed won his fifth consecutive rushing title this season with 1,353 yards, best in the league, and was a driving force in the Saskatchewan attack.

The Saskatchewan offence was not only one of the best in the league, but also one of the most sure-handed with only 19 fumbles, eight less than Calgary.

Sooners Try Again to Conquer Hilltops

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Sooners take a second crack at the Canadian junior football title today and to a large extent success over Saskatoon Hilltops depends upon Ottawa's big defensive end Claude Pilon.

Pilon, at 6-4, 220 pounds, is "big, tough, fast and a definite pro prospect," according to Sooner defensive coach Dave Cummings.

The Sooners are hoping Pilon can get to Hilltops' quarterback Dave Pickett who guided the western team to a 27-19 victory over the Sooners in last year's Little Grey Cup in Edmonton.

Pilon will get help from the rest of the Sooners' front four—Pete Williams, Brian Greer and Mike Maloney—who average 230 pounds.

Saskatoon coach Dean Dickson is expecting trouble from the quartet:

"We've heard a lot about them out West. It's not only their size that frightens me but they're so tall. Our biggest man on the offensive line is only 215 pounds."

"They're the key so far as we're concerned. If we can move them, I think we can give them a heck of a game."

Ball-carrying duties will go to Hilltop halfback Gord Remmen, the Western League's leading rusher with more than 700 yards in eight games, and fullback Archie Thomas who had 500 yards for the season.

The Saskatoon team has statistics to show they also have a passing game with an over-1,000-yard total in the department for the schedule.

Sooner coach Don Holiby plans a solid mixture of running and passing against Hilltops, although he suggested quarterback John Goudie might do a lot more passing than usual.

A backfield squad of Merv Vineskie, John Keifl and Stan Daly give the club better running strength than it has ever had, says Holiby.

Both clubs may have to battle snow as well as each other.

A long-range forecast calls for snow flurries and temperatures around the mid-20s by the 1 p.m. EST kickoff at Ottawa's Landsdowne Park. The game is being televised nationally by the CBC.

Vikings Cock Kapp for Green Bay

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Minnesota Vikings are setting their Kapp for Green Bay.

Volatile quarterback Joe Kapp leads the Vikings into the Land of the Packers in one of the top National Football League games Sunday.

The Vikings, leaders in the Central Division, hold a two-game lead over the Packers and Detroit Lions.

Green Bay coach Phil Bengtson admits he has a tougher in the explosive Vikings and their league-leading quarterback and ground-rattling front four.

"You can roll out or bootleg to combat a vicious defensive rush," Bengtson says, "but you still have to block them."

When the teams met earlier this season, the Viking defenders spilled Bart Starr eight times and Minnesota won 19-7.

Elsewhere in the NFL Sunday, Los Angeles Rams play Philadelphia Eagles, Washington Redskins are host to Dallas Cowboys, Cleveland Browns are at Pittsburgh Steelers, San Francisco 49ers play at home to Baltimore Colts, St. Louis Cardinals visit Detroit Lions, New Orleans Saints are playing New York Giants in New York and Chicago Bears drop in on Atlanta Falcons.

Redmen at First Rung

HALIFAX (CP) — McGill University Redmen and the University of New Brunswick Red Bombers fight it out today for the right to play in the annual Canadian College Bowl, scheduled for Nov. 21 in Toronto.

The Montreal-based Redmen, rated the top college football team in Canada this season, won the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association title this year with six wins and one loss.

The Bombers, with five wins and one tie, won their first Bluenose Football Conference title since entering the league.

The winner will play the victor of a western game between Windsor Lancers and the University of Manitoba Bisons in Winnipeg Sunday.

McGill comes to Halifax with a strong defensive unit that could foul the Bombers, noted for strong passing attacks.

The Redmen allowed only 50 points in seven league games.

Coach Dan Underwood said Friday that McGill is expecting a passing game from his Red Bombers.

"We may switch to a running game," he said.

Underwood was confident that his team would play a well-rounded game today with a strong defence.

"They've got good spirit and conditioning."

McGill fullback Dave Fleisher, top ball carrier and most valuable player this year in the Ontario-Quebec loop, is expected to come on strong today. He was a leading scorer with 10 touchdowns—one less than the league record—and picked up 703 yards with 111 carries.

Bisons Unbeaten Entering Playoff

WINNIPEG (CP) University of Manitoba Bisons put their undefeated 1969 football season record on the line Sunday when they meet Windsor University Lancers in the western college playoff in Winnipeg.

But the Lancers, with a 5-1 won-lost record in their second season in the Central Canada division, are hungry for the win that will put them in the Canadian College Bowl in Toronto Nov. 22 against the winner of the eastern match between McGill and University of New Brunswick this weekend in Halifax.

If Windsor's defence can hold Bisons running backs Dennis Hrycaiko, voted most valuable player in the league last season, Micky Shyle and Graham Kinley and explosive quarterback Bob Kraemer, they may have the answer to cracking the Bisons streak.

Winless in 20 Tries

Blues Try Again To Find Ha's' Key

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. Louis Blues get another chance tonight to break the jinx that has held them winless in 20 regular season and playoff games against the National Hockey League champion Montreal Canadiens.

And with the Canadiens on the road for the last week, this should be one of the best chances the Blues have had to add a victory to their record of four ties and 16 losses with Montreal.

St. Louis has won the West Division championship in both seasons since the 1967 expansion and leads the division again this year. But the Blues are the only team in the league who have never defeated the Canadiens at least once.

Montreal, with a one-point lead in the East Division, moves on to Chicago Sunday night where they could run up against Bobby Hull in his season debut.

The all-star left winger Friday rubbed elbows with his Union mates for the first time this season in a team practice and then worked out by himself, practising his blistering slap shot that helped earn him a record 58 goals last season.

Hull's contract dispute with the Black Hawks was resolved Thursday but he was not expected to play tonight when the fifth-place club seeks to extend its four-game winning streak against the visiting Oakland Seals.

His season debut was formally set for Wednesday against New York Rangers, but he could see action against the Canadiens who will have left-winger Dick Duff back in the lineup.

The 33-year-old Duff quit the Canadiens for personal reasons at the beginning of the season but gave up his retirement plans two weeks ago.

He has been skating in practices with the American Hockey League Montreal Voyageurs and was scheduled to rejoin the Canadiens in St. Louis.

Wren Blair, Minnesota North Stars general manager, will still be directing his club as coach tonight when they play host to Detroit Red Wings. Blair announced Friday that Bernie Geoffrion, assistant general manager and coach since 1966 with New York Rangers, has turned down a contract to coach-the North Stars.

Blair said Geoffrion told him he didn't have the desire to coach hockey again and that Geoffrion started last season as coach of the Rangers but had to give up the job when he was sidelined by stomach ulcers.

Blair said he would still like to get out of the coaching job "if the right man comes along."

Philadelphia Flyers, who meet the Maple Leafs in Toronto tonight, Friday recalled Serge Bernier and Rosaire Paiement from their Quebec AHL farm club. The two will go against the Leafs in place of Larry Hillman, Jim Johnson and Garry Peters.

The Leafs, mired in the East Division cellar, will be trying to break out of a four-game losing slump.

Boston Bruins, who play host to the Rangers tonight, Friday received Fred O'Donnell from the North Stars.

O'Donnell, 20, is currently attending university in Kingston, Ont. He scored 31 goals and 27 assists last season with Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Blair said in Minneapolis Friday that O'Donnell, North Stars' fourth-round draft-choice this summer, went to Boston to complete a trade for Tommy Williams.

In one other game tonight, Los Angeles Kings, occupants of last place in the West Division, start a 17-day road trip at Pittsburgh. The Kings move on to Boston Sunday while St. Louis is at New York and Montreal at Chicago.

Aces' Lose Trick

MINNEAPOLIS (CP) — Fred O'Donnell, now attending Queen's University in Kingston, has been dealt to Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League by Minnesota North Stars. Wren Blair, Minnesota coach and general manager, said Friday.

Blair said the move was part of an earlier Bruins-North Stars trade involving four players. In the deal, centre Tommy Williams of the Bruins went to Minnesota for an unnamed player—now announced as O'Donnell—and the North Stars got defenceman Barry Gibbs from Boston in exchange for a Minnesota draft choice, whose name was not disclosed.

O'Donnell, 20, played for Oshawa Generals in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series last season, scoring 31 goals and 27 assists. He was Minnesota's fourth-round choice in the 1969 amateur draft.

QUEBEC (CP) — Beverly Boys, 18-year-old Canadian Olympic diver from Oshawa, Friday took first place in the women's one-metre event at the Canadian open winter diving championships. Ken Sully, 18, of Vancouver took the men's one-metre event. Both are members of the Canadian Olympic diving team.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Frank Lefty O'Doul, twice the National League batting champion, will undergo open surgery today in a hospital here. O'Doul, 72, suffered a slight stroke that impaired the use of his left arm and entered hospital Wednesday. Doctors said surgery was necessary to remove blockage in the main artery leading from the heart. O'Doul's lifetime battering average was .349. He won his first batting title in 1929 with the Philadelphia Phillies when he hit .398 and another with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1932, when he hit .368.

Jack Marin and Earl Monroe sparked a second-half comeback and the Baltimore Bullets cashed in at the free throw line in the closing minutes to edge Boston Celtics 109-108 Friday night in a National Basketball Association game. Marin and Monroe accounted for 19 of Baltimore's 27 points in the fourth period as the Bullets outdueled the stubborn Celtics and hung on for the victory. The Bullets, who trailed by as much as 16 points before closing the deficit to 54-49 at halftime, pulled ahead in the third period before the Celtics came back. Marin scored 12 of his 25 points in the 35-point quarter, in other games Friday night, Milwaukee Bucks downed Chicago Bulls 122-109, Los Angeles Lakers, led by Elgin Baylor with 31 points, defeated Phoenix Suns 127-112, Atlanta Hawks beat San Francisco Warriors 126-109 and San Diego Rockets whipped Seattle Supersonics 148-112.

Ahearne Up to Old Tricks; Hints Tourney Uncertain

MONTREAL (CP)—At 69, John F. (Bunny) Ahearne has more zest for battle than some of the hockey players 50 years his junior he controls as president of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

He was up to his old tricks here Friday night, when he threw what had been billed as a routine news conference into a tizzy with dire and thinly veiled threats that Canada's position as host for the 1970 world hockey championship may not be as secure as Canadian officials had supposed.

Ahearne is here with several members of his IIHF directorate for a meeting that was reportedly called to ratify, among other mundane matters, the final playing schedule for the championship.

The 1970 tournament opens here March 12 and runs through to March 20, then the teams move to Winnipeg for the second half of the event March 22-29.

"We're here to try and get the 1970 world championships off the ground," Ahearne said. "This is a very, very important meeting and I hope it will not be too important.

"There will be problems to face and with goodwill and understanding it will succeed."

His remarks caught Earl Dawson, of Rivers, Man., president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, and other Canadian delegates completely off base.

At first the IIHF president refused to elaborate, but later he directed his questioners to a statement made last Tuesday in London by Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee.

Brundage said the whole future of the Winter Olympics will be discussed at a meeting of the IOC in Amsterdam in May.

"We're trying to keep communication out of the Winter Olympics," Brundage said. "Now we have the problem of the ice hockey federation allowing pros to compete. This is a new problem."

Canada gained permission from the IIHF to use nine professionals, who have not played in the National Hockey League this season, on its national team for the 1970 tournament.

Now Ahearne apparently is worried that countries like Sweden may withdraw from the tournament—in the aftermath of Brundage's remarks—because players who play against Canadian pros could be declared ineligible for the next Olympic Games.

However, Ahearne said, he had come here to help not to hinder Canada's cause.

"Brundage said that is his personal opinion."

Canadian officials hastened to point to the fact that the IOC meeting is not until May, while the tournament will be completed in March.

But apparently Ahearne feels that if there is enough fear of reprisal from the IOC by some countries, they may balk at coming here in 1970 and Canada could possibly wind up without a tournament.

If things can't be ironed out today, it is likely a full-scale meeting of the IIHF congress would have to be called by the president.

Canada has indicated it will approach the IIHF in Winnipeg again in March with a proposal for an open world hockey tournament.

Geoffrion Rejects Offer To Coach Stars

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion Friday rejected an offer to coach Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League.

Wren Blair, Minnesota general manager and coach, said Geoffrion told him he "doesn't have the desire to coach hockey again anywhere."

Geoffrion was offered a contract to coach the West Division North Stars earlier this week, but returned to his New York home to consider it. Geoffrion, former great with Montreal Canadiens and New York Rangers, decided to continue as New York's assistant general manager and chief scout, Blair said.

Blair said he will continue to serve in the dual capacity as Minnesota coach and general manager, but would leave coaching "if the right man comes along."

Punch Imlach, former Toronto general manager and coach, had been offered the coaching spot before the season started but turned it down.

Rangers Win 4th Straight

Changing Managers in Mid-Streak

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener Rangers, riding a four-game winning streak in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, today have a new general manager.

The club announced Friday Walter (Punch) Sherer has been appointed manager to replace Brent Madill who resigned earlier in the week. The team picked up its fourth straight victory Friday night with a 5-2 decision over Hamilton Red Wings.

Other on-ice action Friday ended in 5-4 victories for Niagara Falls Flyers over Oshawa Generals, Ottawa 67s over London Knights and Toronto Marlboros over St. Catharines Black Hawks.

Sherer, a scout for Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League during the last two seasons, said Friday:

"I'm no longer associated with the Bruins as of today. But we still have a good relationship. You can never have too many friends in the hockey business. You never know when you might need some help."

The Rangers, who now have a record of eight wins and six defeats, struck for two first period goals Friday night before 5,078 home fans.

Bill Barber led the Ranger attack with two goals and an assist while Gary Crosby, Gerry O'Flaherty and Jim Nahrang added single goals.

Buster Harvey and Ron Le-Blanc replied for the Red Wings, who dropped their 11th loss of the season.

Referee Gaston Bordeleau handed out 10 minor penalties, 11 majors and nine misconducts for a total of 206 minutes in the contest at Ottawa. The 67s took 110 minutes of the penalties.

Darryl Sittler scored three of the four London goals and Gerry Bradbury added one.

Bill Clement, Blake Dunlop, Doug Keeler, Barry Graham and Peter Laframbroise came back for the winners before 3,970 home fans.

Niagara Falls goalie Dave Tataryn allowed Oshawa 4o gain a 4-2 lead in the first period before 2,200 Flyer fans. Rookie Phil Robinson then took over to start the second period and held the Generals scoreless the rest of the way while the Flyers made their comeback.

Larry Thompson scored twice to lead the Flyers with Mike Healey, Paul Kett and Mike Keeler getting single goals.

The Marlboros battled their way past the Black Hawks to regain first place.

A home crowd of 3,946 saw Dave Tallon, Graham Wise, Chip Barrett, Tom Johnston and Gord Davies score for the Marlies who won their ninth game in 15 starts.

Brian Thorne, Pierre Guite and captain Al McDonough survived the stiff Toronto bodychecks to score for the Black Hawks. McDonough collected two goals in the third period.

George Ferguson, Jarry Methe, Tom Simpson and Garry Mahon scored for the Generals.

Canada's Elder Top Equestrian at Royal

TORONTO (CP) — The United States equestrian team, facing the toughest Canadian team since the opening of the fall circuit, held a slight lead today after the first of 13 international jumping competitions at the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair.

The Americans, after winning the three previous over-all championships at Harrisburg, New York and Washington, collected 18 points to Canada's 16 during the first international competition Friday night.

Jim Elder of Aurora, Ont., on the Immigrant, won the individual championship, however, jumping the 13 obstacles in 53.9 seconds without a fault.

The Canadians, who finished second to the U.S. in all three previous events, did not send their top horses to the New York show last week.

Six riders tied for second place among the 16 riders—four each from Canada, the U.S., Argentina and Mexico. They were Tom Gayford of Gormley, Ont., the Canadiana, Kathy Kusner on Wicked City, Jarad Brinsmade on Act One, Neil Shapiro on Blue Pish, all of the U.S. and Raul Salina, of Mexico on Mexicano and Juan Carlos Heraldo of Argentina on El Garso.

Each of those six riders failed on one jump that cost them four faults.

Jim Day of Oakville, Ont., missed two jumps for eight faults and Mofat Dunlop of Newmarket, Ont., on Grand Nouvel, knocked down three obstacles for 12 faults.

A rider is assessed four faults for each obstacle knocked down, three if the horses refuses to jump, six on the second refusal and is disqualified for a third refusal.

Maritimes Protest Bid to End Rail Routes

OTTAWA (CP) — Atlantic region MPs were prominent Friday as the Commons continued second reading debate on a routine government bill to provide the CNR with $301,700,000 in capital financing for the period Jan. 1, 1969, to June 1, 1970.

Much of the money has already been committed by the CNR but both Atlantic region and western MPs have been able to use the legislation as an occasion to rake the CNR and CPR policy with their criticism.

The debate began Thursday, just a week after the Canadian transportation commission announced it has received applications from both rail companies to abandon 31 passenger trains — in the case of CP Rail, almost its entire passenger system.

The applications for abandonment are a stage in the procedure set out in the 1967 transportation act and qualify the railways for government subsidies of up to 80 per cent on losses suffered on lines maintained in the public interest.

The announcement has led many speakers in the debate to accuse the railways of being callous, cavalier and of having "reneged on their moral commitment" to the communities they have served over the years.

Thomas M. Bell (PC—Saint John — Lancaster) demanded public hearings on the applications for abandonment and a full-scale investigation by the Commons transportation committee.

Much has also been made of the arrangement of 1881 in which the federal government gave the CPR $22,000,000 and 11,000,000 acres of land to build a line to the West.

Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin) said the proposal to pull out of the passenger business now is "farcical and insulting."

CP Rail, he said, has made handsome profits over the years but now is seeking "to get out of the obligations" that were the reason for the concessions in the first place.

He suggested that in retaliation, Manitoba and the city of Winnipeg may withdraw perpetual exemptions from property taxation given to the company in the past.

Mr. Ritchie added that if the CNR should drop its Winnipeg-Churchill route and subsidiary lines it would "isolate central and northern Manitoba from the mainstream of Canadian life."

For Creditiste Leader Real Caouette, passenger service in northern Quebec now is an expensive disgrace. If the services are cancelled, he wondered, how did the government suggest lumberjacks get out of the north woods.

Atlantic region members were also able to revive their anger over the unfreezing last spring of freight rates for their area. James A. McGrath (PC—St. John's East) accused the government of lifting the freeze before coming up with "the much-heralded and long-awaited comprehensive policy on transportation in the Atlantic region."

An 11-per-cent rise in railway freight rates, he said, has had a disastrous effect on the Atlantic region economy.

Mr. Bell said the Opposition would support Transport Minister Don Jamieson (Burin-Burgeo), if he can work out a suitable alternative to the freeze.

But Robert Coates (PC—Cumberland-Colchester North) who spoke later in the day, suggested Mr. Jamieson is getting little support from the rest of the cabinet in attempting to develop an effective transportation policy.

Bid to Block Mafia

Quebec Probe Suggests Legalized Gambling

QUEBEC (CP) — Mafia infiltration of society could be partly halted by legalizing prostitution and gambling, says a provincial royal commission on the administration of justice in Quebec.

"When a law no longer meets the wishes of society—doesn't jibe with reality—that law becomes an obstacle," Yves Prevost, commission chairman and judge of the Quebec City west bare court, told a news conference Friday.

The three-man commission released its fourth report—623 pages—about organized crime in Quebec. A second confidential report "not in the public interest to be released" also was handed to the government.

The public report says laws against prostitutes, except those which prohibit soliciting in public places, should be dropped. However, pimps and procurers still should be subject to harsh penalties.

Quebec should also set up its own lottery, the report says, "because Canadian legislation in this area gives underworld interests a quiet and complete monopoly."

Justice Minister Remi Paul said later in the national assembly the provincial government already has a rough draft of gambling legislation but it probably would not be introduced at the current session.

He said a special committee of judges and justice department experts would study other recommendations of the report.

The commission, established in 1966, reports that the Mafia thrives in Quebec, as in the United States, because it "sells goods and services to the public which are banned by law but which the public desires."

To dry up this kind of revenue, it recommends legalization of drugs as well as changes in gambling and prostitution laws. It supports stiff penalties against pushers but says drugs are a problem which seem "in a large measure to be a conflict of generations."

The report also supports:

—A way to offer low-interest credit to get rid of loan sharks.

The commission says the Mafia is increasingly investing money from illegal operations in legitimate enterprises such as food products, real estate, restaurants, garbage disposal, garment manufacturing, bars and taverns, transportation, securities and vending machines.

"Organized crime has become such an important source of capital that it will weigh more heavily than any other speculator when the opportunity arises to wreck a currency. . . ."

The report says the Mafia uses its legal vending machine operations to mix coins from gambling operations with vending revenues as well as to dispose of stolen cigarettes.

It can use loan companies as a front to refuse loans to persons who then have to get money from loan sharks. It can take over companies to defraud creditors and use company lawyers, accountants and financial advisers.

Major illegal sources of revenue are gambling and loan-sharking operations, the report says.

It estimates 200 persons are fully involved in other organized criminal activities including arson, bank robberies, fraudulent bankruptcies, blackmail, extortion, alcohol smuggling, prostitution and labor rackets.

Montreal's recent rash of gangland slayings, says the commission, is the result of a fight for control of the city's crime network between the New York Cosa Nostra, headed by Joseph Bonanno before he was jailed, and the Buffalo "family" of the Magaddino brothers.

The report names several persons in Canada it says are connected with the Cosa Nostra:

—Lucien-Rivard, now in U.S. jail for large-scale drug trafficking, who was the central figure in allegations that federal officials sought by bribes and coercion to free him on bail in 1965.

—Montrealers Louis, Greco, Vincent and Giuseppe Cotroni, connected with known Mafia figures and operations.

—Paul Volpe of Toronto, a partner in a Mafia-owned gambling casino in Haiti.

—The Violi family of Toronto connected with the Magaddino brothers in Buffalo.

It criticizes police for a mania of secrecy and contempt for public opinion.

Rain Party to Blame For Rash of Crashes

A spokesman for the Picton OPP said today that yesterday's intermittent rains may have been partially responsible for a rash of automobile mishaps in the Prince Edward County.

David Blakely, 23, RR 4, Picton, was admitted to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital for treatment after his car struck a hydro pole at Kinney's Crossroad's near Glenora.

Damage was estimated at $600.

A Belleville man was treated during the afternoon after his half-ton truck struck a culvert.

He was John Watson, 26, of 105 Orchard Drive.

Three cows belonging to James Dick, RR 2 Bloomfield, were killed when struck by a car while being herded across of Scobarie Road.

Driver of the vehicle was Carman Brown, 20, of London, Ont.

Damage to the car was $300. The cows were valued at $500.

ORGANIST TO GIVE RECITAL

The Royal Canadian College of Organists is planning a music week commencing Nov. 23, during which local church musicians will be encouraged to perform special musical programs and to use works by Canadian composers.

On the Monday, (Nov. 17), previous to music week, the noted Australian born organist, Barrie Cabena, now living in Canada, will present a recital sponsored by the Bay of Quinte Centre of the R.C.C.O. in co-operation with the choir and officials of St. Andrew's Church.

BARRIE CABENA

Mr. Cabena has appeared as a recitalist in many cities in Canada, United States and England, and while in Belleville will be performing on the new Casavant organ which was installed and dedicated in St. Andrew's Church last December.

The artist not only plays the works of the old masters, but also includes many modern works by contemporary composers.

Many of the area music teachers are also members of the R.C.C.O., thus there is a common interest in the promotion of Canadian musicians and music.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For November 16

Your birthday today: There will be plenty of competition, both new and old, all through the year. In the long run it is good for your welfare, but for the moment it is a challenger. You should seek a philosophic view of the whole situation rather than take it as a series of petty conflicts. Vocational activity tends to limit your chances for casual fun. Today's natives enjoy variety.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You have an advantage in that you probably know what you want to do while many others are not sure. The evening is the most confusing time of the day — stay with your earlier decisions.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Be serene and take pleasure in the orderly community group life this Sunday morning. There will be changes of plans, with better results; go along, without delay.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): There are so many interesting but subtle possibilities available that you may have difficulty deciding where to begin. It is best to join the people who start first.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): The pursuit of new skills, better knowledge should take up at least a part of this day of personal opportunity. The temptation toward nerve pleasure-seeking could cost you the chance to make an interesting new contact.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): If you can accept a bit of contradiction in this Sunday's complex program, you can enjoy life more fluently. The evening is great for your special sort of entertainment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Do what is expected of you in your regular Sunday customs. When you've answered letters and cleared off the loose ends of home chores, get out and go for as long a journey as the time permits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Promises are too easy to make or accept this Sunday — the situation fluid and moving rather than fixed and specific. Travels and visits are rather important to you and the people you care about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): You have more emotional stress deep within you than you have found ways to express. Today may offer some symbolic channel and a satisfactory release from old tensions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Journeys are more interesting this Sunday because of changes in the routes and conditions. Expect momentary delays — there is no great urgency, so enjoy the diversions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): The day's activities may seem impractical to you, but social aspects of the situation can be amusing if you will just relax and appreciate them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Take some simple line of action and follow it closely rather than letting other people distract and annoy you. You can find a great deal of satisfaction in such a quiet mood.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): As long as you remember that wishful thinking may color your understanding of the situation, you can really enjoy this complex day.

For November 17

Your birthday today: Your year ahead is basically conservative. You turn to old friends rather than recent contacts. If all is to work out well, you must simplify your situation. Drop outdated personal habits now. Useless property should be disposed of before it becomes a serious hindrance. Today's natives are prone to unusual schemes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Confidential personal matters demand attention. Neglected work comes next. Put in a long day to line up those things you can best manage.

TAURUS (Apr. 20—May 20): An early start is essential if anything lasting is to be achieved today. Afternoon and evening are for routine and completion of the morning's activities, not fresh decisions.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Clear pending chores quickly, then take a holiday if possible. If you must work, treat it as a serious sport. Change the evening mood with light entertainment.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Your creative energy supply seems a bit thin, so drift through the day with as little urgency as you can manage. Your tolerance concerning discrepancies gains you much goodwill.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Make a general survey of your situation to clarify your personal world and what you might do about it — at a later date. Reflection on your observations makes the evening interesting.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Join forces to keep things going smoothly; avoid detailed comments about shortcomings. Everybody shows some less-than-perfect side today. Patience with yourself helps.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Use the relatively unpressured atmosphere for all its working worth; do the little things that frequently get skimped. Avoid setting people on collision courses — it's so easy to do with just a word or two.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Discount much of what you hear, particularly afternoon and evening. Discretion is important to what comes later this week. Aside from this, it's a fortunate day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Have extra chores on hand, so you lose no time if previous plans fall. Keep your sense of humor and everybody will profit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Any weakness in your plans surface today, but nothing can be done about it immediately. Experience now is valuable for future reference; be observant, ready to learn.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Survey your assets, material as well as intangibles. Consider what you really need and how to maintain it. Convert unwieldy or unusable items into cash or something more useful.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Personal contacts, communications are favored. Avoid indiscretion in correspondence or long-distance telephone conversations. Romantic interest increases now.

CYC Pays Part Rent For Roy

OTTAWA (CP) — The legality of a rental agreement between the Company of Young Canadians and Jean Roy, vice-chairman of its council, was called into question Friday during a Commons inquiry.

CYC Executive Director Claude Vidal told the inquiry that the company pays a share of Mr. Roy's rental in a Montreal rooming house because a CYC printing press is in his room and meetings are held there.

Mr. Roy as a volunteer is head of a three-man communications workshop project which uses the press.

Mr. Vidal said the former CYC provisional council recommended last June that the Roy project be frozen, meaning it would disappear in October.

However, Mr. Roy was elected to the new permanent council during the summer.

Meanwhile, a Quebec CYC group asked the council not to kill the project.

Mr. Vidal said he didn't realize this and was preparing to end the project when the new council reversed the earlier decision.

The executive director also said he was unable to say what was being printed on the Montreal press.

There have been allegations in Montreal that the CYC has printed and handed around recipes for Molotov cocktails, a homemade bomb.

Claude-Armand Sheppard, counsel for the inquiry, suggested a look be taken into the legality of contracts between the CYC and a council member.

Nickel Strike Ends; Margin .8 Per Cent

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — A 128-day walkout by 16,000 steelworkers which resulted in a world-wide shortage of nickel ended Friday night with narrow acceptance of a new contract with International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.

The men began returning to work at midnight after voting 9,031 to 4,865—a majority of only 50.8 per cent—to accept a contract raising average wages to $3.39 an hour from $3.06 an hour over three years.

Homer Seguin, president of Local 6500, United Steelworkers of America, called the 166-vote majority "a rather close vote" but said he is confident the men will abide by the results.

Still off work are the 1,700 members of Local 6200 at Inco's refinery in Port Colborne, Ont. Picketing continues at the refinery.

Jim Babirad, president of Local 6200, said his local's position would be reviewed today and a vote among the members may be taken.

Mr. Babirad and other officials of his local arrived here Thursday to try to persuade the Sudbury workers to hold out for more money. They were backed in their opposition to ratification by six members of the seven-man Sudbury negotiating team.

Mr. Babirad and his supporters handed out leaflets during the voting Friday, urging rejection and claiming the contract would deny the men job protection and cost them several hundred dollars in wages in the years to come.

Ratification by the big Sudbury local is expected to lead to a quick settlement on similar terms of a 78-day strike by 3,200 members of the independent Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union against Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. operations here.

A strike by 13,500 steelmen against Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. in Hamilton was settled Oct. 20. Another 4,700 striking steelworkers ratified a contract Nov. 4 with Algoma Steel Co. Ltd. in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

The Sudbury contract provides increases of 42.9 cents an hour in the first year, 24.3 cents in the second and 20 cents in the third, plus a five-cent-cost-of-living bonus.

When fringe benefits are taken into account, the total worth of the contract to the steelmen is $1.25 an hour. Straight time earnings on the lowest rate will be $7,345.36 a year on Aug. 23, 1971.

The impact of company-paid health and welfare plans, incentive bonuses and increased premiums for overtime, shift work, holiday pay and pensions brings the total cost to the company to $1.45 an hour.

The settlement will add $100,000,000 to Inco's labor costs over the next 32 months when settlement terms eventually are applied to the Port Colborne workers.

Inco said the contract represents a 35-per cent increase in costs and a 30.3-per cent increase in wages.

Inco has had an estimated 150,000,000 pounds in nickel production and 140,000,000 pounds in copper production. Closure of the world's largest nickel supplier caused a world-wide shortage of the metal and boosted prices sharply on international markets.

Cliff Gilchrist, national steel workers' representative, said the walkout has cost the international union a total of $7,000,000 in weekly benefits and continued medical and insurance coverage.

RCMP Tip Helped Break Bomb Case

NEW YORK (CP) — The Times says that a "routine request" from the RCMP helped the Federal Bureau of Investigation break up an alleged bomb conspiracy here.

Quoting sources close to the FBI investigation into the conspiracy, the paper says that information provided by the RCMP led to the arrest of Samuel Joseph Melville in connection with the bombings of eight major corporate and government buildings here since July.

Melville, two other men and a young woman have been charged with taking part in the conspiracy.

The Times says the RCMP asked the FBI just over a month ago to put Melville under surveillance. It says the request was made in connection with several political bombings in Canada.

Longshoremen to Elect New Negotiating Team

VANCOUVER (CP) — Only two of the officers who helped work out unsuccessful settlement agreements for British Columbia's 3,200 longshoremen will stand next week in a special leadership election.

The two were nominated to a convention Friday at which union members approved a slate of new officers in an attempt to settle internal differences.

Andy Kotowich, Canadian area president who earlier offered his resignation then reconsidered, was rejected in a run-off vote against successful candidates Leo Labinsky of the New Westminster local and Bob Peebles, business agent of the Vancouver local.

The two current officers still running are Bev Dunphy, first vice-president, and Frank Kennedy, secretary-treasurer.

The leadership convention was part of a last-ditch effort to iron out union difficulties and arrive at an acceptable settlement with the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association.

Dockworkers at six B.C. ports went back to work for 90 days this week under terms of their expired contract, making $3.88 hourly pending a new contract proposal—the third since the strike began Sept. 25.

Mr. Kotowich said he had reconsidered his resignation offer at the insistence of the union executive and ran again to give members "a chance to say whether they wanted new leadership."

Earlier in the day, a five-hour slowdown resulted when half the work force walked out to protest the suspension of a dispatcher.

Edward Strang, president of the employers' association, later announced the dispatcher had been fired for calling a supervisor a scab.

The partial walkout ended when Mr. Kotowich ordered the men back to work.

The employers have about 12 dispatchers on their payroll and although the men are members of the union, they are not recognized as part of the bargaining unit.

The remaining five B.C. ports were not affected by the brief dispute.

Trudeau Castigated By Relief Official

TORONTO (CP) — A Canairelief official lashed out Friday night at Prime Minister Trudeau for saying that Biafra was using night relief flights to screen the bringing in of arms supplies.

"This is simply not true," Henry Fletcher, executive committee member of Canairelief, said in a statement.

He called Mr. Trudeau's statement, made earlier Friday in the House of Commons, "most irresponsible and unfortunate."

Mr. Trudeau, replying to former prime minister Diefenbaker, charged that Biafran authorities are interested in getting arms and not in receiving food and medical supplies for their people.

Mr. Fletcher said relief flights in Biafra are not connected with arms shipments.

Arms flights operate at night whether relief planes do or not.

Market Reacted Favorably To Tax Reform Paper

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Much to the surprise of about everyone, Canadian stock markets this week received the federal government's white paper on tax reforms with a stunning welcome.

For the previous two weeks, markets drifted lower in anticipation of what reforms the white paper might propose.

But the capital gains tax proposal and suggested reductions in tax concessions in the oil and mining industries apparently were discounted in advance as markets rocketed to their best advance on record Monday, following up on Tuesday with their second-best advance.

Profit-taking Wednesday began to nibble away gains although markets came through with solid advances.

However, the profit-taking moved into full gear Thursday and markets recorded large losses. The reversal seemed to die away Friday as small gains were posted.

But it was a sleeper in the white paper—a proposal to credit shareholders of widely-held Canadian companies with one-half of the corporate tax paid by the companies on profits from which dividends are paid—that touched off the barrage of buying of Canadian dividend-paying stocks.

The result of the proposed plan could be a tax rebate from the government for taxpayers in a less-than-50-per-cent bracket.

Observers expect a sustained rise in stock prices because:

—The proposals give strong incentive for Canadians to invest in Canadian stocks rather than in foreign securities.

—Because valuation day in 1970 is unknown, management and shareholders will want their portfolios assessed at high figures to reduce ensuing capital gains. Valuation day will be chosen to assess the ultimate profit or loss of stocks over a period of years.

—The next few months until valuation day will be the last period of tax-free capital gains.

—Many mutual funds and pension funds will switch to Canadian securities from American securities to take advantage of the white paper proposals that favor Canadian investment.

Statistically, on the Toronto Stock Exchange, industrials rose 8.75 to 189.65, western oils 10.83 to 211.27 and base metals 4.48 to 118.94. Golds lost 3.99 to 159.35. Volume was 19,022,000 shares, compared with 15,213,000 last week. Advances outnumbered declines 576 to 279.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was up .52 to 183.75. Combined volume was 8,180,000 shares, compared with 5,286,000 last week. Advances outnumbered declines 245 to 117.

Apollo Now in Grip Of Gravity of Moon

Moon-bound Ship On Unerring Path

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 12 explorers swept into the grip of lunar gravity today as the space ship Yankee Clipper hurtled unerringly toward a Monday night orbit of the moon.

Their target, a shimmering silver crescent, loomed larger and larger as their home planet shrank in the distance.

At 8:38 a.m. EST, astronauts Charles Conrad, Richard Gordon and Alan Bean zipped through a so-called "twilight zone" in which the gravitational influence of the earth and moon is equal.

Once across this invisible line, lunar gravity took hold and Apollo 12's speed accelerated after slowing to about 1,500 miles an hour on the long outward coast. The ship was 211,222 miles from earth and 38,933 miles from the moon.

The speed will increase to about 3,700 miles an hour as the astronauts loop behind the moon's back side tonight. At 10:47 p.m. they are to fire Yankee Clipper's big engine to whip into lunar orbit.

The spacemen were asleep as they entered the lunar sphere of influence. They retired at 7:15 a.m. for a 10-hour rest period after Conrad and Bean inspected the cabin of the lunar landing craft for 45 minutes and reported it in excellent condition. A scheduled eight-hour rest-period was extended to 10 hours when the near-perfect flight allowed an afternoon midcourse change to be cancelled.

They will attempt to steer the lander, called Intrepid, to a pinpoint landing in a 400-foot-wide circle on the moon's Ocean of Storms early Wednesday to open a new era of discovery, the first detailed exploration of the lunar surface.

Conrad and Bean carried along a television camera to transmit live moon pictures of their transfer through a three-foot connecting tunnel into the cabin of the fragile, four-legged vehicle.

As Conrad and Bean moved into the lunar module for the familiarization check, the camera watched as they removed the tunnel hatch and the harpoon-like docking mechanism to clear the tunnel.

Inside the lander cabin, the astronauts beamed pictures of the control panels, the back packs they'll wear on the moon, window markings that will help them land on the moon and dust particles floating in weightlessness.

By way of introduction for the whole televised look of their new world, Conrad pointed out the contrast between the three sides of the spacecraft. Through one, he said, you can see the earth. Through another the moon. Through the third, the sun.

And since they were all so far away, Conrad added, there was little sense of movement. "It seems," he said, "we're in suspended animation out here."

Because of the early hour, television networks taped the show for later broadcast.

St. Jean Baptiste Body Votes for Separatism

MONTREAL (CP) — The idea of Quebec separatism has received approval from the 165,000-member Federation of St. Jean Baptiste Societies.

Delegates to a special week-end meeting Sunday voted 117 to 13 to accept the proposal which also heralded a campaign of pressure on political parties and other groups to orient their programs toward achieving Quebec independence.

It was the first official support of separatism by the nationalist French-Canadian federation, which has 14 member societies throughout the province.

"With a mandate like this—88 per cent—the executive of the federation can actively involve itself in Quebec's economic, political, linguistic and cultural problems," said Gilles Noiseux, federation president.

The federation's earlier stand on Quebec's political options had cost it the membership if four societies.

The St. Jerome, Que., society had split because the parent body would not back separatism.

However, the societies of Quebec City, Sherbrooke and Valleyfield had left the federation because they considered it too separatist-oriented.

The federation's resolution says "total political sovereignty" of Quebec is "an indispensable condition for the orderly development of human, physical and economic resources of the Quebec community."

It also called for an "information program" to warn Quebecers of the necessity of Quebec sovereignty.

Historian Michel Brunet of the University of Montreal told the meeting French-speaking Quebecers are abandoning the notion that they were born to follow the dictates of English-speaking Canadians.

The development in recent history of enlightened social democracy, as seen by the breakdown of stringent class lines, bore out their belief that what was good for their parents need not apply to them.

Russia and U. S. Start Talks on Missile Race

HELSINKI (Reuters) — The U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation talks—Salt—aimed at halting the missile race were formally opened here today by Finnish Foreign Minister Ahti Karjalainen.

The long-awaited talks climax 2½ years of backstage efforts to bring the issue of strategic arms to the conference table and are regarded as of vital importance for world peace.

The primary objective at the Helsinki meeting is to explore the prospects and lay the ground for full-scale substantive talks next year. The U.S. has, however, made it clear it is prepared to get down to concrete discussion immediately.

At a ceremony in the government banquet hall, Karjalainen told the assembled delegates their negotiations were of the utmost importance and urgency not only for the U.S. and Russia but for mankind as a whole.

Vietnam Massacre Disputed

SAIGON (AP) — The chief of Quang Ngai province said today that villagers told him 460 Vietnamese civilians were killed during an American military operation in March, 1968, but he said he had no firm evidence they were executed by American troops.

"I operate with the American Division and never do they deliberately kill the population. If they kill civilians, it's an accident."

Two soldiers, a lieutenant and a staff sergeant, have been arrested in connection with the alleged massacre on March 16, 1968, at Song My village, six miles northeast of Quang Ngai city.

Newsweek magazine and the New York Times reported Sunday, however, that eyewitnesses said 50 or more soldiers were involved. They said the villagers were herded together, their homes destroyed, and then they were mowed down by U.S. soldiers.

Views Differ About March

WASHINGTON (AP) — The demonstrators who jammed the capital for the biggest peace demonstration in U.S. history have gone home, leaving behind a dispute over whether the mass protest Saturday against the Vietnam war was peaceful, as they had promised, or violent, as the government had warned.

"I do not believe that, overall, the gathering here can be characterized as peaceful," Attorney-General John N. Mitchell said Sunday of the gathering that brought at least 250,000 war protesters in Washington.

He accused the organizing New Mobilization Committee of failing to heed justice department warnings of potential violence.

"That's a lie," committee director Ron Young retorted when told of Mitchell's statement. "Yesterday, thousands of people were gassed in Washington by this government. Yesterday, hundreds of people were killed in Vietnam by this government. Yesterday, villages were destroyed in Vietnam by this government."

"Eight hundred thousand came and left this city with only 150 arrests and very few injuries."

Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson had estimated 250,000 demonstrators turned out Saturday. But he said that estimate was modest.

Herbert G. Klein, who speaks for President Nixon, said although the demonstration "again proves that this is a country which allows people to express themselves, I don't think there's a value in trying to form policy for the United States government or any government from crowds on the street."

Nixon had nothing to say.

Mitchell, contending the gathering had not been peaceful, noted two clashes between police and a militant fringe group of the anti-war protesters.

Near the South Vietnamese embassy Friday night, and at the justice department Saturday after the rally, police used tear gas to rout the several thousand militants.

A total of about 130 persons were arrested in the two days—only two in connection with the main march and rally. Most were charged with disorderly conduct and released on posting collateral. No serious injuries were reported, and damage appeared limited to several dozen broken windows.

Red Bases In Cambodia Bombed Again

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. bombers crossed the Cambodian border today for the second day of strikes against North Vietnamese artillery pounding the Su Prang Special Forces camp on the South Vietnamese side of the border.

The U.S. command said the air and artillery strikes against the gun positions inside Cambodia, which began Sunday, were "an inherent right of self-defence against enemy attacks."

Shun Thunderstorms Advises Astronaut

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 12 commander Charles Conrad Jr. recommends that future Apollo flights not be launched in thunderstorms.

In a conversation Saturday with Mission Control here, Conrad noted that such a rule is written in the handbook for airplane pilots.

"They can write that in the Saturn V handbook right now," he said.

Friday as a Saturn V rocket blasted off from Cape Kennedy in a rainstorm a sudden drop-out in electricity momentarily wiped out many of Apollo's systems. But the pilots remained calm and quickly restored order by resetting circuit-breakers.

"I'm not sure we didn't get hit by lightning," Conrad later told Mission Control.

But ground controllers concluded the damage was not done by lightning. They believe it was caused by an as-yet-unexplained problem with the spacecraft's three power-producing fuel cells. They had blown their circuit-breakers.

J. Kennedy Near Death

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) — Joseph P. Kennedy's family gathered here today after a doctor reported the former ambassador had suffered a minor heart attack.

Kennedy, father of President John F. Kennedy, is ill and has been in poor health for eight years.

Richard Cardinal Cushing of Boston, a long-time family friend, said Sunday: "I had a call from the family this morning advising me that he had a very serious setback, and it seems that the good Lord is about to take him in the foreseeable future."

An unofficial source said Kennedy had been given the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church.

"RAY."

He gave me love,
Yet Love was His to Give.
He showed me Purpose Instead,
I awoke to find him standing o'er me.

His presence filled the room,
With a sense of understanding,
That reached all the abandoned corners of the earth.
I knew then,
I loved him as only a son could,
And we lived,
Lived as one,
Sharing, crying, laughing,
Loving for humanity,
Tomorrow,
Through the black horizons,
I awake to find him asleep,
With no understanding,
Or love or concern,
Or where,
He never remembered, ever loved, nor from.

DAFOE — In loving memory of a dear Dad and Grandfather William Dafoe, who passed away Nov. 17, 1939.
Time has but death seemed never,
Love and remembrance last forever.
—Sadly missed by daughter Ida and grandson Bill.

High Powered Rock Fest Had Hitches

By BARRY GRILLS
(Staff Reporter)

"Well, the joint was a-rockin' and the place wasn't packed."

That would be the best way to describe Ken Williams' rock concert Saturday night in the BCIVS auditorium, introducing Belleville's newest local rock group, The Powerhouse.

The auditorium was far from filled, but those who did attend were treated to three diversified styles of music, all done well.

There could have been several reasons for the failure of the crowds to fill the auditorium, but the only one that seems logical is the fact that the atmosphere was all wrong.

The rock fans present were seated in chairs which inhibited moving around during the band breaks and also a aspect of a concert that can ruin the togetherness of the event.

On top of that, spectators were asked not to smoke in the auditorium, another discomfort not often expected during rock shows.

On the other hand, the concert was well advertised and the bands played well. The difference between the three acts offered every type of rock fan something he would like — pleasing vocals by the Mystic Beat from Trenton, the calculated power of Powerhouse, and the heavy informality of Bill the Lizard.

The only complaint some rock observers had was the fact that poor timing forced the shortening of groups' sets to allow for the setting up of equipment. Actually, the concert should have begun earlier in free groups from this problem.

Powerhouse was the reason for the concert.

Powerhouse consists of nine musicians, Ralph Woods on drums; Dave Dimini on drums; Gene Cummings, lead guitar; Dave Whitehead, on organ; Vitas Slapkauskas, bass guitar; Craig Perry, trombone and vibes; Rick Topham, saxophone; John Graves, trumpet; and Michael Paul, lead vocalist.

Performing only one set, the group primarily played music by: Three Dog Night and Blood, Sweat and Tears. They appeared to be modelled after the latter group.

But it was Michael Paul who stood out. He was good and very, very professional. He was so good, it appeared for awhile that the people behind him was created to back him. But, of course, that is always the risk with a group of that size.

The power of nine musicians is the reason why the name of the group, members told the Intelligencer afterwards. It's the hard sound and the synchronization.

Asked if there were any problems arranging music with that many musicians, Gene Cummings replied, "I don't think it's any hassle. It just takes a little longer."

The aim of the group is to original music composed by the members themselves. "We're going to evolve into something," Gene said. "We're trying to work on Blood, Sweat and Tears live — hard and driving."

"I think we should play stuff where the horn parts are cut and dried — a versatility," explained John Graves.

"We're not the rhythm and blues sort of thing at all," commented Michael Paul.

The best words to describe the sets of the Mystic Beat are "nice." "easy to listen to" and "naturally unified."

The fact all four members of the band are brothers makes a lot of difference. The natural unity that is the result is felt by the audience.

The group — Paul Richard, drummer and leader; Raymond Richard, bass guitar and lead vocalist; Jean-Guy Richard, organ, guitar and lead vocalist; and Louie Richard, rhythm-lead guitar — has been together for three years.

They started the group in Trenton, although all had previous playing experience in Montreal.

"We're aiming toward a totally original show with our own songs," Paul explained. "It's how you get to make records."

The Mystic Beat, who like a good crowd, did a pair of songs at the concert that were their own composition. Choir among these was "She's So Good," composed by Armond.

"We were brought up with music all our lives and we've been playing it all our lives," explained Paul.

"I think we play more or less the classics — the songs that have been good in the past," added Jean-Guy.

Their music is definitely nostalgic, definitely full of heart. Their version of "You've lost that lovin' feeling" testifies well to this.

Full Value Assessment Under Fire

The "split" tax rate and the provincial government shelter exemption payments have been past moves to ease the tax burden on residential property owners, but opposition members in the legislature claim these advantages could be wiped out under Ontario's proposed program of assessing at full value.

In the legislature last week it was claimed that even with the new assessment act would increase to 12 per cent of assessment values, residential property owners while easing the load on industrial property.

During the discussion, Darcy McKeough, minister of municipal affairs, admitted that the government was worried about such shifts and was considering the best way of alleviating them. Higher sales tax, business property or interim transfer payments were suggested.

The reason for the expected shift of the tax burden under the new assessment program was explained late last week by Belleville assessment commissioner G. Leighton Thompson.

He said that in recent years residential property values had increased more rapidly than had commercial and industrial properties.

Thus, under full market value reassessment, residential assessments could see a higher percentage increase than would business.

One way of again evening out the tax burden under the re-assessment program, according to Mr. Thompson, would be to increase the business tax rate for commercial and industrial operations.

Business tax rates are rates range all the way from 10 per cent for supervised parking to all the way up to 150 per cent for breweries and distilleries.

Mr. Thompson said the Smith tax report had recommended the adoption of one single business tax rate for all businesses.

The "split" tax rate introduced in 1957 is a system under which commercial and industrial properties pay a higher property tax rate than is assessed for residential properties.

The shelter exemption program introduced two years ago saw grants of about $60 given to residential property owners. Landlords, in turn, were expected to pass the grant along to their tenants.

The Mini and the Mammoth

It looks like a freak accident. Actually it's a travelling exhibit of ingenuity. The mini automobile lodged in the rear of this bus is only one of the extras aboard a converted coach used by Jim Hodge and family, of Sherbrooke, Que., as a travelling holiday home.

A Bus with Extras

The Family Car Rides, Too

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Jim Hodge goes everywhere by bus — and keeps his car at the back, just in case.

The Hodge coach is one of the few travelling garages on Canadian highways.

The mini-model automobile mounted at the rear is just one of the many extras that make the bus a minor miracle of skilled handiwork.

Bellevillians briefly glimpsed the self-contained, mobile home-from-home Saturday when the Hodges stopped briefly in the city to visit one of the family.

At the time, they were enroute to the Royal Winter Fair, one of the many trips with which the family has marked up 128,000 miles away from their Sherbrooke, Que., home in 11 years.

The bus pace shuttled passengers between Toronto and Montreal. Mr. Hodge, inspired by its potential as a travelling holiday home, purchased the vehicle when it came out of commercial service.

Overhauling the interior finally produced a powerful vehicle with sleeping room for eight, living - dining quarters and a shower — heated and lighted by propane gas and an electric generator.

The one problem posed was the weight of the bus — which might exclude it crossing rustic bridges and light ferries on family holidays.

He solved the problem by mounting a small automobile on racks built into the rear of the mammoth mobile residence.

Mr. Hodge, a Quebec regional school business operator, doesn't even feel he's taking a busman's holiday aboard the vehicle.

Its only resemblance now to the real thing is its streamlined interior.

Its record mileage also is marked by a new lease of traveling life. Mr. Hodge recently rebuilt its powerful Rolls-Royce diesel engine.

"It's in pretty good shape now," he says.

Belleviliians from time to time likely may glimpse the Hodge home-on-wheels.

Travelling with the couple are daughters Laura, 7, and 16-year-old Chris. Their third daughter is Mrs. Rose Jenkerson, who lives on Applewood Drive, in the city's west end.

Trenton Nominations Tonight

TRENTON (Staff) — It's not official yet, but from all appearances five of the six positions in this year's municipal election will be contested.

A nomination meeting will be held tonight at the Trenton town hall from 6 to 8 p.m. Nominations for the four council positions open will be taken from 6 to 7 p.m. and for mayor from 7 to 8 o'clock.

Incumbent Mayor James MacDonald has announced he will seek re-election. Duncan McDonald, who recently resigned his council seat to qualify for the mayoralty post, will oppose the mayor in the forthcoming election.

Perhaps the biggest scramble will be in the race for the four council seats, with seven men already having announced their candidacy.

"I'm running to endorse Duncan McDonald for mayor because I am keenly interested that he gets elected," J. D. Kinney announced this morning.

Mr. Kinney and E. M. Parker are the two incumbent councillors to seek re-election.

Former councillor Charles Hilton also threw his hat into the ring this morning. Four other men without previous council experience have already announced their candidacy. They are postal clerk George Greer, insurance man Neil Robertson, jeweler Gerrit Bruinix and local dentist W. R. Patrick. Incumbent councillor Gerald Weaver said last week he would not seek re-election.

C. E. Baker has announced he will seek re-election to the Public Utilities Commission. Mr. Baker, who has served 14 years on the PUC, is unopposed at present.

All six positions on Trenton council carry a two-year term but members of the present council have an understanding that they will all resign next fall to enable a start for simultaneous elections for council, PUC and Hastings County Board of Education.

All persons nominated tonight will have until 8 p.m. Tuesday to qualify.

The pre-election spotlight also focuses on Ameliasburg Township tonight with nominations to be received at the township hall from 6 to 8 p.m.

The offices of reeve, deputy-reeve and three councillors are open and if there is a contest the election will be Dec. 1. The council positions carry a one-year term.

Former District Girl Dies in Crash

PICTON (Staff) — An Oshawa teenager was killed last night in an automobile accident in Prince Edward County.

Dead is Barbara Buttars, 18, a passenger in a car driven by Robert Evans, 18, of RR 4, Picton. A second passenger, Lana Lyons, 18, also of RR 4, Picton, is in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital with pelvic injuries.

The dead girl's father, Rev. Melville Buttars, was formerly a minister at Bloomfield United Church.

When the accident occurred, Miss Buttars was enroute to catch a train home to Oshawa from Belleville.

The Evans youth was taken to hospital with bruises. His car was travelling towards Picton on County Road No. 14 when the vehicle left the road on a curve, striking a tree at Dozee's Corners. Miss Buttars, formerly of Wellington, was pronounced dead at the scene by County Coroner, Dr. C. R. Richmond.

Car Hits Tree, Oshawa Man Dies

COLBOURNE (Staff) — Saturday's driving snowstorm is blamed for a young Oshawa man's death just outside this community 23 miles west of Trenton.

Douglas Moffat, 39, was killed when his car swerved across County Road 25 (Percy Street) and crashed into a large tree.

The accident occurred at 6.35 p.m. Saturday 500 yards south of Highway 401 on a road made icy by a driving snowstorm.

Mr. Moffat was heading north on Durham-Northumberland County Road 25 on a straight stretch 150 yards past the crest of a hill when the mishap occurred. He was alone at the time and was believed to have been on his way home to Oshawa. Damage to his 1964 model car was estimated at $1,200.

Just an hour later Lyle Bellamy, 23, of Percy Street, Colbourne, skidded off the same slippery road and broke off a telephone pole.

He escaped injury, although damage was estimated at $500 to his 1976 model car and $100 to the telephone pole.

Fund Drive Success

TRENTON (Staff) — The final results of the Trenton Fire Department's first door-to-door Muscular Dystrophy canvass have been tabulated.

"The campaign results of the Trenton fire fighters this year were exceptionally good, being an approximate 125 per cent increase over last year," said David Taylor, a field representative with the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada.

"On behalf of the Association I congratulate Trenton fire fighters for their enthusiasm which resulted in this cheque for $1,357.50 which will go towards muscular dystrophy medical research and patient service."

He received the cheque from Dennis Smith, chairman of the Trenton Fire Department's Muscular Dystrophy Campaign.

All 28 members of the department participated in the three-day door-to-door canvass as well as carrying out a letter canvass of local businesses and industries.

School Break-in Probed

Belleville City Police are investigating a break-in at Sir Mackenzie Bowell Public School over the weekend.

According to Deputy Chief Harold Reid, nothing was taken during the break-in. It was probably the work of young people, he said.

Eggs were thrown at various parts of the school. The vandals got into the school through a window.

Folksingers Bridge Generation Gap

TRENTON (Staff) — The young folksinger with the long blonde hair paused between numbers to ask: "Do you have any requests?"

"Yes!" was the immediate response from an elderly lady "I request that you come back again!"

That simple statement vividly expressed the feelings of the elderly patients at Green Acres Nursing Home who were entertained for two hours Saturday afternoon by a group of folksingers from Moira Secondary School.

"It really picks the patients up — they enjoy themselves — so it's good for them," said Mrs. G. Ellis, a head nurse at the home.

The home at Bayside is just one of a number of nursing and special care homes in the Quinte area which have benefitted from visits by Moira Secondary School students.

These visits are the personal project of Mary Weymark, a Grade 13 student at Moira, who was made aware of the loneliness of many elderly people by her aunt who is associated with a nursing home in the Quinte area.

Miss Weymark organizes trips to nursing homes for the groups — Moira's Folksong Club and the Moira Keyette Club. Among the elderly people who have enjoyed the youngsters' visits are those at Madoc, Montgomery Lodge, Belcrest Nursing Home and Green Acres Nursing Home.

"We've been alternating with the folksingers and the Keyettes with the singers performing and the Keyettes dancing with the patients and doing crafts with them," Mary Weymark said.

"They listen to our songs and ask us to play ones they like," she continued, correcting "I just hope to keep it up."

Mary Weymark stressed that both the 25-member folksinging club and the Keyette Club had volunteered to make the visits and noted that the big problem was in providing transportation for the trips away from Belleville.

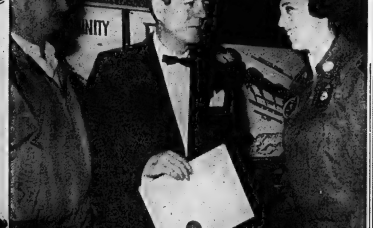
"I did ask a few teachers to drive, but they're busy enough as it is," Mary explained. "So it was a real blessing when the Intelligencer responded to my request and granted us money for buses."

"I hope to take the school band on some visits in the new year and a bus will be essential here because of the band instruments; just as we need it now, when we have a full folksinging club and their drums and other equipment."

Mary, who started the project last spring and continued it in September, added: "We find the people are so easy to reach and we're always appreciated so the kids feel they have accomplished something."

Jo - Ann Wiercinski, the young folksinger with the long, blonde hair, said: "The visits are great — it makes us feel good to know that we can do something to help other people."

Miss Eleanor Aitkin, the MSS teacher who looks after the folksinging club, interjected: "It's fantastic! The enthusiasm is spontaneous and spreads from the audience to the group."



Piston Pushers Honored

Members of the Piston Pushers Motorcycle Club, George Griffiths and Beverley Doman, Saturday received certificates naming them radiation monitors for the Quinte Emergency Measures organization. Mayor J. Russell Scott (centre) made the presentation to the club members, all of whom graduated from the course with marks of over 80 per cent.

City of Tomorrow

A stark picture of what might happen if municipalities neglect the realities of growth has been offered by Mayor Russell Scott.

Noting that the real Quinte urban area reaches from Amelissburg township to Stirling, from Murray township to Shannonville, the Mayor told a Loyalist College audience that that is where the problems are building up and if something is not done soon "we are going to have every ditch in the country filled with sewage."

It is a reminder that the needs of the greater Belleville of the future must be anticipated now. The necessary services must be provided as urban growth takes place, if not before.

Much is heard about the expanded Belleville of tomorrow, but planning is needed. This must involve not only the city's present needs, such as urban renewal — whenever that concept may be tackled once again — and new commercial projects, but also the requirements of the hinterland, in neighboring townships. In other words there is a great deal of talk about the community's future structure in relation to the surrounding area; but as yet no one seems to have a clear picture of just what is involved, or what is entailed in bringing about this bigger and brighter Belleville.

Space Program

Apollo XII is on its way through space, bearing three more astronauts for another United States landing on the moon. And once again antiClaim is heard of the cost of the moon program and suggestions that the money might be more usefully spent on the poor.

The answer of course is that the Americans would have their poor and their ghettos, space program or not, and that poverty is not cured by massive injections of money but rather by a slow overall process of improvement of standards of living.

Globe and Mail columnist Richard Needham recently estimated that during the most commonly quoted figure of $30 billion as the cost of the space program, this represents $6 or $7 for each person on earth. Each, he suggested, would have spent the money inside a week and what would there be to show for it — certainly no moon program.

With a U.S. population of 200 million it works out at $150 for each American, or $15 a year since the space program began about ten years ago.

The eminent British astronomer, Sir Bernard Lovell, has pointed out; moreover, that the annual cost of the Apollo program is only about one-third of what Americans spend on tobacco and only one-sixth what they spend on alcohol. Even the British, he points out, could support a manned lunar program on the sums spent annually on tobacco and alcohol.

Once again it is a question of what everything in this life is relative.

Apartheid

The traditionally sporting British are taking a not so sporting view of the visit to their country of the South African rugby team.

Everywhere the Springboks have been in action demonstrators have invaded the pitch, their business of course being to protest South Africa's apatheid policy.

It is difficult of course to believe that the South African government is going to do anything about it. That the system is morally indefensible is undeniable, but from a purely practical and political point of view it seems to work. The country, moreover, is prosperous and many of the native African people share in that prosperity. The African population also has its own schools, social welfare facilities and hospitals.

Where it does inspire the wrath and derision of the outside world, however, is with regard to the massive repressive apparatus that the police employ to enforce the system. Many liberal South Africans have been jailed or held under house arrest for their opposition to the system.

The business of apartheid, in its practical applications, also leads to some extraordinary forms. For example, the new parliament tower of the post office in Johannesburg (which incidentally will be the tallest structure in Africa at 581 feet) will have buffet facilities and viewing platforms for both whites and non-whites.

That is one of the facets of apartheid — the estate of being separate, with whites kept apart from blacks. Like it or not it is likely to remain, barring some vast internal revolution and that does not seem likely, in the forseeable future at least.

P. C. Team Has Five Women

Ottawa Clams Up When Party Researchers on Line

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — "With all the talent around, we could have an all-girl band," said Edwin Black, chief of the Conservative research bureau here.

He wasn't talking about music but about his research team. Five of his 10-member team are women, including lawyer Pauline Gaudet of Montreal, economist Jennifer Robinson of Vancouver, political scientist Mrs. Jean Van Loon of Ottawa and journalist Ina Warren of Ottawa.

Prof. Black, on leave from Queen's University for a year, gave the impression he wouldn't mind hiring all women except that such things just aren't done here. There is only one woman in the 264-seat Commons, Mrs. Grace MacInnis of the NDP.

This year the government—rather, the taxpayers—for the first time provided $125,000 for salaries for researchers for the Conservative party and $55,000 each for the NDP and Creditistes for the same purpose.

All these research teams are housed in the Hope Building in downtown Ottawa, the Conservatives on the third floor, NDP on the second and Creditistes on the first.

The accommodation is provided by the government at no cost to the opposition parties.

There is some suspicion that the Creditistes are using their research office as a national political headquarters.

The staff of the Creditiste research bureau identified the bureau to a reporter as the national headquarters of the party.

However, the office of Creditiste Leader Real Caouette denied that it is any such thing but only what it is supposed to be, a research bureau.

There is some question, however, about the presence of an addressing machine in this bureau.

And at $35,000, the Creditistes have been able to hire a staff as large as the Conservatives with $125,000. The NDP has a staff of four researchers.

The staffs provide information to their MPs to help them pose questions, write speeches and draft bills.

It is not surprising that the Conservative research team has provided information leading to drafting of at least three bills aimed at removing alleged discrimination against women.

All three research teams say they find it difficult to obtain information from government departments to which the public is entitled.

They said government officials seem to freeze when they find opposition workers on the other end of the telephone.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nov. 17, 1969 . . .

Vancouver Island, the Hudson's Bay Co.'s last territorial possession on the Pacific, was amalgamated with the British-governed colony of British Columbia 103 years ago today—in 1866—leaving Rupert's Land still ruled, outright by the company. There was opposition to uniting Vancouver Island and British Columbia because both were in debt, but the prospect of joining a Canadian federation provided the necessary spur.

1859—A Canadian proposal for global study of atomic radiation was unanimously approved by the United Nations General Assembly.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—it was announced that the Commonwealth air training plan in Canada would not continue after March 31, 1945; Russian troops pierced German defence lines 10 miles east of Budapest taking Gyongyo; French 1st Army took Montbeliard, six miles from Belfort in drive to gateway to southern Rhineland.

On Sticking It Out

Boston Globe

"Bug out" is the opprobrious word. Today, it reflects on those who would have the United States leave Vietnam. At any time, it's considered the equivalent of "cop-out" or "drop-out". It means shedding all responsibility and just lying down somewhere to smell the flowers.

Alas, affairs are so arranged that bug-out, like Heaven on earth, is too good for us. Yet at one point or another, or indeed often, practically everyone feels an urge to drop everything and flee.

The temptation may get to be pretty strong. One may think of flying to the South Seas or the Canadian woods. He may consider that if he goes West on the Massachusetts Turnpike, starting this minute, he will have a wide choice of destinations. If indeed he wants any. Or, less dramatically, he may toy with the idea of going down to some quiet saloon and staying there until they close the joint or throw him out.

The first drawback to the personal bug out is that it cuts off income. There are other catches to it, too. Really, it can't be done.

Alas, again, the only practical thing to do is to stick around and stick it out, somehow. That's what everyone does.

Swimming Facilities

City Lacks Municipal Pool

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I would like to draw to the attention of the citizens of Belleville, the need for a municipal swimming pool.

I know that at present, there are three pools in the city. One is at the YMCA, one at the Tops Motel and the third is the Kinsmen Pool. The first one is a small pool which is in full use; the second is a commercial enterprise; and the third is an outdoor pool which can be used only two months out of the twelve.

As already stated, the YMCA pool is in full use, as is the Kinsmen Pool during the summer. Those programs which can afford the rental of the Tops pool make good use of it — but nowhere near full use.

The Quinte Kiwanis programme is one which demonstrates the need for a municipal pool. This service project provides instruction in swimming and water safety for over 600. Since the beginning of this year's program, more than 500 attend classes each weekend at the Tops. In the previous four years, approximately 1,200 people have received instruction.

With the popularity of this program, and of all other aquatic activities in general, it becomes increasingly necessary to have facilities to provide for greater recreational use. We live, surrounded by water, and yet do not, or cannot, take full advantage of it.

I repeat — we need a municipal pool. This will cost money, but there are means of supplying the facility by relatively inexpensive ways. I am fully aware also of the need for other recreational facilities, but personally feel that the need for a pool should receive priority. I know from many conversations with others that many people agree with me.

Looking for Husbands

German Features

BONN — Six million women over 40 in west Germany would like to marry — if only they could find a partner.

Statistics drafted for a study by the country's federal government reveal there are only 1.3 eligible bachelors in the over-40 bracket on the domestic market. And in fact, not even all these are on the market: 15 percent say they are determined to remain single.

On the other hand, 97 per cent of those 6,000,000 women definitely want to march down the aisle. But they are not the only age group finding it difficult to lasso a partner.

The government study reveals German girls 20 to 25 generally have few problems finding a man to marry. But only 50 percent of single girls at age 21 are able to do so. By age 40, the chances have dropped to 39 per cent and at 50 to five percent.

Forty-five percent of German girls in the 20-25 age group today are married to men younger than they are — even though the broad prejudice against such marriages is still strong in the country.

The situation is having some interesting results. For example, nearly 55 percent of Germans getting married from their country each year are women (total engrives number about 75,000 annually).

And marriages to non-German males are becoming increasingly popular among German women — something which is greatly aided by the image of the "Fraulein wonder" which has developed since World War II.

In 1967, the last year for which statistics are available on the category, 16,533 German women tied the knot with non-German partners.

Threat to Balance of Power in Asia

Break-up of Congress Party Upsets India's Stability

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The way India's Congress party is shaping itself apart leads to grave fears for the future of the whole great Indian subcontinent.

In Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's fight with opponents in her governing party—culminating Wednesday with the Congress-working committee expelling her from the party—much more is at stake than just Mrs. Gandhi's political future.

Parliamentary members of the party probably will reject the recommendation of the old guard-dominated working committee—the party's top policy-making body—to drop her as leader. But that will not be the end of her troubles, or the party's or India's.

As some observers now see it, the late Mohandas Gandhi may have been wiser than it appeared when he observed that the party had lost its motivating force when it won independence from the British raj after a 52-year fight.

By personal magnetism Jawaharlal Nehru kept it a dominant political force for progress. But since his death in 1964 the party has been relatively adrift. His daughter, the present prime minister, kept only a slender majority in Parliament and held only eight of the 17 states in the 1967 general elections.

Her current struggle within the party came to a head in a power struggle three months ago when she made the party leadership by procuring the election of her own candidate as Indian president. She had fired a capable finance minister and obtained the resignation of her railways minister for disagreement with her. She has refused to drop her food minister, though he has been accused of being a 10-year tax dodger.

Her dispute with the so-called old guard or Syndicate in the Congress party means that in Parliament she will lose most of her 73-seat majority and will have to rely on support from left-wingers if she wants to keep her government alive.

She has stored up some credits with these elements—which include Communists — by conceding nationalization of the banks in return for backing in electing her candidate, V. V. Giri, to the presidency.

In return Giri will undoubtedly give her a dissolution should she lose a confidence vote in the lower House. This would allow a caretaker period of perhaps six months, which she might prefer to relying on support from the two Communist parties to carry the house, while she rallied her undoubted strength among the masses.

But the portents of all this rancorous infighting within the dominant party are ominous. Political instability hangs on the fringes of India. Some of the states already are in near-anarchy and stagnation.

The danger, as some see it, is that a disintegration of the Congress party now could usher India into the same state. And with Pakistan teetering on the verge of civil war, a wobbly India could make the subcontinent a prey to extremism and alter the whole balance of power in Southern Asia.

The Belleville Kinettes entertained the Tweed Kinettes at a dinner meeting in St. Thomas' Parish House, with the president, Helen Wilbur, presiding.

Mr. and Mrs. John Graham-McIntosh, London, were recent guests of Mrs. Clinton McBride and Mrs. Fred Halpin.

Dr. C. W. McIntosh and Mrs. McIntosh (nee Shirley Bonter, Reg. N.) and Douglas, Ottawa, visited Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Bonter of Marmora St., Trenton, and relatives in the district over the weekend.

. . . the deck windows of the Queen Mary had been blacked out before we came aboard. At boat drill we were told — no smoking on deck after dark — open decks not to be used at night. At Cherbourg the lounge doors had been muffled with heavy brown blankets. In the shadowy corridors was a single light of now - familiar blue. Through the library door one could see rows of white cots, each with a single suitcase. Rows of cots every where, every large space save the main lounge and smoke room. The latter was crowded. At there were no crowds. . . .

J. Edson Logan of Toronto has joined the staff of Angus McPhee, Jewellers, as manager of the jewellery department. Mr. Logan has had wide experience in the jewellery business and for the past 10 years has been connected with the well known jewellery firm of Kents Limited, Toronto.

The spacious mantle room in the Rink was the scene of merriment and sociability when members of the staff of the Bank of Commerce and staff management. The early part of the evening was devoted to an address by Mr. Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank, which was much enjoyed. A vote of thanks to Mr. Elliott was moved by Frank Thompson and seconded by Harry Bryant. The quartet composed of Messrs. Bryant, Foste, Hickey and Buchanan sang several enjoyable selections.

Thrill of A Lifetime

For eight-year-old Anna Gagacia,k of Belleville, the excitement of seeing live opera presented by the Canadian Opera Company Saturday night at Centennial Secondary School was exceeded by meeting a member of the cast backstage after the show. Peter Milne, who sang the part of Dr. Bartolo in the production, autographed her program.

Rotary-sponsored Barber of Seville Credit to Opera Company's Prowess

By EUGENE LANG

Although a chill, brittle cloak of cutting winds enveloped the city on Saturday evening, this did not deter the hundreds of opera buffs from leaving the warm confines of their homes to attend the gala performance of Gioacchino Rossini's masterpiece of Italian comic opera The Barber of Seville as presented by the Canadian Opera Company at Centennial Secondary School auditorium.

Practically every seat was occupied before the initial strains of the familiar overture heralded the enjoyable two-and-a-half hours that were to ensue.

It is hard to believe that such a perennial favorite the world over as this comic farce should have been conceived in the astounding short space of 19 days and then born into a surrounding of hisses, catcalls and derision.

Such was the case upon the world premiere in Rome on February 16, 1816, but on the next two presentations the boos turned to bravos and from then until the present, this king of opera buffa with its emotional changes from sentimentality to laughter and drama to burlesque has captivated untold millions with its tunable melodies, subtle dynamics, mercurial rhythms and fleeting patter songs.

If Rossini had written nothing else, his name would have lived for this opera alone.

A first rate cast was assembled for this English version production, which is all the more troublesome to tailor to the musical notation because of differences of meaning, inflection of voice and changes of emphasism.

However, the language metamorphoses was accomplished for the most part with ecla. With this in mind, we must be excused in this review from giving the original titles of the various numbers, and substituting others in their place, this exigency being necessitated by the language difference.

A brief note on each principal thus follows. Our ubiquitous hero, Figaro, was fashioned in scherzo schemings by Bartione William Covington (replacement for scheduled Donald Rutherford). To mention only one of his arias, the opening "I am the Factotum" was sung with fervor and pomposity in fast patter that could have been better heard had the orchestra toned down some. The duets with the Count Almaviva and later with Rosina were handled with spirnto and acumen.

John Arab gave an excellent portrayal of the wily count. The tenor demonstrated command over the hazardous floritura (flowering embellishment) in his introductory serenade to Rosina and his duet with Figaro at the end of Act One was replete with bel canto fiorditly.

The part of the curmudgeonly Dr. Bartolo was fully realized in a tenacious simulation of senility by Basso Peter Milne whose enactments at all times elicited guffaws from the audience. His rich voice was well suited to both the niceties and invectives that flowed forth in both solo and multiple vocal excerpts.

Jan Rubes, another well known basso (who is not new to local concertgoers) gave a splendid characterization of the pseudo sanctity inherent in that old intriguer Dr. Basilio. To mention only one of his outstanding momenta on stage we must not overlook his ventings of wrath in his Calumny Aria in Act Two. This was built up in a series of hateful metaphors that culminated in stentorian viciousness — a grand exemplification of a deeply hued voice. His acting was also humorously honed to meet the comic curve of the moment.

The role of the coquettish yet vixenish Rosina was ideally suited to the clear coloratura voice of Sheila Piercey. Her opening tour de force A Little Voice I Have Heard, was sung in crystal tones with the difficult floritura spun jewel like in delicate filigree. Her duet with Figaro in Act Two and her terzetto with Almaviva and Figaro in the last Act were models of fluency and purity of vocal designing. Her kittenish acting and bubbling personality on stage were activated attributes to her charming voice and mannerisms.

Berta, the arthritic old servant of Dr. Bartolo, was comically created by Mezzo-Soprano Elsie Sawchuk, whose only aria in the last act gave her an opportunity to display her singing accomplishments in this song full of witty yet explicit melody. Phil Stark and Ralph Oostwoud completed the cast with their bit parts of the sergeant, the soldier and the notary.

The concerted numbers, of which there were many were all projected with spontaniety on the part of the singers, and the machine-like precision was noticeable with voices rushing hither and yon in typical Italian stylings of the early 19th Century.

Finales to acts two and three were first rate examples of this. The orchestra of 17 pieces gave a fine account of itself throughout, although a bit heavy in some of the arias in accompanying.

Conductor John Fenwick shepherded the best from his cast and poured deluges of sound to his listeners.

Costuming was colorful and in accord with the period (late 18th Century) and stage scenery was at a minimal, yet sufficient for a travelling company. Secco recitatives were accompanied by some electronic instrument that simulated a harpsichord — the device sufficed.

The Belleville Rotary Club who sponsored the Canadian Opera Company performance are to be thanked for their efforts in bringing grand opera to city and district lovers of one of the highest forms of musical expression.

Appeal Award 'Unfair'; Supreme Court Next?

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — "The people of Trenton must be proud of their Public Utilities Commission — every time they turn a tap they get my water!"

These were the words of an Irate Jack Alyea Sunday after considering a letter he received informing him of the decision of Durham-Northumberland County Judge J. C. Curtally on his appeal regarding the price offered by the Trenton PUC for 12.8 acres of land expropriated from him in 1966 for the town's new water reservoir.

The Judge's decision which Mr. Alyea received in the mail Friday, directed the Trenton PUC to pay $8,750 for the land in addition to all costs. Mr. Alyea said that the original PUC offer in January 1966 was $1,900.

"I'm surprised by the court decision and I'm not satisfied because I feel that it's unfair!", asserted Mr. Alyea.

"I haven't decided yet what I will do next, but I will probably appeal to the Ontario Supreme Court," he added, noting that he had 30 days in which to appeal the county court's decision.

"The court granted me over four times the PUC's original offer but the price isn't high enough and not in accordance with the damage done to this farm."

Mr. Alyea's property, Lot 10, Concession 1 of Murray Township, is located three miles west of Trenton on Highway 2 and now consists of approximately 100 acres, 65 of which support an apple orchard which is Mr. Alyea's prime source of income.

"The loss of the land for the reservoir has lowered the farm's value and divided the property leaving an eight-acre field in the north that is inaccessible because the PUC has refused to grant me a right-of-way," Mr. Alyea insisted, adding that he must now travel one mile farther— in each direction—to reach his most northerly field.

"The Judge's three - page statement said that $8,750 was fair value for the expropriated property, the timber on the property and the creek which passes through the expropriated property," Mr. Alyea added. "But it isn't."

"The court didn't consider the great estate value of the land which could have been sold for building lots, or the fact that the creek on the expropriated land was the sole source of water for the north end of the farm."

"Experts on the apple growing industry testified in court that they estimated the damage to the farm at between $17,000 and $18,000," Mr. Alyea claimed.

Mr. Alyea attempted to block the expropriation of the land by keeping a shotgun guard on it from January to August in 1966. This attempt failed when the PUC got a court order permitting them to take over the land.

Bags Deer Hard Way

You don't always have to go into the woods to get your deer!

This was discovered over the weekend by Roland Belanger, 20 First Street, Belleville, who would half at least have it the conventional way.

While driving along High-way 7 east of Madoc Saturday night two deer standing on the shoulder of the roadway loomed up in Mr. Belanger's headlights.

He slowed down to avoid them but the two deer parted, one of them leaping into the woods and the other darting across the highway directly in front of Mr. Belanger's station wagon.

The vehicle skidded on the snowy roadway, went into the ditch and turned, resulting in about $750 damage.

Mr. Belanger escaped with a wrenched back but the deer was killed.

Fabric Designers Utilize Simple, Easy-Care Textiles

MONTREAL (CP) — One fast trip through the stores should be enough to convince the feminine shopper that this fall's cold-weather fabrics have more to offer than ever before.

As more and more women turn to sewing as an alternative to soaring costs of ready-to-wear garments, fabric designers have been encouraged to supply the latest in fashion prints and the most simple of easy-care textiles.

As added enticement, 1969 marks the final breakaway from standard A-lines and an enthusiastic embrace of dashing pant-suits, flowing hostess gowns and the flamboyant gypsy look.

With these styles run a gamut of crisp micro-to-maxi prints, hushed pastels and bold colors from which to choose. What woman could help but enjoy working on her winter wardrobe.

The selection of wash-and-wear polyester and acrylic fibres is great—appearing in everything from clinging silk knits to warm woolly fabrics. Best of all, while they look like pure wool, synthetics are immune to moths or mildew and hold their shape for the life of the garment.

Crepes, a traditional favorite for afternoon and evening, are back and some sport a new look. Textured and striped crepes, with raised self-ribbing, are most exciting when used with matching solid crepe for unusual tunic and pants-or-dress outfits.

The zig-zag look—featuring sleeves and full skirt—is showing up here in everything from at-home clothes to wedding gowns with scoop necks and tightly-laced bodices. Splashy Art Deco prints blending earth brown and green tones with Persian red, gold and blue accents are designed especially for this fashion.

Scarves and tie belts are the most important accessories this fall, so if you have trouble finding just the right color for a suit or dress, make a scarf or sash in silky paisley surah or an acrylic jersey print which drapes easily.

For those who still prefer the straight-line dress, a border print can give it a contemporary look. They are available in a host of solid shades, both subtle and gay, ending in a four-to-eight-inch border of checks, wild abstract prints or Scandinavian-influenced embroidery.

Naturally, the classic flannels and heathers will continue this winter in town-and-country ensembles of coat and dress, suit and vest, or pants and skirt with a matching or color-co-ordinated top.

Whether armed with these materials, every woman is on her own to create fashion-right clothes with that extra touch of individuality.

Art Association Presents Painting by Andre Bieler

"Les Patates", a painting by Andre Bieler, was presented to the Belleville Library Gallery by the Belleville Art Association last Friday evening. The occasion was the preview opening of the annual exhibition of the art association.

Chairman of the Library Board, Mrs. A. Lewis accepted the painting on behalf of the board.

Andre Bieler was born in Lausanne in 1896 and came to Canada in 1904 when he was 12. He was frustrated by the lack of art in the public schools of Montreal after the Lysee Carnot in Paris where it was an important subject. He was to win first prize many times for his works.

Bieler became an Associate of the Royal Canadian Academy in 1942 and a full Academician in 1955. He is a member of the Canadian Group of Painters (Vice-President, 1943), the Ontario Society of Artists, the Canadian Society of Painters in Water Color and the Canadian Society of Graphic Art. He became second resident artist in 1936 of the Queen's University Art Department. The Agnes Etherington Art Centre on the campus as it is today is largely the work of Mr. Bieler.

Judy La Marsh Predicts Revolution in Status of Women

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be a revolution in the status of women in the next 20 years, Judy LaMarsh, state secretary in the Pearson government, told about 1,000 women here Wednesday.

Speaking to the Ottawa Women's Canadian Club, Miss LaMarsh said she is sure women will turn militant in that time.

Miss LaMarsh, now practising law in Niagara Falls, Ont., said effective contraceptives are breaking the biological boundaries which for centuries have kept women tied to the home.

She believed the time would come when more women took part in protest marches and perhaps bombings, in much the same way as militant French-Canadians and Americans in their efforts for equality.

"Very soon we will be hearing more and more men asking: 'What do women want,'" she said.

Women wanted what every human being wants—a chance to use the abilities and brains they have.

In future the freedom women had attained would mean "a tremendous change in the whole fabric of society." But if Canadian women decided they wanted real equality, there were many things they would have to give up.

Miss LaMarsh said the Commons is "singularly bereft" of women, reflecting pretty well the status of women in Canada today. Mrs. Grace MacInnis, New Democrat member for Vancouver Kingsway, is the only women MP.

The former state secretary said Canadian women had accomplished a great deal, however. Community welfare and social groups were almost totally staffed by women but it was time more chairmen of such groups were women.

Miss LaMarsh said that until recently the civil rights of Canadian women had not been as high as in almost any other country in the world.

"When the royal commission on the status of women reports, you will be surprised at the anachronisms that still exist," she said.

She suggested that employers might give more thought to hiring women for those jobs where such qualities as attention to detail and patience are needed.

CHRIST CHURCH ACW

The November business meeting of the ACW Evening Branch of Christ Church was opened by the president, Mrs. J. Kilburn with the devotionals.

Minutes were approved as read by the secretary, Mrs. E. Mossman, who read two letters of correspondence, one from the ACW Women's Guild from Holy Trinity Church from Shannonville inviting the group to their autumn tea and bazaar to be held the middle of November, and one from the chairman of the Canadian Mental Health Association, Mrs. J. Fletcher asking for the group's help.

Reports were received from the treasurer, Mrs. P. Burton giving the financial report for the year, and also from the Sunshine Fund secretary, Miss Frances Reid, who reported the sending of cards, and also that the Extra cent a day fund was to be sent in to headquarters for the year. Subscriptions for the "Living Message" were paid for the coming year, and dues and pledges were paid. It was decided to give the usual donation to the Mental Health Clinic. Next meeting, instead of exchanging gifts, each member will bring a gift to send to the needy.

A great deal of business was discussed, and it was reported that the Opportunity Sale and Baking Bonzaza held on October 17, and 18 in the Parish Hall by all groups was declared a great success.

Mental Health Association Requests Gifts for Patients

Again this year, the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association is asking for gifts for those confined to homes for special care in this district, and in the Ontario Hospital at Kingston.

In the past years, the response from many women's organizations in the area has been most gratifying and it is hoped that this may continue.

Gifts for both men and women are requested — anything which might give pleasure and comfort to an elderly person in a nursing home or to anyone in the Ontario Hospital. Donors are asked for unwrapped new articles (no sharp points or glass bottles). Items will be wrapped at a "Bee" by volunteers who visit these patients regularly.

If one prefers to send a donation, this would also be appreciated. A cheque or money order may be sent to Mrs. J. S. Fletcher, Chairman of the Christmas Gift Program, 31 Pine Street, Belleville.

Groups are asked to leave boxes at the home of Mrs. Fletcher and indicate the name and address of the organization's secretary so that the gifts may be acknowledged before December 12.

Last year during the Christmas season 567 gifts were distributed to 19 Homes for Special Care and 100 gifts to the Ontario Hospital at Kingston.

Club Activities

RYLSTONE FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS' CLUB

Mrs. Ellis Jones was hostess recently to the Rylstone Friendly Neighbors' Club for their Nov. meeting with an attendance of eight women and two children.

Mrs. Clarence Thomson, president opened the meeting and conducted the devotional period.

An invitation from Mrs. (Rev.) Milburn Cox was extended to the members to attend the Nov. meeting of Springbrook UCW to be held at the manse in Stirling.

The roll call was answered by a Bible verse and a period of silent prayer was observed in honor of the fallen in two world wars.

Arrangements were made for Christmas gifts for senior citizens in the community and for a gift for a recent bride.

Mrs. M. Jones conducted a Bible contest, Mrs. J. Spencer read a selection and Mrs. Clarence Thomson gave a piano solo.

The Dec. meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John Spencer and Mrs. Robert Spencer and the refreshment committee will be Mrs. A. Anderson and Mrs. Ellis Jones.

PASSION FOR GARDENING — Mrs. J. R. Smallwood, wife of the premier of Newfoundland, spends countless hours with her plants in the greenhouse adjacent to Newfoundland House, the Smallwood home 40 miles west of St. John's. Late-blooming roses outdoors in mid-October were obviously a great joy to her. The Smallwood's were married in November, 1925. (CP Photo)

Housewife Still Plays Important Role

By DORIS CLARK

When the survey - taker knocks on your door and asks your occupation, how do you reply? With an apologetic "Just a housewife" or a proud "Mother and homemaker"?

A woman may feel guilty about her status as a housewife because she is not doing a paid job. Yet no job is more productive or creative than that of raising a family! We need full-time mothers now more than ever, mothers who can concentrate on providing a solid home base for their children, as well as raising them to be responsible adults.

True, some women are more suited to a career than to life as a homemaker. Those who feel that they are better, more fulfilled people for being out in the business world should follow their star. But from others, who delight in the role of mother-homemaker, no apologies are called for!

After all, in this hectic Twentieth Century, it's more true than ever before that "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

* * *

Dear Doris: I eat too much. I'm too fat. You might think what a boring problem, but now it is one of the bigger problems in my life. I'm 19, interested in boys and who wants to look at a fat fanny? I'm five-foot-four and I weigh about 163.

My problem is partly hereditary. My mother's side of the family is all too fat and built stalky. The doctor gave me some pills. I got down to 149 at one time. I was proud of myself, but then I was disrupted because of a week's holiday and my momentum was at a very low ebb. I started to eat and I was just like a shark that had tasted blood. I had the stupid idea that if I ate a piece of pie, the rest of the whole day was spoiled so I might as well eat anyway.

The reason I'm eating so much is because I am restless at home and argue with Mom; and take out my depression by eating excessive amounts. — Hopeless

Dear Hopeless: With that attitude, you are beaten before you start. And you've got 33 pounds to go — to thin.

Think thin; and don't fall for the line that you are doomed to be fat because your forbears were fat. What you have taken on is their eating habits; and these you can change, especially as you are going away from home to school.

Keep apples handy, eat salads, cut out the rich sweet things which are just too handy at home. No second helpings; keep servings small. Even a few consistently small meals will shrink your stomach some and make food less desperately attractive.

Especially if you also throw yourself into something more interesting to do than eat.

Dear Doris: I am giving a pantry shower to my best friend and would like some helpful ideas as far as lunch, decorations and games are concerned. — Bridesmaid-To-Be.

Dear Bridesmaid: I am sending you the 10-cent leaflets Party Games and Readings Suitable for a Shower. Also some ideas for refreshments.

For decorations, use white streamers and honeycomb wedding bells. Over your bride-to-be's seat, suspend a wishing can, painted white with silver Christmas tree icicles pouring from the spout to stimulate a shower.

Decorate a plastic clothes basket with large white bows to hold the gifts.

Salmon Cakes for the Budget Watchers

By MARY MOORE

Affluent Society my foot! If TV professors could read some of my mail they would discover that readers want more budget recipes. Does that sound affluent?

This is for the non-affluent society or for those who just plain love salmon.

SALMON CAKES (3)

1 half-lb. can salmon (1 cup packed)
2 cups unseasoned mashed potatoes approximately (measure after mashing)
2 eggs
1 tbsp. chopped parsley (or bottled flakes)
½ tsp. instant chicken bouillon (optional)
½ tsp. salt
2 or 3 tbsps. margarine or butter

(NOTE: I scrubbed and cooked four medium-small potatoes in their skins. When they were tender I peeled them and put them in the beater bowl and beat and measured them. There were two cups. Potato measure does not have to be exact in this recipe.)

Into beater bowl measure salmon, hot boiled potatoes, eggs, parsley, instant bouillon (if used) and salt. Beat on "low" until thoroughly blended. Melt margarine or butter in large heavy frypan. Using large silver serving tablespoon eight uniform mounds into pan. Do not flatten them yet. Fry until bottoms are rich gold. Carefully turn over with lifter. Now give them a little pat to flatten slightly. Brown other side. Serve hot with a creamed vegetable such as carrots, cauliflower or peas.

I discovered a new way to cook potatoes that will please cooks who do not want last minute fussing when they are about to serve dinner.

HERBED POTATOES STEAMED IN BUTTER
(Serves 4)

4 med.-large potatoes
1-3 cup margarine
¼ tsp. savory
1 tsp. freeze-dried chives
1 tbsp. chopped parsley (or bottled flakes)
½ tsp. salt
Small shake garlic salt
Shake of pepper
Scrub, pare and cut potatoes into ¼" slices. Soak in cold water to cover 1 hr. Drain and dry. Melt margarine in top of double boiler and add dried potato slices and all remaining ingredients. Place over boiling water and cook covered 2 hrs., stirring 2 or 3 times. Wax but tender and delicious.

Fiancee's Pregnancy Upsets Parents

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is for "Bystanders," the parents who were mad because their son didn't tell them sooner that his fiancee was pregnant. They had sent out the wedding invitations, reserved the ballroom, ordered the flowers, engaged the caterers, etc.

The parents were told of the pregnancy two weeks before the wedding and they were furious. They felt they'd been tricked. The mother added, "By then, of course, it was too late to cancel anything. So the bride wore a tent and both families were humiliated."

I think the kids were smart. The same thing happened to us. When we told Ray's parents, his mother became hysterical. She screamed, "Oh my God!" My son has been going steady for two years! How could such a terrible thing happen in our family?"

When we told my folks, my father yelled, "I'm going to have the dirty rat arrested for rape!" When I tried to tell him I wasn't raped, he screamed, "Shut up. If I say you were raped, you were raped!"

They refused to let us get married in a church, so we eloped. It's been five years now and we have two lovely kids. But we will always feel that the false pride and mixed-up values of our parents kept us from having the wedding we both wanted. No need to comment — just print this. It might help bridge the — GENERATION GAP.

DEAR GAP: Here it is. Thanks for the bridge.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am still steaming over the letters from all those women who bore a ring-raped child or children. It seems every wife had the same gripe — her husband refuses to give her a helping hand, especially in his chosen field. The doctor-husband won't pay any attention to his sick kids and the carpenter husband won't fix the roof.

I thought you might enjoy a letter from a wife who has no complaints, in fact, my husband is the greatest guy in the world. He is a house painter and has painted our home inside and out every spring for the last 14 years. He also does all the plastering, carpentry and exhaust work, plumbing and electrical wiring. He figures out our income tax every year and knows a lot about law. He is my psychiatrist and my guidance counselor. I have a backache or stiff neck, he is just as good as any chiropractor. And wait, that's not all — he is teaching the boys to play the clarinet. Sigh me — LUCKY LADY.

DEAR LADY: Lucky is right — but I do hope, dear, if you ever need an operation you will call a surgeon.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm sure people of all ages read your column. Maybe someone out there can give me the help I am looking for.

I am a woman in my early 60's. All my life I've been plagued with excessive perspiration on my back. I've gone to at least six doctors and have received no relief. I've tried shots, pills, salves and lotions. It's been a waste of time and money. Perhaps somebody who reads this knows something that might help. I will try anything. — SOAKING WET IN PLAINFIELD.

DEAR SOAKING: You may have hyperhidosis. Your letter does not say when you last saw a doctor. There are some relatively new medications for this annoying problem and if you haven't soon a physician in the past five years, I urge you to do so.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I really have enjoyed going back to work - - - but I hate to come home every afternoon to a messy house. I don't have time to tidy things up in the morning. I usually get the beds made, but the living room is always cluttered."

Mother: "Let's give the house a quick pick-up and dust-up before we go to bed. We'll be able to leave things neat when we go to work and school, especially if everybody will make his own bed in the morning while I tidy up the kitchen."

Children in preschools and kindergartens soon learn automatically to return toys and equipment in the shelves before they leave for home. The same routine each night will insure a neater home and instill some desirable habits at the same time.

In the West Indies

A Hotel Manager With A Difference

OTTAWA (CP) — Marie Kingston is a hotel manager with a difference. She copes with everything from publicity to plumbing on a hideaway island in the West Indies.

She has also organized hotel service with staff who had never seen a bar, a set table or beds with sheets and pillow cases.

When she arrived in 1967 to help open Hotel Franzipani on Bequia in the Grenadine West Indies, there was no electricity—and there still is no hot water.

"But the customers don't get angry," the former Ottawa woman said during a recent visit to Canada. "There's something about the island—it's easy-going; nobody complains."

Non-complainers have included Canada's Governor-General Michener, who ate a whale steak "and enjoyed it very much," the Aga Khan and a number of British MPs.

To Miss Kingston's regret, though, the unsophisticated pace of the 4,000 persons on the island may soon be altered.

Signs of jet-set invasion include the house Princess Margaret is building on a neighboring island, the Onassis yacht Christina which has sailed by, and the sale of his home by Lord Avon, former British prime minister Sir Anthony Eden—token of the dying tranquillity.

Miss Kingston's path to her island home has been the route of an ambitious traveller. He started with an overseas trip right after graduation as an English major from the University of Toronto in 1961.

It has included some hair-raising adventures.

There was the wad of money she found on a path near the Oracle at Delphi in Greece. On spending it, she discovered it was counterfeit. The mistake resulted in her rapid eviction from the Hellenic haven.

Then there was the spear-throwing episode in Tanganyika when a tribe inside war on the truck in which she was riding. Unhurt but mystified, she was unable to find out the root of the antagonism.

Beginning in 1964, Miss Kingston spent 18 months in the Kalahari desert as part of an anthropological expedition studying bushmen.

The expedition, sponsored by Harvard University, was a far cry from another interesting job she got relaying messages on the Johannesburg stock exchange in South Africa.

After her African visit, Miss Kingston returned to Ottawa to work in the information office of the New Zealand high commission.

In 1966 she decided to join friends, a married couple who were opening the Bequia hotel.

"I was just there to help my friends get the place off the ground. I had no intention of staying, but I'm still there."

Canadians Hold Vital Posts at U.S. Manned Spacecraft Centre

HOUSTON (CP) — If James West was alive today he no doubt would be amazed at what those young dudes and foreigners have done to his 1,620-acre cow pasture.

Where cowboys rode and Texas longhorns roamed stands a $300,000,000 group of buildings where men plot courses to the stars.

Called the Manned Spacecraft Centre, it is located in suburban Clear Lake City where the J. W. West Ranch once stood. In this place the imaginative creations of the science-fiction novelists become practical ideas for young scientists and engineers opening up a new frontier.

Transplanted Canadians hold some of the most important positions among some 9,000 employees in the 33-building, eight-year-old spacecraft centre.

Across manicured lawns, with their shrubs and trees, is the nine-storey executive building, and this is where several of the VIP Canadians work.

In a corner office on the sixth floor, with an excellent view of the space centre's two duck ponds, is Owen Maynard, 46, a native of Sarnia, Ont., and chief of systems engineering for the Apollo spacecraft programs office.

Two floors down is the think tank where three ex-Torontonians of English birth talk about future space plans that make the Apollo program seem pale by comparison.

John Hodge and Dennis Fielder are advance program planning officials, and when they lock heads the subject is space shuttles, space stations, manned planetary stations and a Mars landing.

A few doors down the hall, his office unusually uncluttered because of his appointment only this month as requirements coordinator for manned interplanetary missions, is Maurice Jenkins, who will determine what is needed to put the plans of Hodge and Fielder into action.

Several buildings away is the Lunar Receiving Laboratory, which last week became the domain of another Canadian, Bryan Erb of Calgary.

As acting manager of the LRL, Erb will be in charge of the Apollo 12 astronauts when they return to earth and go into a 21-day quarantine period.

In building No. 7, the Life Systems Laboratory, are Dr. William Carpentier, a 33-year-old native of Cowichan, B.C., and Paul Rambaut, 29, of Montreal.

Dr. Carpentier is taking it easy during Apollo 12. He was the first to greet the Apollo 11 astronauts when they returned from the moon. He spent about three weeks in isolation with them and then accompanied them on a world tour as their personal physician.

Rambaut, a graduate in biochemistry from McGill University, is planning lunches for spacemen. He is already working on what astronauts will be eating in 1972 and beyond.

He admits his dehydrated and plastic-tube food is not too appetizing, but he theorizes that by the time men go to Mars the world over-population and food supply may make steak and eggs obsolete on earth as well.

Almost anywhere on the centre you may find Jim Chamberlin, a 54-year-old aeronautical engineer from Kamloops, B.C. Manager of design and analysis, he is the man who nursed project Gemini to maturity.

He is NASA's troubleshooter for a wide range of problems that crop up, and most officials here admit there are not many around who know more about the space program than he does.

Another key Canadian is Len Packham, 47, of Saskatoon, who heads a group that designed the Apollo telecommunications system. And there are many others too numerous to mention.

Most of the senior Canadians, with the exception of Dr. Carpentier and Rambaut, came to the space program via Toronto after the collapse of the Avro Arrow project in 1959.

While most have become American citizens, Jenkins remains thoroughly British, Erb says his only reason for not becoming American is laziness and the most staunch Canadian is Maynard, who is thinking of moving back to Canada.

They make up only a few, but an important few, of the thousands of Americans, Europeans and other foreign engineers and scientists at the space centre.

THE PICK OF Punch

Sharp Meets Nasser, Thinks Peace Hopes Dim

"I think they look disillusioned."

CAIRO (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp of Canada had a 90-minute meeting with Egyptian President Nasser Sunday and said afterwards that chances for a peaceful settlement of the bitter Arab-Israeli conflict at present are not bright.

"One would have to be a considerable optimist to think there had been much progress in that direction," Sharp told reporters.

The minister, here on the last stage of an on-the-spot examination of the Middle East conflict, said Nasser made it quite clear to me he preferred a peaceful solution."

But he admitted that in his talks with Nasser and with Israeli leaders earlier he met "a great deal of discouragement" on prospects for peace.

Sharp would not say definitely whether he would recommend changes in Canadian policy on the Middle East.

"My trip has clarified the nature of the difficulties that lie ahead," he said, "It was better not to have any illusions."

Asked about the possibility of Canadian forces helping in a new peace-keeping effort in the Middle East, Sharp said Canada has not been requested to furnish such troops.

"We hope that the time will come that a settlement is in sight, when we could offer forces for these purposes."

Sharp said he discussed with Nasser the latest American proposals for a Middle East settlement submitted to the Soviet Union in a series of bilateral talks in Washington.

Funeral for A River

TORONTO (CP) — About 20 persons gathered Sunday to pay last respects to Toronto's Don River.

The mourners gathered on the east bank of the river for a 40-minute funeral conducted by University of Toronto's Pollution Probe.

"Dearly beloved," intoned organizer Martin Daley, "we are gathered here to mourn the passing of our late, dear friend, the Don River."

In case there were lingering doubts as to the river's lifelessness, he said, experts warned 10 years ago that the lower Don was the most grossly polluted stream in Ontario.

Production Resumed by Inco at Sudbury

SUDBURY (CP) — Production has resumed at International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., after a 128-day strike that shut down the world's largest nickel supplier and caused a worldwide shortage.

Henry S. Wingate, Inco chairman, says production is not expected to reach its pre-strike peak level for about four months. Time will be needed to train the labor force and coordinate all operations.

Because pipelines and stocks in company and distributor plants must be filled, deliveries are not expected to reach peak levels for five months, he said.

Inco estimates that the strike caused a loss of 150,000,000 pounds of nickel production, 140,000,000 pounds of copper and $200,000,000 to Canadian exports.

The strike began July 10. It involved 17,000 hourly-paid workers—15,000 at Sudbury and 1,600 at Port Colborne, Ont., 28 miles southwest of Niagara Falls. All are members of the United Steelworkers of America.

The Sudbury workers began returning to work Friday at midnight after narrowly voting to accept a contract raising average wages to $3.99 an hour from $3.66 an hour over three years.

The Port Colborne workers will vote on ratification of the contract today.

"We believe that while settlement is clearly inflationary and very costly, it is the best resolution of the alternatives we faced," Mr. Wingate said.

"The terms of this settlement when extended to Port Colborne will increase employment costs for hourly workers in our Ontario division alone by some $100,000,000 over the life of the contract."

The strike cost the union as well. Gib Gilchrist, national Steelworkers' representative, said it cost the international union $7,000,000 in weekly benefits and continued medical and insurance coverage.

The contract took effect Saturday and expires July 31, 1972. The base wage will be increased in three steps to $3.37 from $2.59 for the lowest paid, to $3.94 from $3.06 for a driller, and to $4.99 from $3.82 for a top tradesman.

The company also assumed the full cost of medical, hospital and prescription drug plans, sickness, accident and life insurance, a winter vacation bonus and an increase in Sunday and shift premiums.

Olson Will Outline Farm Policies

TORONTO (CP) — Federal agriculture policies for the 1970-71 fiscal years will be outlined in the Commons in a few days, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said Sunday.

The policies, he said, would reflect his department's efforts to abide by the government's anti-inflationary guidelines.

The minister told delegates at the Canadian Farm Writers Federation annual convention that it will be the first time in history that agriculture policies will be outlined before legislation puts them into effect.

"We are going to get away from government by surprise."

By general public discussion before policies are decided, he hopes the department can come up with programs that are more acceptable to the people involved.

Major aspects of federal agriculture policy in the present parliamentary session will enable legislation to set up national marketing boards, amendments to the Canada Grains Act to make grain more competitive in world markets and a scheme to help marginal farmers to get out of the business of farming.

He would not predict how soon the government would be able to start assisting the retirement of uneconomical farmers, but said progress is being made.

Stanfield Assails PM's Quebec Views

MONTREAL (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield Sunday criticized Prime Minister Trudeau for what he called "facile interpretation, superficial analysis, and simplistic solutions" to Quebec's problems.

Speaking at a fund-raising dinner organized by the Quebec wing of the Progressive Conservative party, Mr. Stanfield said a great number of serious-minded Frenchspeaking Quebecers are worried about the survival of their language and culture.

"It certainly is not nothing towards removing their fears by insisting in a bull-headed fashion that the problem doesn't exist, or that it ought not to exist."

Separatists in the CBC and undesirable elements in the Company of Young Canadians were not the only factors responsible for unrest in the province.

The Opposition leader said the most serious problems are those of poverty, regional underdevelopment, unemployment and inflation.

"And all of these difficulties are certainly not the sole responsibility of the provincial government. The federal authorities have a part to play in their solution since they are playing an active part in their creation."

Merger of Russian, U.S. Satellites Urged

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union should merge their communications satellite systems into a controlled system of global communications open to all nations, a 19-country group of experts has agreed.

It conceded that "obstacles undoubtedly exist" to setting up such a system. But it found that the 68-country International system of the West and Russia's proposed seven-nation Intersputnik system could be merged without technical difficulties.

"Their orbital systems are complementary; their frequency plans can be co-ordinated; a single ground station can operate in either system, and their transmitting and receiving equipment can be adapted for operation in both systems," said the group's report, released Sunday.

"All nations should have access to a global, integrated communications satellite system," they said. "No political conditions should be applied to membership."

Dismal Turnout Costs Ellis Juniors 12-2 Embarrassment

By GREG McLEOD
Staff Sportswriter

OSHAWA — The Belleville Ellis Juniors just one week ago battled the Oshawa Crushmen to a 6-6 tie found out Saturday what a difference a day makes when you're shorthanded.

The Crushmen blasted them 12-2 in a hockey game that saw the Belleville players skating to a fiasco.

"We have to do something soon," said Belleville coach Floyd Crawford. "We have a couple of guys on this club that pick the games they want to attend. If they're not interested in the club why don't they get hell out."

Absent from the Ellis lineup were Dennis McCormack and John McConnell. McCormack was getting himself ready for exams that start this week and McConnell could not be contacted before the weekend actiog.

Teddy Waite sat out Saturday's game due to a injury obtained in Friday's action against the Trenton C.J.C. Hawks. Waite will probably miss tonight's game against Cobourg too. The absence of these players disrupted Crawford's three lines.

"All our younger nudger players, Danny Lupenette, John Mulvihill, Kevin Dockrill and Keith McConnell played well regardless of the score," commented Crawford. "Terry Meagher played one of his strongest skating games of the season. However it takes more than a handful of players to make a hockey club" added Crawford. If more of these guys think they are going to come out just when they feel like it, I got news for them."

"Our boys skated a lot better here than they did in Belleville last week," said Oshawa coach Bob Dionne. "I saw two teams altogether different in one week."

Oshawa who led 3-1 after a shabby first period exploded for seven goals in the middle frame. Belleville tired, going with just two complete lines and an extra on double shifts.

Belleville goal - scorers were Al Jarbeau and Terry Meagher. Oshawa's goal getters were Bill Lynd with the hat trick while Eric Howard, Jim Nesbitt and Bob Hotton had two goals each. Lee Paradise, Don Hodgin and Jim Robson accounted for the rest of the Crushmen scoring.

Paul Muldoon played goal for Belleville in the third period.

With the final period just minutes old, Belleville's Brian Coughlin was the recipient of a stick in the back when he skated by the Oshawa bench. Disturbed by this gesture, Coughlin dropped his gloves and invited the guilty party to step on the ice. When Coughlin refused to listen to the officials' warning, he was allotted a 10 minute misconduct.

Coughlin, still content to station himself by the Oshawa bench until he lured the hosts' player on the ice, was ejected from the game when he further refused the warning offered him and go to the penalty box.

There were 46 minutes in penalties alotted in the game with the locals getting the gate for 24 minutes and the game misconduct.

The Ellis Juniors next travel to Cobourg tonight for an 8 p.m. game against the Cougars.

Whip Woodstock 5-3

Mo-Hawks Take Two Periods to Wind Up

by MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Any resemblance between last year's third-period blowout artists and Sunday's Belleville Mo-Hawks is purely coincidental.

Watching the team that last year couldn't hold a lead with a lock down 3-1 going into the third period of yesterday's Memorial Arena game with Woodstock must have made at least some of the 550 paid customers wish they had stayed home and watched the football game.

But the locals came out shooting in the final 20 minutes, scored four unanswered goals, and stretched their Ontario Hockey Association Senior A unbeaten string to five games.

Their 5-3 comeback win was sweet revenge for the Mo-Hawks, whose 4-2 loss in Woodstock two Fridays ago made them the only Senior A club to lose to the cellar-dwelling A's this season.

The locals now sport a 5-5-2 record, and hold down fifth spot, two points behind Barrie and Orillia.

His teammates may have in alter Al Ferguson's nickname from "Fergy" to "The Hat."

The burly Trenton winger collected his third hat trick of the season to maintain his goal-a-game pace after 12 games. Lorne O'Donnell got the game-winner and playing-coach Davey Jones added a third-period insurance marker.

Captain Mac Westgate scored a pair for the A's, with Tom Black adding a single.

For two periods, fatigue looked like the dominant characteristic of the Mo-Hawk attack. A hard-earned scoreless tie in Barrie Friday night may have had an effect, along with over-confidence at playing the league's doormats.

Costly Belleville clearing mistakes figured in two Woodstock goals as the visitors peppered Mo-Hawk backup goalie Bob Moon with 26 shots in the first 40 minutes.

Moon, making his first regular season start, had to stop Westgate on a breakaway with the game only 30 seconds old. He had to be particularly sharp with the Mo-Hawks playing shorthanded for nearly four straight minutes.

Meanwhile, the Mo-Hawks couldn't buy a goal. Ferguson deked a defenceman and goalie Ken Kitching to knot the score 1-1 after only 58 seconds of the middle frame, but missed at least three other gilt-edged opportunities.

Midway through the period, George Godson skated through the entire Woodstock team, pulling Kitching out of the net, and watched his shot slide by the yawning goal.

Another Ferguson goal right off the bat in the third period seemed to give the Mo-Hawks life. Godson got the draw in Woodstock's end ever to Ferguson who put it behind Kitching before he could move.

Five minutes later, Ferguson fired a 20-foot wrist shot over Kitching's shoulder with the Mo-Hawks enjoying a man advantage.

With the A's Tom Black serving an interference minor just past the 13-minute mark, Bill Armour's pass sprung Lorne O'Donnell into the clear at the Woodstock blueline. O'Donnell skated in, faked to the right, and sprayed on the ice as he flipped the winning goal past Kitching.

Forechecking by linemates Gary Dalliday and Dave Jones earned the Mo-Hawks an insurance goal with less than three minutes remaining to play.

With Dalliday's help, Jones stole the puck in the Woodstock end and fired a rising 30 - footer over Kitching's shoulder from the left - side boards.

In all, the Mo-Hawks tested the Woodstock goalie 19 times in the final 20 minutes, and outshot the A's 44-32 over the game.

Defenceman Lou Kasowski played his best game of the season for the Mo-Hawks, dishing out a couple of bone - jarring checks, launching several threatening rushes and picking up his ninth assist.

"Weisner" Brown celebrated his 39th birthday by playing his sixth Mo-Hawk game, pairing with Greg Marchen on defence.

Belleville Mo-Hawks' Wayne McConnell breaks for the puck while Woodstock Athletics' defenceman Burk Parker (4) tries to intervene and goalie Ken Kitching looks on. Saturday night, players in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association turned their footwork talents to the dance-floor at a wind-up banquet. Shown here displaying the spoils of season's play are Belleville Parsons' manager Ken Marshall with the Pop Hellyer Trophy, Trenton Travellers' Alvin Gainforth with the Trenton Challenge Cup, league vice-president Bill Letford, Parsons' captain Don Fletcher and the Belleville Challenge Cup, and Trenton Travellers' Angus Cameron with the Bay of Quinte League Trophy.

Footwork Comes in Handy

Bay of Quinte Soccer Association players showed some fancy footwork on the dance - floor Saturday night as the league officially wound up 1969 activities with a banquet in the Officers' Mess of the Armories.

The Belleville Parsons and Trenton Travellers entries split the four major honors up for grabs this season in the seven - team league.

The Parsons — one of three city league entries — were officially presented with the Belleville Challenge Cup and the Pop Hellyer Trophy for finishing first in the season's last major soccer event, the Hellyer round - robin event in Trenton.

The travellers took home the Bay of Quinte League Trophy as top side in league play as well as the remaining challenge trophy, the Trenton Challenge Cup. Captain Angus "Gus" Cameron accepted on their behalf.

In addition the Parsons, hosts for the evening's festivities, presented individual awards to captain Don Fletcher (player of the year), Romano DiGenova (sportsman of the year), and 17-year-old Bill Lucas, most promising Parsons' player of the year.

Club sponsor Bruce Parsons presented team manager Ken Marshall with a special momento, as did the entire Parsons team.

Ethier Gets MVP Honors At Commercial Ball Banquet

The calibre of play in the 1969 Commercial Softball League was reflected in trophy presentations at Saturday night's annual league banquet.

Nobody walked away with league titles this year — only six points separated pennant winning Point Anne Cement men and City Hotel's fourth place contenders at the end of the seven-team loop's 21 game schedule. And Ellis Juniors needed a full seven games to win the final play-off series against City Hotel.

And nobody walked off with all the silverware Saturday night.

Coach Harold Reid accepted the Black Diamond Trophy for the city softball championship, and Point Anne assistant coach Jim Hunter accepted the O'Connor Jewel Box Trophy for the Cementmen's pennant win.

Hard-throwing Bobby Ethier was awarded the Barrage Memorial Trophy, presented annually by Corby's Distillery to the league's most valuable player.

After being allowed to re-enter the league from senior softball ranks, Ethier led Commercial League pitchers in strikeouts (170), and, handling virtually all the hurling chores for City, threw the Hotelmen right into the league finals.

Point Anne's Rick Roseboush was the 1968 recipient of the Gerald "Bucky" Ethier Memorial Trophy for gentlemanly and sportsmanlike play.

Pitcher Jamie Hunter's 11-2 regular-schedule record for Point Anne earned him the George Simpson Trophy as the Commercial League's top hurler.

Belvedere Hotel — who dabbled from the 1968 league-pennant to the league cellar this summer, salvaged some glory when Lyle Wannamaker was presented the league's batting championship by president Bill Vallance. Wannamaker's .420 ... batters with 48 at bats or more.

Moe Huddleson was adjudged to be the league's best man in black for 1969, and won the Cleo Colling Memorial award as outstanding umpire.

More than 150 attended Saturday night's banquet, and danced to the music of Frank Howard's Combo following a sit - down turkey - plate supper.

Arms and the Men

Pitchers Bob Ethier (second left) and Jamie Hunter compare the biceps that won them awards as outstanding players at Saturday night's annual Commercial Softball League banquet. Ethier won the league's most valuable player award for his pitching prowess for City Hotel. Hunter's 11-2 record for Point Anne's pennan-winners earned him outstanding pitcher distinction. Looking on are (left) top league batter Lyle Wannamaker (.420) and Rick Rosebush, the Commercial League's most sportsmanlike competitor of 1969.

Esposito Gives Habs Second Thoughts on Draft

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal Canadiens could be excused today if they had second thoughts about leaving Tony Esposito unprotected in last summer's National Hockey League draft.

The 26-year-old goaltender from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., shut out the Canadiens for a second time this season Sunday night to give Chicago Black Hawks their sixth straight victory.

A goal by Stan Mikita with less than three minutes remaining gave the Hawks the 1-0 victory which dropped the Canadiens out of the East Division lead.

New York Rangers moved ahead of Montreal with a 4-2 win over St. Louis Blues while Boston Bruins downed Los Angeles Kings 7-4 in other Sunday action.

Saturday, Montreal maintained its three-year hex on the Bruins win a 3-2 victory in St. Louis while the Rangers edged Boston 6-5. Toronto Maple Leafs beat Philadelphia Flyers 4-2, Chicago edged Oakland Seals 3-2, Pittsburgh Penguins whipped Los Angeles 3-1 and Minnesota North Stars gained a 2-2 tie with Detroit Red Wings.

Esposito, who couldn't earn a regular spot with the Canadiens, was picked up by Chicago in the draft and since has taken the lead in the goaltending race.

The 18,666 fans at Chicago Sunday saw him register his third shutout of the season. His first came in a 5-0 victory over the Canadiens three weeks ago in Montreal and the second in a 9-0 win over Toronto in Chicago last weekend.

Gerry Pinder, who toiled for Canada's national team for the last two seasons, was first credited with beating Montreal goalie Rogatien Vachon for the Chicago score. But the officials changed their mind half an hour after the game and gave Mikita the goal and Pinder an assist.

Boston's Bobby Orr assisted on four goals in the Bruins victory before 14,831 home fans. The four assists added to two goals scored in the Saturday loss to New York increased Orr's scoring total to 29 points. He leads the league with New York's Phil Goyette trailing on 25 points.

Fred Stanfield with two and Garnet Bailey, Eddie Westfall, Ken Hodge, Dallas Smith and Phil Esposito scored for the Bruins. Esposito, older brother of Tony, also picked up an assist to move into the top 10 scoring list with a total 14 points.

Bob Wall, Ross Lonsberry, Bryan Campbell and Skip Krake scored for the Kings who dropped their 10th loss in 13 games.

Arnie Brown scored two goals and assisted on another by Rod Gilbert as the Rangers handed the Blues their sixth loss against six wins this season.

Brad Park got the other New York goal before 17,250 home fans.

Red Berenson picked up his ninth goal of the season and Frank St. Marseille his sixth for St. Louis.

* * *

The Blues' loss Saturday left them still the only team winless against the Canadiens. The five other teams from the West Division which joined the league in 1967 have beaten the defending Stanley Cup champions at least once while the Blues now have a record of 17 losses and four ties in regular season and playoff action with Montreal.

The Canadiens took a 2-0 lead on goals by Mickey Redmond and Bobby Rousseau but Berenson and St. Marseille tied it up before 17,631 home fans. Yvan Cournoyer scored the winner.

Right winger Ron Ellis ended a seven-period scoring drought for Toronto and brought the 16,485 Toronto fans to their feet with his eighth goal of the season in the second period. He scored again in the third period to tie the game before Mike Walton got the winner. Bob Pulford scored after Philadelphia pulled goalie Bernie Parent from the net in the last minute.

Goalie Marv Edwards went all the way for the Toronto victory.

Jean-Guy Gendron and Rosaire Paiement scored for the Flyers.

The win ended a four-game losing streak for Toronto which included 9-0 and 3-0 losses in the last two games.

The Rangers ended Boston's record of 25 games undefeated on home ice.

Bill Fairbairn's second goal of the night was the winner for New York. Walt Tkaczuk also scored twice before the 14,831 Boston fans while Rod Selling and Dave Balon collected single goals.

Orr scored twice with Stanfield, Hodge and Johnny Bucyk getting the other Boston goals.

Russians Refuse To Ratify Schedule

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada, beset by difficulties since it undertook to play host for the 1970 world hockey championships, today faces another problem—the possible withdrawal of the Soviet Union from the event.

The Soviet delegation Sunday threw the final session of a two-day meeting of the International Ice Hockey Federation's directorate into an uproar when it refused to ratify the schedule of games drawn up by Canada for the tournament.

Vancouver's Fred Page, North American president of the IIHF and chairman of the meetings here, was irate over the development and said the "scheduling talk could have gone on for the next few weeks."

The Soviets objected that the seven-time world champion Soviet squad is expected to play on successive days on three occasions during the tournament.

The 1970 event is equally split between Montreal and Winnipeg With Montreal acting as host for games from March 12 to 20 and the second half scheduled March 22-29 in the Manitoba capital.

However, Page was quick to point out that other participating teams face the same problem as the Russians.

"It is the task of the host federation to supply the schedule and as long as it does not give advantage to any one team it is usually accepted after some adjustment."

Page said that while there was no vote, the schedule was accepted by the majority.

Page said a resolution setting Dec. 1 as a deadline for entries has been extended until Dec. 8 to allow the Russian delegation to go back and report its decision to the Soviet federation.

"They will let us know by Dec. 8 whether . . . they will participate," Page said. "If the Soviets withdraw, the United States will move up from Pool B and if another country doesn't come in they will probably have to call a general meeting of the IIHF congress."

Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said it the Russians and Czechs weren't coming "we'd have to consider packing it up."

Argos Lead Eastern Final After Giving Jackson Big Rush

TORONTO (CP) — "Rush Jackson," read the sign in the stands at Canadian National Exhibition Stadium Sunday and Toronto Argonauts complied.

"We plugged up all the holes and our secondary took care of the receivers," said Ed Harrington after he and his teammates defeated Russ Jackson and the Ottawa Rough Riders 22-14 in the first game of the two-game, total-point Eastern Football Conference final.

Harrington, a defensive end, said the Argos knew Jackson would take advantage of any weak link in the Toronto defence.

So, they went out to get Jackson in the opening quarter, gave up 36 yards in penalties and 18 points, while Ottawa outgained them 65 yards to minus one, including 44 yards on three Jackson passes.

But the rush appeared to be paying off and Toronto kept the Ottawa quarterback, who completed three more passes for 52 yards but could direct his club to only a single point in the second quarter.

Jackson was unable in complete a single pass in the second half.

Toronto got two touchdowns from Bobby Taylor and another from quarterback Tom Wilkinson. Place-kicker Tom Johansen kicked one convert and a single and Toronto scored its other two points on a safety touch when Jackson was tackled in his own end zone.

Jackson scored Ottawa's only touchdown during his highflying first quarter, while Don Sutherin kicked two field goals and two singles.

The victory was the first for the Argos over Ottawa in four games this season and gave Toronto an eight-point lead going into the second game of the series at Ottawa next Saturday.

Ottawa got 20 first downs to Toronto's 12 and outrushed the Argos 228 to 155. Jackson's six completions in 19 attempts gave the Riders 91 yards in the air, while Wilkinson's nine completions, including two for touchdowns, gained the Argos 164 yards.

The key play of the game came early in the second quarter, however, with Ottawa on the Toronto five-yard line. The Toronto defence drove the Riders back to the nine on the first down, back to the 14 on the second and Sutherin's attempted field goal went wide for a single.

The touchdown would have given the Riders a 15-0 lead.

After that, the Toronto defence held Jackson and Wilkinson began to pick the Ottawa defenders apart with his passing and confuse them with his running.

He threw a touchdown pass to Taylor in the end zone late in the first half, connected with Taylor early in the third quarter, and sneaked through the middle for an eight-yard touchdown late in the game while Ottawa was deep in the end zone covering the receivers.

Early in the series that led to Toronto's third touchdown, Wilkinson was at midfield with second down and 20 yards to go. He looked for a receiver, saw them all covered and ran for the first down himself.

The Rough Riders must win next Saturday's game by at least nine points in order to win the series and go on to the Grey Cup against the Western Conference winner at Montreal Nov. 30.

Ottawa won the Grey Cup against Calgary Stampeders last season and the Argonauts last year.

Stamps' Passing Not Enough

REGINA (CP) — A well-balanced offence carried Saskatchewan Roughriders to a 17-11 victory Saturday over Calgary Stampeders in the first game of the best-of-three Western Football Conference final.

Saskatchewan gained 125 yards on the ground and 162 through the air while Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling continued to rely on his aerial game, going 608 yards on 25 of 41 passes. Calgary gained only 47 yards rushing.

It was a familiar pattern, established in regular season play —the Roughriders rushed for a season total of 2,478 yards and passed for 3,335, beating Calgary in their three encounters. The Stampeders rushed only 1,927 yards compared with the 3,748 they gained in passing.

The weakness in the Calgary ground game was particularly evident when the Roughriders held the Stampeders at the one-yard line on three successive tries in the second quarter to stand that brought the 15,855 partisan spectators roaring to their feet.

Place-kicker Jack Abendschan connected for three field goals. He also kicked a single on a wide field goal attempt a converted Saskatchewan's only touchdown—a 16-yard run by halfback Bobby Thompson in the fourth quarter.

The Stampeders got their only touchdown from Rudy Linterman in the third quarter when he ran 65 yards on a pass from Keeling, faking out three Roughriders en route. Larry Robinson added a field goal, a convert and a single.

The teams were tied 3-3 after the first quarter, Saskatchewan was ahead 9-4 after the second and Calgary had an 11-9 edge after the third.

Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys said he was impressed by Keeling's performance, but that his tight defensive unit, despite Calgary's 442 yards net offence, was able to stop the Stampeders when necessary.

Jim Duncan of Calgary said there should have been a call in the second quarter when Bob Kosid intercepted a Calgary pass at the Saskatchewan 15-yard line and returned it 84 yards.

Gerry Shaw, the intended receiver, appeared to ground Kosid after the interception, but it was not called. The run set up one of Abendschan's field goals.

Duncan said the Ice went "ruined the whole game. . . ."

There was only one injury in the game—to Saskatchewan's Gord Barwell.

Keys said the extent of the shoulder injury was not known.

Middle linebacker Wayne Harris of Calgary, who did not play Saturday because of a knee injury, is expected to be back for the second game.

Ski-Doo is your number one choice in snowmobiles
Come see the 1970 reasons why

Number one in sales
Ski-Doo has introduced more people to the sport of snowmobiling than any other make. That's because Ski-Doo invented snowmobiling. And ever since. Of the 200,000 sold on a snowfield, Ski-Doo has been the undisputed snowmobile leader.
Last year alone, Ski-Doo dealers sold over 114,000 models. That's more than the next six manufacturers combined. There are many reasons for Ski-Doo's great sales success. And a better choice of models is certainly one of them.

Number one in selection
For 1970, Ski-Doo offers five exciting series — each with a totally different personality. We've got a trail one to match your own. If it's luxury you're after, there's Ski-Doo Nordic.* If it's sporty action you're itching for, there's Ski-Doo Olympique. If you want a Ski-Doo that's big, comfortable and fun to drive, there's the twin-track Invader.* If you're looking for speed and power, there's Ski-Doo T'NT.* And if price is on your mind, there's the Ski-Doo 12'2. It's a so low priced, a lot of people are buying two and three.

Number one in sizzle
Every one of our snowmobiles is powered by the world famous Rotax engine — designed exclusively for Ski-Doo. No other engine delivers more efficient power for climbing, towing, just plain running around. And no other gets better, or as speedy — on the less expensive fuels. And this year, our Rotax engines are more dependable. They're bigger in size, with more c.c's, but deliver the same horsepower as before for the most trouble-free performance in snowmobile history.

Number one in service
Your Ski-Doo dealer is a good guy to know. Not just because he sells the number one snowmobile. But because he can offer better service after the sale. He's a pro with know-how, ready to give you qualified repair service — whenever you need it. He's the man who offers a free Ski-Doo owner's course. He's the one you can count on for parts and service warranty that's the best in the business. And he's also the one person in town who can tell you where to find all the best snowmobiling trails. If you want the number one choice in snowmobiles, in high-fashion winter sportswear and accessories, see your Ski-Doo dealer. He'll show you the 1970 reasons why you go Ski-Doo better when you go Ski-Doo.
North America's number one snowmobile go one better go ski-doo

'Philip for President' Decide Voters in Daily Mirror Poll

LONDON (CP) — Prince Philip edges out Prime Minister Wilson as the people's choice for president if Britain were to become a republic.

The Queen's husband has been embroiled in more controversy lately and Her Majesty's money problems have come to the fore. The Daily Mirror, mass-circulation tabloid, commissioned an opinion poll on the role of the monarchy and prints results today.

About nine out of 10 of those polled would retain the monarchy and believe that royalty will survive in its present form during their lifetimes and that the Queen and Prince Philip are of real value to Britain.

Asked to name their choice for the first elected president should Britain become a republic, 13 per cent named Philip and 11 per cent chose Labor's Wilson.

There was a third-choice tie at six per cent between Enoch Powell, Conservative party controversialist, and Earl Mountbatten, uncle of Prince Philip.

Running behind these were Conservative leader Edward Heath (five per cent), former Conservative prime minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home (four) and Prince Charles, the Prince of Wales (three).

Eleven per cent chose other figures, and 41 per cent had no opinion.

Commenting on Prince Philip, The Mirror observes that people either like or loathe him.

"The truth is," the paper adds, "that Prince Philip sends blood pressure and eyebrows up with a verbal flourish. He also wins countless friends with his no-nonsense approach."

He was in the news again Sunday when weekend newspapers reported that he had made derogatory remarks about the staging of Tom Jones, a British pop idol, while the prince was talking to a group of businessmen last week.

Apparently it was his reluctance to be quoted on the point that caused him to have a run-in after the meeting with two Press Association reporters of whose presence he was unaware.

Just before the businessmen's lunch before the businessmen's incident, Philip stirred up a public furore here with United States television interviews in which he spoke of the money troubles of British royalty and suggested jocularly that the Royal Family might have to move out of Buckingham Palace.

Wilson was impelled to take the best off the issue by making a statement in the Commons promising a review of the royal finances after the next general election.

Meanwhile, money to help the Queen make ends meet is pouring into Buckingham Palace and British embassies around the world, but she is sending it all back.

The amounts have been small —between five shillings (65 cents) and £1 ($3). Officials refuse to reveal the total amount.

"The Queen has made a rule that she does not accept gifts from strangers, although obviously she is touched by the spirit in which they were given," a palace spokesman said.

Sato Flies to U.S.

Japanese PM Leaves Despite Rioters

TOKYO (AP) — While an estimated 700,000 students and workers demonstrated throughout Japan against his trip, Prime Minister Eisaku Sato left for Washington today for talks with President Nixon on the return of Okinawa to Japan.

The biggest police turnout in memory kept leftists from making good on their threat to prevent Sato's departure.

Some 22,000 riot police and plainclothesmen guarded the roads to Tokyo's international airport. Another 3,000 men were deployed throughout the terminal building.

Police reported no incidents at the rainswept airport. But they arrested 168 students trying to reach the airport.

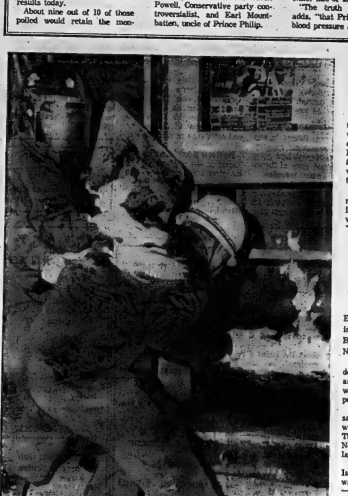
Sunday night, thousands of radicals had hurled gasoline bombs and hatliel police in riots near the airport and other sections of Tokyo. Police arrested 1,000.

Authorities also cancelled 101 domestic flights during the morning before Sato's departure to keep the airport clear of possible troublemakers.

Japanese foreign ministry officials said Sato and Nixon would deal chiefly with storage of nuclear weapns at U.S. bases on Okinawa and with use of the base by B-52 bombers after the island is returned to Japan.

The United States is reported to have agreed to return Okinawa and the other islands of the Ryukyu archipelago by 1972. But the U.S. government considers its bases on the island vital to its defence plans for Vietnam and other Asian nations.

Japanese officials said Sato would ask Nixon to remove all nuclear weapons and B-52s from Okinawa and put the American bases on the island on the same status as U.S. bases in Japan. This would require the United States to consult the Japanese government before launching any combat strikes from them.



Flames of Dissent

Lake Erie Storm Unloads Well Over Foot of Snow

BUFFALO (AP) — A Lake Erie storm dumped up to 18 inches of snow on parts of the Buffalo-Niagara Falls area of New York state Sunday.

Police blamed two traffic deaths on icy roads, and Niagara Falls International Airport was closed for 10 hours after reporting one foot of snow.

Erie County deputy sheriffs said Buffalo's northern suburbs were hardest hit by the storm. They said about 18 inches fell in North Buffalo and on Grand Island.

Deputies said snow on Grand Island, in the Niagara River, was so heavy all cars were ordered off the roads. They said drivers had no more than 10 feet of visibility.

Sections away from the lake reported only light snow.

The U.S. weather bureau at Greater Buffalo International Airport said it had only 2.7 inches of snow. That's about seven miles from Lake Erie.

All roads were reported plowed by Sunday night as skies cleared and temperatures rose to the mid-30s.

SIMCOE (CP) — Police reported several minor accidents Saturday as the first big winter storm of the year dumped 11 inches of snow on Norfolk County in southern Ontario.

The local weather office said the snowfall, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., was a record for the month of November in the area.

Police said several cars alighted into ditches along Highways 3 and 24 as wind-blown snow reduced visibility to under 200 feet at times.

Temperatures remained above freezing throughout the day.

Weather officials said the storm resulted from a low-pressure area centred northeast of the Great Lakes, combined with high winds off Lake Erie.

Earth Plants Grow Quickly After Moon Soil Applied

HOUSTON (AP) — There may be some trace mineral in moon soil that aids the growth of earthly plants, a scientist at the U.S. Manned Spacecraft Centre here says.

Dr. Charles Walkinshaw, a plant pathologist at the Lunar Receiving Laboratory where tests were conducted with moon soil brought back by Apollo 11, said some primitive earth plants, such as liverwort and moss, did well when sprinkled with moon dust.

Some of the specimens, he said, showed greatly when exposed to the lunar soil. But Dr. Walkinshaw said this does not mean the lunar soil is more fertile than earth soil.

Before the lunar soil was added, the specimens were growing in "a very bland medium," he said, and would have improved with the addition of the minerals contained in moon soil, no matter where the minerals came from.

But Dr. Walkinshaw said the importance of the test is proof the lunar soil is not toxic to earth plants and that moon soil may have some trace element, as yet undetermined, that is useful to plants.

He noted that little is known about trace elements and the need plants have for them.

The botanist also noted the tests proved plants will grow in lunar soil with the addition of needed chemicals. This may be significant, he said, should man ever try to establish bases on the moon.

VISIT SCHOOL

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — The marked figures massing the corridors at Lafayette's new Jefferson high school at night are causing school officials some concern. They're raccoons, apparently enticed inside last week by construction workers' lunchbox leftovers. Now they're living and multiplying above the false ceiling, chewing on wire and pipes, and staining the ceiling tile.

Israeli Papers Urge Reprisal For Egyptian Frogmen's Raid

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli newspapers today angrily demanded swift retribution for an attack by Egyptian frogmen on Israeli ships in the southern Israeli port of Eilat.

Cairo indicated the frogmen took off from the Jordanian port of Aqaba, which faces Elath across three miles of the Gulf of Aqaba.

"Jordan is responsible for the acts committed from its territory, and it could not have been unaware of plans for this one," said the semi-official paper Davar.

The last time Elath was hit—by Arab rockets seven months ago—Israel retaliated with an air raid on Aqaba.

"Aqaba, Jordan's only sea outlet, could be completely paralyzed without a single Israeli soldier crossing the frontier," said the English-language Jerusalem Post, "and there is nothing the Jordanians could do to prevent this from happening."

"It is unthinkable that Israel will not repay the attackers with a strong hand," commented Haaretz.

The papers mentioned the "gentleman's agreement" between Israel and Jordan whereby the two ports are off limits to attack because of their mutual vulnerability.

"It must be made clear to the Jordanians that what goes for Aqaba goes for Elath," said Haaretz.

Israel's cabinet planned a special session today, presumably to approve plans for retaliatory action.

Israeli military authorities at first thought Sunday's raid was staged by Arab guerrillas based in Jordan. But Cairo took the credit, claiming the "destruction and sinking" of three ships. Cairo spokesmen said the frogmen were Egyptian regulars dropped near the port by aircraft Sunday morning and that they returned safely to Egyptian territory after accomplishing "their heroic mission successfully."

Israeli officials said five football-sized holes were blown in the hulls of two ships.

Spokesmen in Tel Aviv said the ships were the 1,000-ton coaster Hey Daroma and the 13,700-ton freighter Dalia. The Hey Daroma was sometimes and had to be beached when it started sinking. The Dalia reported three holes, but damage was described as light and it remained at its anchorage. Both ships were removed without casualties.

The Cairo statement claimed the frogmen were enemy vessels "which took part in the recent assault against our Suez Gulf ports. These ships were equipped to be used for military operations . . . These ships had carried enemy troops to attack our coastal positions."

Israeli spokesman said the Hey Daroma was sometimes used to carry military supplies.

On other fronts, Israeli jets penetrated three miles into Jordanian territory in Sunday and strafe Jordanian army positions along the Jordan River. Military sources said the air raid followed two artillery duels across the river. Spokesmen in Amman said eight civilians were wounded.

In Gaza City, security forces reported they arrested one of the suspected Gaza Strip, Meitiv was not hurt.

Queen's Professor Says Humane Societies Kill Needed Animals

TORONTO (CP) — Humane societies in Ontario are denying medical researchers a solution to their critical shortage of experimental animals by killing thousands of unwanted animals every year, a Queen's University professor said Saturday.

Dr. Duncan Sinclair, professor of physiology at Queen's faculty of medicine in Kingston, said "the alternatives will be pretty serious" if a bill designed to increase the supply of research animals is scuttled.

Addressing an ad-hoc committee of Ontario university students formed to counter a drive by the Ontario Humane Society to kill Bill 194, Dr. Sinclair said research will cost more and be restricted if the bill is not cleared by the legislature.

He told the committee, mostly medical students from the University of Ottawa, Queen's and the University of Toronto, that the animals killed by humane societies every year are not wanted as domestic pets.

Dr. Sinclair said universities have been experiencing a shortage of research animals for several years.

"We had to cancel our first two labs just over two weeks ago," he said.

Employment News

By J. R. Staveley
Manpower Counsellor

In recent months there has been considerable publicity with regard to the number of newly landed immigrants, of varying nationalities, coming to the Bay of Quinte area with the purpose of establishing themselves as Canadians in our community.

Locally there is an expanding economy which is becoming more diverse, to the advantage of the labor force. At the same time there are the beneficia derived from the skills and cultures from our new Canadians. The Federal Department of Manpower and Immigration has organized a program to encourage a greater awareness of the contributions of immigrants to Canada's economic and cultural life, which will be conducted at this year's Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, Toronto, now underway.

With the object of easing the adaptation of immigrants to life in Canada, the Department has created an exhibit entitled "What is a Canadian?" It focuses attention on the economic and cultural benefits Canada has gained from more than a century of immigration.

Visitors to the display will see the National Film Board production "20 Million Canadians", which traces the history of immigration from its earliest days.

Since 1946, Canada has received more than three million immigrants, among them 1.6 million persons who intended to enter the working force immediately. More than a quarter of a million professional, technical and managerial personnel have settled in Canada since the end of the second world war. It is a little known fact that every year immigrants transfer to Canada, or bring with them, one quarter to one billion dollars in cash, securities and other liquid assets.

Representatives of a variety of Toronto-area ethnic groups, under the co-ordination of the Canadian Folk Arts Council, will assist officers of the Department in focusing attention on the achievements of nine representative groups of Canadians.

Visitors to "The Royal" will be able to discuss all aspects of immigration with the staff, see the film production "Twenty Million Canadians" and obtain the Centennial publication "The Canadians Family Tree." This book gives an extensive account of the growth of ethnic groups and their culture in Canada during its first century of confederation.

Should the program will bring home the fact that, at one time or another, all of us, or our forefathers, were New Canadians.

Horticulturists Enjoy Pictures

"I walked in a garden" was the refrain that came softly to their ears as the audience walked, in spirit, through many gardens.

They were filled with admiration for such beauty and with a feeling of awe in its presence, when Mrs. M. McPiggin of Codrington shared with the Belleville Horticultural Society her own pictures of gardens that she visited this past summer.

There were scenes taken in the Keukenhof Bulb Garden in Holland and in the gardens of Chelsea, Liverpool and Wisley, in England, and, surprisingly, in the Chester Zoo where roses bloomed profusely.

What a pleasure it was to see the narrow canals, the cobbled streets and the yellow pansies in the window boxes of Amsterdam. The azaleas, rhododendrons, roses and blue-bells of England and the unique green of those lawns and that foliage were viewed while music and bird songs were heard. Flower arrangements in the flower shops were also included.

The pictures needed little explanation and the background music was inspirational and, "The Great Thou Art" played as the host seemed to be leaving England in the sunset as a fitting conclusion.

Mrs. McFiggin visited the Belleville Rose Festival in 1968 and the pictures she took there won most of the awards in that allde contest. She is a member of the Mount Hertl. cultural Society and belongs to two camera clubs.

She was introduced by Mr. Robert M. Patterson and thanked by Mr. Lawrence Kells.

Allan W. Dunfield graduated October 3 at the convocation exercises held at Guelph University. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree and now is attending Windsor University Faculty of Law.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Anxiety State Described Vividly by Young Woman

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Often you have mentioned in your column a condition called an "anxiety state." Will you please explain? — Mrs. M.

Comment: Sometimes a case history of a condition, expressed in the patient's own words, is more revealing than a scientific explanation. Here, for example, is such a letter:

I hope you will listen to my problem. I do need help, since each day I become more depressed with my situation.

I am only 27 years old. I have three wonderful boys and a husband who is my life. I come from a very loving family. Up until a year ago I was an extremely fun-loving person.

In August of 1968 I had a bad experience. I passed out in a supermarket and it was thought I was having a heart attack. This was not a surprising possibility since heart problems are very predominant in our family.

I was rushed to the hospital and the doctor said it was just a matter of hyperventilation. He also suspected that I was undernourished because I was on a diet and taking diet pills. I had been eating little for about two weeks. I was released with a paper b a g to help overcome my unnatural breathing during hyperventilation and given a tranquilizer.

Since then I've felt worse. For weeks afterwards I was continually feeling faint and extremely sick to my stomach. I had blood tests for anemia, chest X-rays and electrocardiograms. Everything was normal.

I continued to feel dizzy and sick. I was sent to a neurologist who said I didn't need a brainwave test. Again he said it was "nerves." And again tranquilizers!

I gave up smoking last year and as occasional glass of wine is the extent of my alcoholic indulgence. I have upset stomach, diarrhea, dizziness and light-headed feelings. Frequently have pain going from my shoulder blade around under my left breast. I know I have an extreme anxiety problem since I can't even go into a car now without hyperventilation.

My husband has been patient and loving about this but we are losing more and more fun - times together because of my fears about going out and being around people, and the fear of becoming ill again in public. I've asked my doctors if I need to see a psychiatrist. They say "no."

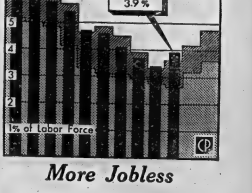
I don't know where to turn now for help. I cannot live like this much longer. I become more and more depressed and full of fear as the days go by. I'm beginning to feel old for my age. Where or what do I do next to feel "great" again? — Mrs. C.

Comment: This is a fairly good description of anxiety state. It is so life-depleting that some patients have told me they'd gladly sacrifice an arm or leg if they could feel "normal" again.

I suggest you choose one doctor of the many you have consulted whom you feel you can "lean on" during your anxiety spells.

Also, I ask this! Have you had a blood sugar tolerance test? I have seen many anxious patients whose underlying (low blood sugar). When this was satisfactorily treated, it helped overcome their anxiety and other complaints.

Millions of Americans suffer silently from anxiety state. Even their families do not recognize the degree of suffering they undergo. They deserve all the help and understanding they can get.



More Jobless

Ferguson Scores in Frustrating Oshawa Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dan Bouchard may have trouble with the English language, but the transplant from Sorel, Que., has Oshawa Generals talking to themselves.

And what the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A club is saying is:

"What do you have to do to win?"

Oshawa, groping to come up with its first victory in 12 tries, poured @ shots at Bouchard, in goal for London Knights, compared with 29 London fired on Oshawa.

The result—a 5-5 tie.

In the third period alone, Bouchard kicked out 22 shots.

Bouchard, after difficulty with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, moved to the Knights from Sorel Black Hawks of the Quebec Junior League so he could improve his English in hopes of attracting a scholarship to a United States college.

Oshawa held a 3-0 first-period lead but London had come back to lead 5-3 midway through the third.

Bob Stewart, George Ferguson, Tom Simpson, Bob Peiler and Phil Persia shared the Oshawa scoring. Clyde Simon and Brian Chinnick led London with two each and Darryl Sittler got one.

Rookie Jim Mahon of Parry Sound had his first three-goal night in Junior A competition as he led Peterborough Petes to a 6-4 victory over Montreal Junior Canadiens. Mickey Donaldson scored twice and single goals came from Dennis Patterson, Rick MacLeish, Danny Gloor and Chris Meloff. Norm Gratton, Dick Martin, Hartland Monahan and Camille Lapierre scored for Montreal.

St. Catharines Black Hawks registered their 19th victory in 21 games and snapped a Kitchener Rangers win streak at four as they rolled to a 6-3 decision.

Doug Robitaille, Dennis Glannini and Bob McKay scored early for the Hawks before Bloom potted two and Pierre Guite got one. Bill Barber, Tom Cassidy and Dave Tessman scored for Kitchener.

Hamilton Red Wings broke a seven-game losing streak with a 7-3 victory over Ottawa '67s as the last-place Wings exploded for three goals within a minute and 36 seconds.

The big penalty spree of the Sunday action came at Oshawa where referee Al Stoll assessed 21 minutes and seven majors for fighting.

Bennett Rink Wins Spiel

All new male members of the Quinte Curling club should be right in the swing of things after the President's Bonspiel held at the Quinte Curling Club Saturday.

"The Bonspiel was organized mainly to introduce new members and to give them a taste of bonspieling," said club president Art Bannon.

The rink of skip Doug Bennett, East Cousins, Jim Dallas and John Brown captured first prize honors in the 16 rinks participating in Saturday's events. Skip Charles Cox, New Burrows, Al Wasnecoit and Tom Landers received runner - up recognition. The rink of skip Ev Gowsell, Pat Houston, Ken Pinder and Goldie Livingston placed third.

The bonspiel was arranged by the club executives Art Bannon and Dr. Findlay McCorquodale with 48 of the registered 180 curlers of the club represented.

"Everyone had a marvelous time," said the executive's Bob Owen. "The event was well attended."

The ladies of the club put on a luncheon during the day's competition with a dinner to round things off. "The women should be congratulated for their efforts," said Bannon. "The food was delicious."

Slap Shots Restricted In South Hastings Play

The South Hastings Hockey League is the only one known in the area that doesn't allow its players to take long slap shots from the point or out-side the blue line.

"Our intention is to continue policing rough play so it can be kept to a minimum," said league repreSentative Tom Alexander. "We have already had interest from a number of other players who would like to play, but can't due to the import restrictions."

"Our rules and regulations state that a team is allowed 18 players and six of these players may be imports," added Alexander. The rules are much the same as the NHL with a few exceptions. "Along with no long slap - shot rule, fighting results in five-minute majors for the first offence with a game suspension plus a five dollar fine for the second offence in one game," Alexander added. "A player cannot play again until the fine is paid."

The players themselves founded the league this year and are also doing their own financing. Sweaters, socks and a limited amount of money is being supplied by the sponsors whose names the teams are using.

The four teams in the league are Canadian Flight Equipment, Erie Technological Products, V. L. Card Construction and Scott Anderson Finishing. All the players are from the Belleville and Trenton area.

To date all teams have played four games with Canadian Flight, in first place with three wins and one loss, second Erie Technological and V. L. Card tied for second with a 2-2 record, Scott Anderson is one win against three losses.

Each team in the league plays the opposition five times each in a 20-game schedule.

The South Hastings Hockey League was formed especially for working people who desire a little good workout, enjoy the game and be able to go to work the next day.

Cure Often Difficult to Find For Squeaks in Undercarriage

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"My three-year-old car has flat leaf rear springs (four leaves to each spring) and front coil springs. The car has gone 41,000 miles and for the past 10,000 miles I have been trying unsuccessfully to silence squeaks in the undercarriage.

I have tried routine grease jobs, including spraying of the rear springs, but the squeaks persist. Possible cures that have been suggested are; new shock absorbers, new rear spring bushings, new ball joints, rebuild the rear springs. But there is no guarantee that any of these will be the answer.

The squeaks disappear almost instantly when driving in heavy rain, but when the roads dry up they return with a vengeance. I would appreciate any suggestions you can offer that would permanently cure these annoying squeaks."

—Mr. L.P., St. Catharines, Ont.

If a thorough tighten-up of everything in the undercarriage is not effective, the culprit can be one or more of many things in the suspension, but look first to the rear springs as a possible cause. There are no recommended lubrication points on the coil springs or multiple leaf springs used on modern domestic cars, but occasionally nerve - wracking squeaks will develop in these springs, especially the rear multiple leaf type.

Usually composition friction pads are used at the tips of the leaves to avoid squeaking and control the transfer of vibrations and road noise to the inside of the vehicle. Should squeaks develop, it is possible that these pads have worn through and the tips of the spring leaves are rubbing metal - to - metal. Incidentally in rare occasions, baffling brake system squeals can develop due to wear in these pads.

But, regardless of whether or not the pads are worn, I have cured many a squeaking multiple leaf spring by raising the rear of car's body and allowing the springs to drop down free of load. This permits the spring leaves to open up to some degree. Placing chassis grease between the spring leaves will usually silence them for several thousand miles.

Rubber bushings are used in various points of the suspension which normally require no lubrication. These bushings can wear away, causing a steel-to-steel effect leading to squeals and vibrations. Replacement is then the only cure.

The odd time a brand new bushing will become temperamental, which may prove time-consuming to locate and correct. Although a shot of brake fluid aimed in the right direction will sometimes do the trick, in stubborn cases it is necessary to dismantle the mechanism surrounding the bushing in order to lubricate it and remove the squeak.

Coil springs usually remain silent, but should squeaks or groans show up in this area in most instances a shot of grease or oil at the top and bottom of each coil will prove effective.

The ball joints are sealed and therefore protected from the elements. Assuming that these joints are well lubricated and that the seals are not ruptured I doubt that they would cause a squeak.

Seldom do shock absorbers squeak, but at 41,000 miles it is likely that they are weak and due for replacement. Weak shocks allow excessive flexing of the whole suspension system, which tends to accentuate undercarriage noise and road shock.

Elliot Lake in Trouble Again; Cannot Pay Its Boom Debts

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Businessmen say Elliot Lake is in trouble, again—this time because it cannot pay its debts.

This uranium centre, which has been from boom to bust and back again in its 15-year history, is in debt to the tune of $9,552,100.

The debt was incurred when a modern mining town was carved out of virgin bushland after huge uranium deposits were discovered in 1953.

But the boom years are gone and the population of 10,000—down from a one-time high of 28,000—can't support the debt, say the businessmen.

Jack Gauthier, interim president of the Chamber of Commerce, told a businessmen's meeting Sunday the Ontario government must either write off the debt or take over the town.

Reeve Alcide Alemany, who was not at the meeting, said in an interview last week: "We are heading into bankruptcy."

It is not the first time Elliot Lake has been in trouble.

The heavy growth of the first years when 13 mines opened operations were followed by years of decline when the United States decided in 1959 to forgo options to buy more Canadian uranium.

By 1965, when new developments in the peaceful uses of atomic energy were coming to the fore, things began looking up again. In February, 1968, it was boom-time all over again as hundreds of miners poured in to stake claims on newly-opened Crown land.

But because of a uranium glut and problems in developing nuclear power plants the market refuses to grow and Elliot Lake has been marking time for the last two years.

The tax rate currently is set at 135 mills for private homeowners and 145 mills for businessmen—but Mr. Gauthier predicts a rate of 200 mills for 1970.

Businessmen already are faced with tax increases of 40 per cent over the 1968 rates while the average homeowner is being billed between $10 and $20 a month more than at this time last year, he said.

The rising rates produce rising prices to the point where many residents are doing their shopping in Sault Ste. Marie, 100 miles to the west, or Sudbury, 85 miles to the east.

This raises the spectre of business being forced to close through lack of customers, he said.

At the Sunday meeting, the businessmen agreed to back any candidate in the Dec. 1 municipal elections who promised to approach the provincial government and ask it to write off the debt.

They also nominated one of their own number, Barry Norman, manager of the local Canadian Tire Co. store, to contest the election.

Heredity Important, Too

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The thing about a pendulum is that it's unhappy resting in the middle; its nature is to swing, and the slightest push sends it gliding from one end of its arc to the other.

As we know, there are "pendulums" in thought as well as in the physical world. Perhaps the most famous example is the "heredity versus environment" argument, which over the centuries has swung violently from one extreme to the other.

We are now living in a highly "environmental" period, thanks mostly to Freud and other researchers, who have demonstrated how emotional and social conditioning can deeply alter a person's whole pattern of living. This was a necessary and wholesome reaction against the "heredity" viewpoint, which was too biological and fatalistic to fit the facts of human interaction.

But now the pendulum has swung so far to the other side that we tend to deny the existence, or profound influence of constitutional factors affecting the course of our behavior. This modern viewpoint, I believe, is just as absurd and one-sided as its predecessor.

Last spring I wrote a paragraph suggesting that, for the most part, suicides are born, not made; that circumstances may trigger off the act of suicide, but a constitutional predisposition must have been there from the beginning in order to precipitate an act so contrary to nature.

I received many letters of objection to this remark — almost all of them pointing out that severe depression is the typical cause of suicide, and that this is a psychological, not a biological, origin of the act.

Of course, that is perfectly true, but it has no bearing upon the statement I made. I would be the last person to deny the vast importance of environment, and interpersonal relationships, in driving some people to suicide; but the crucial question is: Why do some respond to psychotics take this way out, and others (faced with the same bleak life situation) find different ways of coping?

Just as we are born with differing intellectual and physical capacities, so we are born with differing abilities to adapt to stress. Some genetic constitutions are stronger, or more flexible, than others; as we see clearly ere with children, some personalities are crushed by adversity, and others are challenged by it. There is nothing "inevitable" about suicide, but the latent weakness must be there.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): This is a day of activity for you, although much is for limited or temporary goals. Home life is full, emotional; those you care about are sensitive to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Some things simply cannot be tidied up unless you do so in person Today is most useful for just such details; so start early, settle what you can.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Tact with an associate is more valuable to you than material profit today. Aside from routines go smoothly. Earnings hold up well.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Long range plans are important, but do not revise them today. Verify new information from far places, distant correspondents. Much of today's stimulus is mere noise. Pause occasionally to let intuition guide you.

Young Montreal Jews Training For 'Combat'

TORONTO (CP) — A group of young Jews in Montreal is training in street fighting and the use of rifles to be ready for a potential attack on the city's Jewish community by anti-Semites, a New York rabbi said Sunday.

Rabbi Meir Kahane, leader of the militant Jewish Defence League of the United States, said the league has 400 members in Montreal who are expected to be officially organized by the end of the month.

Addressing about 100 persons at temple Beth-El, the rabbi said:

"We didn't come to Canada. Canada came to us."

"I was stunned by the intensity of the response in Montreal two weeks ago—especially among students from McGill University."

He said the league is waiting for an invitation before attempting to form a group in Toronto.

Murray Spiegel, chairman of the joint committee on community relations of the Canadian Jewish Congress and B'nai Brith, said later there is no need in Canada for the defence league.

He added that neither the methods nor the statements of Rabbi Kahane had any application to the Canadian situation and "they have our full disapproval."

Arms Sale Increasing?

LONDON (AP) — A foreign office minister said Sunday that Britain has stepped up its arms supplies to federal Nigeria and is providing up to 20 per cent of that country's weapons.

In a radio broadcast, Maurice Foley defended the British government's policy of sending arms to Lagos for the civil war with the breakaway state of Biafra.

"Those who say Britain's arms are dripping with blood misunderstand Britain's residual colonial responsibilities," he said.

Canadian Anti-War Demonstrations Peaceful

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

About 10,000 protesters against the involvement of the United States in Vietnam demonstrated peacefully in Canadian cities during the weekend.

They were supporting the massive anti-Vietnam war protests in the United States and elsewhere.

There were 6,000 demonstrators in Vancouver, about 3,000 in Toronto, 500 in Ottawa and smaller groups in other cities.

The closest thing to a clash came at Toronto Saturday when marchers encountered members of the right-wing Edmund Burke Society. Police intervened and one man was arrested.

Dissent also was seen at Ottawa where half a dozen opposition marchers, to the protesters' displeasure, led the march on Parliament Hill, carrying a sign saying: "I support the U.S.—stop communism now."

Two groups—one carrying placards and chanting anti-war slogans, the other carrying three black coffins and walking in silence—met at a Vancouver courthouse Saturday.

The estimated 5,000 heard speakers condemn the war and charge Canada with complicity in it. On Friday night about 1,000 Vancouver protesters marched with lighted candles in a demonstration organized by the Voice of Women.

At Toronto members of the Vietnam Mobilization Committee said the turnout was disappointing for the march from the downtown provincial legislature to city hall.

James Dennis Corcoran, 20, of Toronto was charged with creating a disturbance. Seven other persons were arrested, then released after being cautioned.

Several speakers were to address the marchers at city hall but the wires of the loudspeaker system had been cut. The speeches were short and almost inaudible.

About 1,500 marchers then left the city hall to go to the U.S. consulate on nearby University Avenue. The Communist Party of Metropolitan Toronto had a three-ton truck which bore a caricature of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, denouncing his alleged complicity in the war.

He's Grateful for Every Minute of Every New Day

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Canadian Leo Boyd says he is grateful for every minute of every new day.

And little wonder, for it was a year ago Sunday that Boyd received a new heart in transplant surgery performed at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital here.

The retired railway yardmaster from Chippewa, Ont., near Niagara Falls, is optimistic and has plans for a succession of tomorrows including a visit to his Canadian home. But he would have reason to wonder whether there will be a tomorrow. Only a dozen of the recipients in the 150 heart transplants performed so far have lived a year. Boyd is the lone survivor among St. Luke's 20 recipients.

Rejection of donor hearts continues to puzzle surgeons, immunologists and Boyd.

"I have no idea why I have made it this far," Boyd said.

"I only know I wasn't ready to go a year ago and that this was part of an experiment to extend life. I'm just grateful for every minute."

Five heart attacks had left Boyd, 51, with little hope by the time he arrived at St. Luke's 15 months ago.

Boyd now spends most of his time in a transplant suite at the hospital but visits with his wife at a nearby apartment. His legs are weak but he walks as much as possible. His visitors have included the king and queen of Belgium and Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the South African surgeon who performed the first heart transplant in December, 1967.

Dr. Denton A. Cooley, head of the St. Luke's transplant team, said there has been "a run of bad news with rejections" but that the transplant technique is sound and will continue to give many patients "at least a bit longer life."

"Personal experience with 20 patients during the past 18 months has revealed the rejection tendency may be controlled but not eliminated by drugs and other techniques," Cooley said.

"We have a standard technique, so it seems the surgeon has gone almost as far as he can go. It is up to the immunologist."

"Cooley said that despite the problem of rejection there is a place for transplants.

"It is just a question of whether the advantages outweigh the disadvantages," he said. "One of my last patients would have lived only one hour but he lived 4½ months longer and was a very happy man."

Canadian Heart Recipient Celebrates Anniversary

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Perrin Johnston of Toronto today celebrates his first year with a new heart.

The 55-year-old Johnston looked tanned and fit—and 25 pounds heavier—as he and his family attended a celebration dinner Sunday night at the invitation of the team of doctors who gave him the heart of an 18-year-old youth last Nov. 17.

Earlier, the Johnstons met with reporters at their home where the tall, slender man who is one of 37 surviving heart transplant patients in the world commented on his post-operative life.

"No, I don't feel as if I'm living on borrowed time—after all, we all are in a way aren't we?

"No, we just live from day to day, just go along as everyone does. We just enjoy each day fully, just as much as we can."

Mr. Johnston had his first heart attack 13 years ago and a second five years ago when he had to retire as an engineer.

It finally got to the point where he was in and out of the hospital about every three months before Mrs. Johnston, head nurse of a surgical floor at St. Michael's Hospital, broached the subject of heart transplants.

It was at St. Michael's that Mr. Johnston became Toronto's fourth heart transplant patient and the 13th person to receive a new heart in Canada.

"Since he left hospital last January this is the longest time he's been out of hospital in five years," Mrs. Johnston said.

Although there were some bad moments during the recuperation period—Mr. Johnston had a bad reaction to an anti-rejection serum—he now receives only minimal doses of other drugs and receives a medical check-up once a week.

Mr. Johnston does XBX, the women's version of the Royal Canadian Air Force exercises, and walks at least two or three miles a day. He also renewed his driving licence and drives downtown every day to pick up his wife at the hospital.

A total of 142 persons have had heart transplant operations —15 in Canada. All the Canadian operations were performed either in Toronto or Montreal.

The only other Canadian patient still surviving is John Parkinson, 53, of Montreal, who received his new heart in an operation on Nov. 3, 1968.

Farmers Have to Balance Fears in Evaluating Property

TORONTO (CP) — Farmers will have to balance their fear of estate taxes against their desire to avoid capital gains taxes in setting a value on their property, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Sunday.

Addressing the annual conference of the Canadian Farm Writers Federation, the minister said farmers may try to avoid a capital gains tax by evaluating their property at more than it is worth.

"But they have to remember they may die," and that estate taxes would be paid on the value at which the farmer had assessed his property, the finance minister said.

Outlining how the government's new tax proposals, tabled in the House of Commons Nov. 7, would affect farmers, Mr. Benson said there would be no problem in passing a farm along from one generation to another. There would be no evaluation for capital gains tax until the property was sold and a cash gain was realized.

If a farmer sold his farm without having set a value on it at the time of valuation day, the revenue department would fix a value based on values of similar land in the area.

City Delays Decision On Sewer Up River

Clearer Picture Of Plan Sought

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Belleville city council wants more information on costs before any decision is made on oversizing of the proposed Moira River sanitary sewer to allow for servicing of parts of Thurlow township.

The question to be decided is whether the city should go ahead on its own to build the sewer with acceptance of a 15 per cent overall grant to cover oversizing costs, or whether it should allow the Ontario Water Resources Commission to build the sewer and then charge the city for its use.

Cost estimates for the proposed oversize sewer from the lower Front Street pumping station to highway 401 are still indefinite, with City Engineer Wilbur Purcell and OWRC officials coming up with different figures.

The actual cost for oversizing also appears in doubt. The OWRC feels that 15 per cent overall grant would cover the cost, while the city engineer sets the differential in the area of 36 per cent.

At Cannifton last week D. J. Collings, chairman of the OWRC said the province was prepared to pay a 15 per cent over-all grant toward the cost of oversizing the sewer if the city went ahead and did the work on its own.

The OWRC would then be prepared to purchase the sewer from the city, reimbursing the municipality for all costs.

As an alternative Mr. Collins said the OWRC was prepared to undertake construction of the sewer and charge the city and Thurlow township for its use.

Thurlow council indicated its acceptance of the proposal in principle and it remained only for city council to make its decision.

But what is complicating the matter insofar as council is concerned is that it has a December 1970 commitment to provide sewer service for the city's northeast industrial area and has already taken action leading to the installation of what is known as the Canniffton Road sewer from College Street to Adam street.

Tenders for this section of the sewer were expected to be called this week.

Buckingham Palace Horses May Be Eaten

LONDON (Reuters) — European gourmets soon may be dining off special cuts of meat — steaks sliced from up to 60 horses used to guard Queen Elizabeth.

A defence ministry spokesman today confirmed reports the army is negotiating with a slaughterer for the sale of horses from the Household Cavalry and Royal Horse Artillery.

Their meat could sell in Belgium, France and Holland for 18 shillings ($2.40), a pound.

The spokesman said:

"The horses have been conditioned all their lives to parades and the noise of London. They would not be at all happy to retire into the quiet of the countryside, and we think this is the most humane end for them."

The spokesman said many of the 400 horses used in the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace and state processions had been sold before to slaughterers.

But an official of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals reacted strongly to the news.

Capt. Robbie Robinson told reporters: "I have many requests from people who want to look after retired horses. The army is looking at this purely on a cash basis — treating horses like stores."

Man Could Be Altered By Virus

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Viruses capable of altering the evolution of mankind—for good or evil—could be synthesized in 10 or 15 years if this were made a major national goal, says a noted scientist.

Dr. Robert L. Sinsheimer, chairman of the division of biology at the California Institute of Technology, told a seminar of science writers Monday:

"I would have to deplore the recently announced plan of the department of defence to synthesize a virus against which there is no known defence."

But, "if we don't explore the possibility of creating synthetic viruses and some other national drive we won't know enough to combat what they create."

A synthetic virus could direct a stalk of corn to grow larger ears, or carry the chemical blueprint for larger and smarter brains in humans, he said.

The same technology conceivably could create viruses capable of determining the body or the mind.

PC Constitution to Call For Leadership Review

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Progressive Conservative party will adopt a new constitution at its annual meeting in early December—probably including a clause that would require a regular review of party leadership.

At present, the party's constitution makes no provision for a leadership contest unless the leader dies or retires.

Earlier this month, Premier John Robarts, who has headed the party without challenge since 1961, denied reports that he intends to announce his retirement at the meeting held in Toronto Dec. 4-6.

However, a spokesman for the Ontario PC headquarters said Monday a change calling for a regular leadership review is expected to be presented to the 1,000 delegates as part of a proposed overhaul of the constitution.

The Conservatives, in power in Ontario for the last 25 years, are the only provincial party who do not regularly review their leadership.

The Liberals, who hold 27 of 117 seat in the legislature, must hold a leadership convention within two years after an election, while the NDP, with 21 seats, reviews its leadership every two years.

Intrepid Declared 'Shipshape'

Apollo in Perfect Orbit Around Moon, Landing Craft Ready

HOUSTON (AP) — Circling the moon in perfect orbit, Apollo 11's explorers inspected their landing craft today and declared it "shipshape" for a daring bull's-eye landing on the craggy surface early Wednesday.

Charles Conrad and Alan Bean slipped through a connecting tunnel into the fragile lander they called Intrepid, leaving Richard Gordon alone in the command ship Yankee Clipper.

After an 88-minute check, Bean reported: "We've checked out all the things we're supposed to and they're all shipshape. We're ready to go."

After a communications check between the two ships, Gordon exclaimed: "Hey, that's sterling."

They then rejoined Gordon in the command cabin and the trio settled down about 8.30 a.m. for an 8½-hour sleep period.

Conrad and Bean hope to set Intrepid down in a 400-foot-wide circle in the Ocean of Storms on the western side of the moon's visible face at 1:53 a.m. EST Wednesday. Their goal is the first detailed scientific exploration of the lunar surface.

Conrad and Bean inspected the landing craft six hours after Apollo 11 swept into lunar orbit which prompted outbursts of awe and enthusiasm from all three as they gazed at the wild and wondrous landscape below.

"Wowee!" Bean shouted Monday night. "Boy it's beautiful down there. Look at that crater."

Through color television, the astronauts shared their magnificent view with earth watchers 250,000 miles away.

The 30-minute telecast followed the course of Apollo 11 as it moved across a cratered land, moving from east to west.

For Other Stories on Apollo, see Page 2

Large and small craters, rugged mountains and flat plains were visible as the camera scanned the desolate landscape.

"Even in earth orbit at night or in the daytime, the sky was never as black as it is here," Conrad reported. "This is the blackest black I ever saw."

Gordon pointed out long strands of rock and rubble thrown out when a crater was formed and called it "a fantastic sight."

For Conrad and Bean the view from 70 miles high was a preview for their attempt to land on the eastern shore of the Ocean of Storms.

They are to separate the landing craft Intrepid from the command ship Yankee Clipper at 11:16 p.m. tonight. For more than 2½ hours they will keep the world in suspense as they execute manoeuvres on the dangerous and difficult descent.

Their goal is a pinpoint landing near an unnamed crater, an area described by Conrad before the flight as "gently rolling, pocked with small craters, but relatively smooth."

The astronauts have dubbed the landing target "Pete's parking lot" because it is Conrad, the Apollo 12 commander, who must steer Intrepid to the touchdown.

Using new procedures, the astronauts hope to overcome the four-mile landing error of Apollo 11 last July and park close to a 400-foot-wide crater which is the home of an unmanned Surveyor spacecraft which soft-landed on the moon 2½ years ago.

Urban Renewal Study

Council to Await Report Before Accepting Merchants' Offer

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

City council will take no immediate action on the request of the Belleville Downtown Association that the downtown urban renewal scheme study by Procter and Redfern be completed.

Instead, the question will be tabled until council hears a review of Procter and Redfern's interim report on, the now discontinued urban renewal study.

J. B. Corke, president of the Belleville Downtown Association, appeared before council to pass along the association's offer of $5,000 as the city's share of completing the urban renewal study.

He said that more than $50,000 in public funds had been spent on the study and "all that we really know (from the interim report) is that the downtown has problems, that the businessmen are not perfect and something should be done."

He said the study could be completed for $18,950 (of which the city would be required to pay 25 per cent) and felt that the professional advice to be accrued from the completed study should be obtained.

As evidence of the association's good intention, Mr. Corke passed over a cheque for $1,000 and assured that the balance would be available when the urban renewal study was completed.

Ald. Douglas Boyle later brought in a recommendation for council to reconsider its action in discontinuing the urban renewal study and commended the downtown association for its action.

In his opinion, he said it made sense for the city to complete the study. For the city to turn down the merchants' offer would be missing an opportunity.

Ald. Paul Russell, however, said he has mixed feelings on the matter.

"We have already notified the senior governments that the study has been cancelled," he said. "I would hate to see the city accept the $5,000 only to find out that we are obligated for another $15,000.

He urged that before action was taken the senior governments be contacted to ascertain whether they would pay 75 per cent of the remaining $18,950 cost for completing the study.

Mayor J. Russell Scott agreed that completion of the study should be reconsidered, but said that should be done following Procter and Redfern's presentation on their interim report.

The $18,950 figure given as the cost of completing the study, required explanation, according to Ald. Gerald Joyce.

He said council had understood the overall cost of the study was to be about $80,000 of which the city would be called upon to pay 25 per cent. With slightly more than $50,000 given as costs to date, it appeared that more than $18,950 would be required for completion.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds said the urban renewal co-ordinating committee had met but he was still not prepared to say exactly what the city's share for completion of the study would be.

He said it would depend on what portion the senior governments would be prepared to pay.

On a motion from Ald. Arthur Wegan and Mayor Scott, council voted to table reconsideration of the urban renewal study until a meeting with Procter and Redfern could be held.

The city manager said he would try to arrange the meeting as soon as possible.

Appeal Chairman Council Candidate

Mrs. Jean Smith, chairman of this year's United Appeal campaign, has announced her intention to run for aldermanic.

As overall organizer of the Appeal Mrs. Smith devoted a great deal of time and energy to make the campaign successful. She believes it is an indication of her interest and participation in what is happening in the community.

"That', she will tell you, "is the reason I am running. I feel that people should become involved in their community."

She said she feels strongly about the role women should play in politics. "About 50 per cent of the voters right here in this community are female, and they should have more representation."

"I think women should be involved in their community. I believe we have something to add", said Mrs. Smith.

Having been interested in civic affairs all her life, she maintains it is particularly important for women to give their time in this area.

A resident of Belleville for the past 21 years, she has spent most of her time raising her four sons. Two are now in high school, one in university, while the fourth is a university graduate.

"Now I have the time to devote to the community, whereas I couldn't before", she added.

She is vice-president of the United Community Services, (UCS), and has been chairman of the YOM board for the past two years, and on the board of directors for the YMCA for three years.

Mrs. Smith is also chairman of the UCS Health Committee and representative on the National Agency Review Committee for the Canadian Welfare Council.

Belleville Week Earned Money

Belleville Week celebrations ended with an interim credit balance of $1,301.87.

This was the report of Belleville Week Committee chairman Donald S. Fraser later, who reported to city council yesterday with the recommendation that a cheque for the above amount be turned over to the city.

Mr. Soutter reported revenues of $9,005.61 with expenses of $7,179.51, and cheques issued, but not cashed, for another $524.23.

He said there was still some revenue to be received and perhaps a few accounts to be paid.

Mr. Soutter said he was extremely pleased that the Belleville Week Committee was able to start the promotion at no expense to the taxpayer.

"Industry, business enterprises and the citizens themselves made it possible," he said.

Ald. Soden Stepping Down Says City Needs New Blood

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Fresh ideas and new blood are needed in Belleville city council.

That is the feeling of Ald. Kenneth Soden, veteran of five years at city hall, who last night announced he would not seek re-election.

"I have no apologies for any stands that I have taken. I have never been a fence-sitter and never hesitated to let it be known how I stood on any issue, but I feel it is time to step aside and make room for someone else who may bring further fresh ideas and viewpoints to this council," he said.

With Alderman Soden's decision to not seek re-election, at least three new faces are assured for next year's council. Five of the present council have announced their candidacy, leaving only two to still announce their intentions. Ald. Richard Ellis will contest the mayoralty, while Ald. Donald Williams has moved out of the city.

Present aldermen who have announced they will seek re-election are Enos David, Gerald Joyce, Arthur Regan, Arthur Keegan, and Paul Russell.

Others announcing their intentions of running for aldermen are Jack Ireland, Donald M. Sanderson, Mrs. Jean Ray Bradshaw, past president of the Belleville and District Labor Council, and Mr. Cunningham, labor council president, and Mrs. Jean Smith.

Ald. Soden said he was disappointed with the number of names announced so far for the aldermanic race. But he said he would like to encourage newcomers to the city and business people to offer themselves.

"Running the city is big business and the citizens deserve to support new people who wish to bring their business experience and fresh ideas to council."

In announcing his retirement from municipal politics, Ald. Soden took a swipe at council members unable to make decisions, saying that they were elected to "give the taxpayers' money."

Suggesting that the public is not too happy with some of the aldermen who have sat on council for the past few years, Ald. Soden said the public debates with respect to Sunday openings, capital works fair were the tip-off as to what some councillors considered important city business.

"We have Sunday openers in Belleville, the pool rooms are open and our sons and daughters can spend a lovely Sunday afternoon in the theatres—but Heaven forbid — at the Fair you cannot play bingo on one Sunday of the year."

In closing, Alderman Soden singled out Alderman Enos David for special criticism.

"My friend Alderman David says he's just been too busy satisfying to him and he wants to finish the job — I say anyone who has been there since 1957 has been here too long."

He said he was not elected by council merely because he has the time and the desire, he said.

"Heaven help Belleville if that is all that it takes to be elected as an alderman."

ALDERMAN SODEN

And as city council's main spokesman for industrial quality centre, Alderman Soden hoped that next year some councillor would have the political courage to move that Belleville be placed on the capital works budget for a new centre.

"We have already spent in excess of $50,000 for plans and specifications and services to the fairgrounds site . . . of these years Belleville council will have to have the political courage to build a new community centre with a million dollars of the annual twenty million on capital works and put off less important projects for another year."

Jeffrey, Reynolds Locked Horns

A query from Alderman Robin Jeffrey as to why a certain letter about committee of adjustment business had not been included on the agenda, prompted fireworks from a senior city official at yesterday's council meeting.

Asked who decides what matters go on the agenda, City Manager J. R. Reynolds snapped back, "I do, and I take full responsibility."

Alderman Jeffrey had inferred that there may be other items of correspondence omitted from the agenda which should come to council's attention.

Mayor J. R. Scott objected to the alderman's question, stating that such matters discussed in open session did not lend to the dignity of council.

The letter referred to by Mrs. Jeffrey was in connection with an application to the committee of adjustment by a local builder who had requested a variance with respect to a building lot.

The alderman said the letter had been critical of the action taken by council in siding with the builder.

Mr. Reynolds gave the reason the letter had not been included on the meeting agenda was a matter of solicitor's objection, and the builder had withdrawn his application.

"I considered the matter closed," Mr. Reynolds said.

"I assure you," the city manager told Alderman Jeffrey, "no correspondence is being left off the agenda which I feel you should see."

Mayoralty Duo 'Best of Friends'

Belleville's mayoralty candidates were guests of the Kinsmen Club last night. Incumbent Russell Scott and challenger Richard Ellis dropped in to the club after the lengthy council session and in opening remarks each told the Kinsmen "we are the best of friends."

Ald. Ellis, challenging for the mayoralty after two years on council, said "it is my aim to see Belleville progress. You know I am all for Belleville and if elected I will work to keep taxes down."

Mayor Scott told the club "two years ago at election time we could look back on a million worth of new assessment. By the end of this year we will have gained about $15 million over the past two years."

He said: "We have to be realistic. It is impossible to keep taxes down. They will have to go up some."

Also guests of the club were Ald. Arthur Keegan and candidates for alderman Donald Soutter.

During the business session, following the induction of new members, the Kinsmen agreed that they would undertake to put on a highland tattoo in the city next summer.

Sewer Decision Delayed

Also, the city is preparing plans for construction of a 36-inch sanitary sewer up the Moira River to College Street.

But both sewers would only be large enough to serve the city.

Yesterday, Murray Wilson, engineer with the Ontario Water Resources Commission, appeared before city council, stating that the best solution to providing sewer service for Thurlow Township would be to oversize the Moira River sewer.

Mr. Wilson said the OWRC was prepared to construct the river sewer at a sufficient size to serve Thurlow Township, then charge the city and the township for its use at a rate of 20 to 30 cents per 1,000 gallons.

However, there was no immediate mention of the alternative proposal made at Canniton to the effect that the province would pay 15 per cent of the overall cost to the city built the oversize sewer.

Alderman Robin Jeffery and E. A. Orr, both of whom attended the Canniton meeting, stressed that oversizing of the river sewer was impressive.

Otherwise, they said, in four or five years time, the river sewer would have to be replaced with a larger size or twinned.

Mr. Wilson said the advantages of the city from the OWRC building the oversize sewer were: (1) It would obviate the necessity of an upstream sewage plant for Thurlow Township; (2) the OWRC could obtain better interest rates than the city for financing the project, and (3) payment for the sewer would be based on usage as opposed to the city issuing debentures.

But Ald. Gerald Joyce felt he was in no position to make a decision without a better understanding of all the facts.

"We have been discussing this matter now for a year and a half and only now do we get a suggested solution," he said.

"But we still haven't got all the facts. How do we relate a sewer service charge of 20 cents per 1,000 gallons to a debenture issue?"

The alderman suggested that a special meeting be held with Thurlow Council, attended also by representatives of the OWRC and the city's consulting engineers, Gore and Storrie.

Council went along with this suggestion and today City Clerk Adam Stalker was attempting to line up the meeting.

In the meantime, for its own protection, council gave first and second readings to a bylaw authorizing construction of a 36-inch trunk sanitary sewer up the Moira River despite the fact that it would not provide the capacity for service in Thurlow.

The purpose of passing the bylaw was to protect the city with respect to capital works costs of the sewer and its construction by the city should there be no agreement on the OWRC proposal.

The city will, however, delay calling for construction of the Canniton Road section of the sewer.

Trenton Election Combatants

After Trenton's nomination meeting last night, post nomination candidates for municipal offices discuss the election. Chatting are Gerrit Bruinix, E. M. Parker, Mayor James MacDonald, challenger Duncan McDonald, George Greer, and Douglas Kinney.

Eleven Nominated at Trenton

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON—Surprises were a minority of one at Monday night's nominating meeting at Trenton Town Hall.

If everyone who was nominated qualified by 9 p.m. tonight, Trenton residents will have 11 choices in the Dec. 1 municipal balloting for a mayor, four councillors and a Public Utilities Commission member.

A local merchant, F. J. Aziz, provided the lone surprise last night when his name appeared as a candidate for a Public Utilities Commission post. It had previously appeared that C. A. Baker, who has served 14 consecutive years in office, would win by acclamation.

Mayoralty candidates James MacDonald and Duncan McDonald and the seven previously declared council candidates were the only persons to be nominated for those positions.

The potential councillors are incumbents Douglas Kinney and E. M. Parker, former councillor Charles Hilton and newcomers Dr. W. R. Patrick, Neil Robertson, Gerrit Bruinix and George Greer.

The Trenton Chamber of Commerce's annual Meet The Candidates Night — to be held Wednesday, Nov. 26, at Trenton Community Gardens — is usually the focal point of the brief election campaign for those who qualify.

The nominator and seconder for each of the mayoralty candidates were: Duncan McDonald, V. P. Carswell and Reginald Martin; incumbent James MacDonald, Edward Todd and George Greer.

And for the seven council candidates: W. R. Patrick, Ralph Weaver and V. P. Carswell; Neil Robertson, Austin Scott and Ralph Weaver; Gerrit Bruinix, Jack Stan and Cliff Graber; Charles Hilton, W. J. Steenburg and Gerald Weaver; Douglas Kinney Charles Hilton and Joe Scalette; E. M. Parker, Howard Aziz and Michael Mason; George Greer, Mrs. J. M. Holden and D. C. McPherson.

On the PUC slate the nominators and seconders were: Clifford Baker, F. J. Barry and Austin Scott; F. J. Aziz, Joe Scaletta and Norm Ferguson.

Proposes Evening Meets But Changes Her Mind

Would holding city council meetings in the evening instead of late afternoon encourage more people to run for council positions?

Ald. Robin Jeffrey believes it would and yesterday she made this an attempt to have something done about it. Mrs. Jeffrey told council that in efforts to encourage more candidates to offer themselves she had learned that many businessmen would not take the time away from their business to attend afternoon council meetings.

She felt any change that would help this crave citizens of the best calibre to run for office would be a good thing.

But the move to change the hour of council meetings ran into a procedural block with Mayor J. Russell Scott ruling the matter out of order.

Under the council procedural bylaw, such a motion requires two weeks notice. And Mayor Scott suggested Ald. Jeffrey bring the matter in as a notice of motion.

But when the time for such notices came around, Ald. Jeffrey said she had changed her mind.

Her intention, she said, had been to bring the matter to council in time for this year's election. With this now too late, she said the matter could be brought in next year.

'Family Life' Course Explained To Home and School Members

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A year of preparation was climaxed last night at Queen Elizabeth School when the new course in family life, education was presented to parents.

Last fall, a group of teachers, medical personnel and parents began, under the direction of the new defunct Bay of Quinte District High School Board, to plan a course in human growth and development.

With the course outline now in the hands of selected teachers, parents are being invited to the schools to learn about its content and to view some of the films and books to be used for instruction.

Mrs. Nan Petts, a teacher at Queen Elizabeth and graduate of a summer school course in family life education, told the audience of 60 parents and teachers: Now we have the legal go-ahead to teach this formerly taboo subject".

"Only 15 per cent of the course is devoted to sex education," she said.

The remainder of the time spent on the subject will be devoted to giving the pupils an understanding of emotional and social adjustments, and to guiding them into a better understanding of themselves and others.

The role of the family is studied at all grade levels and emphasis will be placed on the need for unity and strength in the family group.

"In the early grades, teachers will utilize the natural wonder of children about the start of life to establish healthy attitudes," Mrs. Petts said.

The teachers' chief role, she added, will be to support the parents and the home in their task, and perhaps help to bridge the communications gap.

"Background training in the school will prompt questions at home, questions your children might never have asked you without prior discussion in the classroom," she told the parents.

The course will begin in January in schools where trained teachers are available. Workshops for teachers are under way this fall.

This year the course will be introduced in kindergarten and grades 1, 4, 7, and 10. Next year the program will be extended to each succeeding grade, and within three years family life education will be in every grade from kindergarten through Grade 12.

Parents who wish to have their children excused from the course will be permitted to do so by sending a request in writing to the school principal.

Wellington PUC Man Acclaimed

WELLINGTON (Staff) — A nomination meeting held last night in Wellington town hall saw Public Utilities Commissioner William Young returned by acclamation.

There were three nominations for village reeve, among them Douglas Marvin, William Greer and Richard Reeve, incumbent reeve. Neither Mr. Marvin nor Mr. Greer qualified their nominations last night.

Reeve Boyce yesterday told the press that he definitely would not serve another term. His nomination has not been qualified.

Wellington's four village councillors were each nominated to run for another year term. Nominated were Douglas Marvin, William Greer, Keith Barnett and Donald Baitley.

Only Mr. Barnett qualified his nomination last night.

Also nominated to run for seats on village council were Cecil Bailey and Rodney Blower. Their nominations were not qualified last evening. Village clerk Edward Marshall announced last night that each man nominated will have until 9 p.m. today to qualify.

Mary Packard Miss Hope

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Miss Mary Packard, formerly of Colborne, and now a student at the Edith Cavell School of Nursing here in Belleville, is the Cancer Society's Miss Hope for 1970 for this area.

Miss Packard, 19, is the first Miss Hope for Belleville and will next go to Kingston for the district finals.

She was chosen last night ahead of two other student nurses — Miss Margaret Hale and Miss Edith Tufts — in a contest at Education Hall.

The girls, all 19 years of age, were judged on four separate categories — appearance, poise, intelligence, personality and on a three-minute address about the Canadian Cancer Society's work.

Judges for the event were Philip Rickard, administrator of Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital; Miss Hazel Naudett, former administrator of Trenton Memorial Hospital; and Barry Grills of the Intelligencer.

To enter the competition all girls had to be single and students of recognized schools of nursing.

Should Miss Packard win in provincials, she will then move on to Toronto and the provincial edition of Miss Hope 1970. The provincial competition will have 14 district finalists and will be held Jan. 24.

A new bonnet will be awarded the winner, $100 to the first runner up, and $75 to the second runner up. Miss Packard and Lyle Vandlief and newcomer Dean O'Hara.

Property Purchase Closer

PICTON (Staff) — Resident representative for Prescott Aircraft, Walter Symons, said yesterday that the purchase agreement between the Quinte-based helicopter company and the Crown-Assets Corporation "will be finalized probably next week."

The purchase involves about 850 acres of land, part of the former Camp Picton military base which was phased out last summer.

"There has been some delay but eventually it will prosper," commented Mr. Symons referring to the apparent slowness of Picton's newest industry in developing since its location here last spring.

The latest delay, according to Mr. Symmons, centres around a piece of survey work that must be completed before the final agreement can be signed. Surveyors yesterday began the work that must be finished before names go on the dotted lines. Remarked Mr. Symmons, "The survey work should be complete d shortly and then I would presume, unless there is some other bone of contention, the agreement will be signed."

Election Likelihood Remote

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — With the reeve and deputy-reeve already decided by acclamation, the possibility of an election in the township this year appears remote.

However, three of the nine nominated as council candidates last night had qualified by noon today.

If no more candidates express interest in running the three vacant council seats will be filled under the ex-contingency trek to the polls on Monday, Dec. 1.

A m e l i a s b u r g 's incoming reeve is Russell Thompson who serves currently as deputy - reeve.

Councillor Norman Post was acclaimed deputy-reeve when four other nominees declined.

Those so far qualified to contest council election are incumbents Lorne Wetherall and Lyle Vandlief and newcomer Dean O'Hara.

Bancroft School Addition Must Await Report: Board

An addition to North Hastings High School in Bancroft will have to await a report throughout the north, it was decided Monday.

Members of the advisory vocational committee of the Hastings County Board of Education journeyed to Bancroft for their meeting and surveyed the accommodation needs of its school.

Overcrowding in the existing technical department prompted North Hastings staff to ask for an addition to the school. But considering the decision are the intentions of the board in Napanee, Students from those northern areas are now bused into Bancroft for schooling but if additions to accommodate them are built at schools in their districts, Bancroft's accommodation problems may disappear.

The committee decided to have superintendent D. C. Stirling try to determine the number of non-resident students expected to enrol at North Hastings next year. Any recommendations on a school addition will be deferred until the report is received.

The committee believes it has found a solution to the problem vexing BCI's vocational department. The school, completed in 1929, was built to handle the smaller cars of that era. The entrance to the main shop is too small to admit any but the smallest modern foreign cars. Nor did engineers think it safe to enlarge the present door.

The committee has recommended an investigation of the window in the east wall of the building, to determine if it could be converted to a door big enough to admit modern cars.

The heads of technical departments in county secondary schools submitted a report on their ideas for allocation of space in the vocational wing of the new composite school, proposed for the school lot at Bayside.

Explains New Assessment

Regional assessment is the first real stock-taking of Ontario's taxable property resources, Leighton Thompson, newly-appointed assessment commissioner for Hastings-Prince Edward counties, said last night.

Its results may determine the pattern of any future regional government porposals, he indicated to the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association.

Mr. Thompson, former Belleville assessment commissioner, who assumed his new provincial post less than two weeks ago, was guest speaker at the new political organization's founding night in Kiwanis Centre.

Mr. Thompson believed there was "much merit" in scrutinizing regional forms of government.

"But," he added, "there's a lot of study to be done in that area. I don't think you can come up with the answers until you take stock of the province."

Such a stock taking, he said is what "this new assessment is all about."

The province-wide re-assessment program, based on actual property values, will create a more equitable working base — both for municipal taxes and provincial grants systems, he felt.

Mr. Thompson emphasized the need for direct communication with the public under the new system.

"I don't wish to be part of any bureaucratic organization and be in a position where any of you could not talk to myself or my staff," he said. "I'll be very much in touch with you in this Prince Edward - Hastings region. There will be no problem as far as communication is concerned."

Council Vetoes Kiwanis Request For $750 Grant

City council yesterday turned down a request for a grant of $750 to the Belleville Kiwanis Club to assist the club in carrying out its community work.

Club member H. T. Turley told council the club was behind in its taxes on the Dundas Street Kiwanis Centre and had no money to pay them.

At the same he said the free accommodation was provided at the centre for the Recreation

Donation

PICTON (Staff) — Picton Kiwanians last night presented the Picton Recreation and Parks Committee with a cheque for $500 to promote "fun and games" among local youth.

Accepting this donation from Kiwanis president, Donald Stewart, was Mrs. Eru Ward, who is a member of the Recreation and Parks Committee. The presentation was made during the Kiwanians' regular dinner meeting at the Royal Hotel.

Each year Kiwanians donate from $300 to $1,000 toward recreation in this community. The money is used to support a wide variety of programs under the supervision of Picton Recreation Director, Wayne Ring.

Victoria Order of Nurses, the sheltered workshop, the Red Cross loan cupboard and many other community activities.

Aldermen Donald Williams and Douglas Boyle brought in the recommendation for the city to pay the club a grant of $750 but it was turned down.

Alderman E. A. Orr said the question should not be decided on whether the city has the $750. Rather it was a matter of policy.

He said city council had decided last spring on what city grant were to be paid this year.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said there was no question of the club's good work.

What really decided council was the matter of precedence. Councillors thought that approval of the Kiwanis request could open the door for other organizations.

Alcohol Count

Breathalyzer tests for drinking drivers come into effect December 1 and it will be interesting to see what effect they have on traffic safety over the Christmas period.

Alcohol is one of the prime factors in accidents, particularly at the end of the year, so introduction of the tests just prior to that period is timely.

By establishing a level of .08 per cent of alcohol in the blood as the danger mark, above which the citizen is regarded as being impaired, removes the element of doubt or misjudgment which can occur in cases involving alcohol.

If lives are saved in this coming period, by reason of this new method of establishing impairment, not to mention its influence in preventing over-indulgence, Canadians will have reason to be happy. The government in effect is moving to save people from themselves.

Parks Popular

It comes with a bit of a jolt to read a current Ontario government circular noting that, according to early indications, 1969 will be a record year as far as total park attendance and use of camping facilities are concerned.

It is as if the season were still in full swing and people were still flocking to the beaches and camp grounds. To be sure one sees horse-back riders and motorcycle dragsters at The Outlet these mild November days, but no one pretending it is summer.

But then, maybe the computers take time to digest all the facts of a summer season. In any event here is Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle reporting that total visits to parks and camp facilities will reach approximately 10,400,000 compared with 9,440,000 in 1968.

This marks an increase of about 11 per cent. Largest increases were in the Lake Erie, Lake Simcoe, Lake Huron and Port Arthur districts.

Total parks-revenue incidentally, including entry and camping fees and concession rentals will be approximately $2,750,000, compared with $2,400,000 in 1968.

All in all it has been (or should we say, "will be") a good year for campers — not to mention the provincial coffers.

Chinese Puzzle

Once again Communist China has been denied a seat in the United Nations. Meanwhile the Nationalist Chinese government of the aging Chiang Kai-shek continues to hold its UN seat, despite the fact it is not fully representative of the people of Taiwan (Formosa).

That is the claim of a body calling themselves the United Formosans in America for Independence. They point out that 2,000,000 Chinese fled to Taiwan with Chiang Kai-shek when the Communists took over the mainland in 1949 and now dominate the 12 million Taiwanese whose ancestors migrated to the island about 300 years ago to escape authoritarian Chinese rule.

Taiwan, says this group, "was converted into one of the most efficient and horrifying police states in the post-war period. What Chiang calls free China is in fact an artificially created government staffed by Chinese nationalist exiles, supported by foreign powers (the United States predominantly), and dispossessing the Taiwanese people."

It sounds as if the Chinese have a bad deal all round. On the mainland they are up to their eyebrows in the Communist doctrine of Mao Tse-tung, anti-imperialism, and not to mention Chairman Mao's little red book of "thoughts." In Taiwan (Formosa) the ones who are supposed to be living according to this United Formosan group (they have an office in New York), live in a police state in which the Taiwanese are prevented from running their own affairs. And in Hong Kong, that little British enclave on the edge of the great Chinese land mass, overcrowding is such that as many as possible are emigrating to Canada and other countries overseas.

Having His Say

Prince Philip during his recent North American visit complained of the press, in that "everything I say nowadays seems as if I trod on a land mine." What with the Queen reportedly upset at his remarks about royal financial problems, and the prince himself upset because everyone else seems to be upset, it makes for a disturbing time for the poor man.

Yet what is said is said. After all Prince Philip is one of the most refreshing personalities of our time, one who speaks his mind, and you cannot keep a man like that down. The Monarchy and the Commonwealth, indeed the entire English-speaking world, are the better for a man of such honest and forthright ways.

With Threat No. 3 From Mailmen...

Pearson's Right-to-Strike Legislation Comes Under Fire

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — There are rumblings again of still another postal strike.

If it comes — and militant Montreal postal union leaders talk of "this winter" or "next spring" — it will be strike number three.

And that is not counting the wild-cating that, like measles, has spotted the face of the country with short, regional mail foul-ups.

The threat of a third national postal strike is being brandished like a club over the heads of the government — and ultimately the taxpayer — to enforce demands for exemption from staff cutbacks in the austerity program.

Twice the postal workers have extracted more money from the Treasury through the simple process of stalling down the Post Office department, even although the collective and dedicatory of mail always has been assumed to be one of the government's dull but routine basic and most essential public services.

As a result, Postmaster General Eric Kierans, treating it seemingly, as something of a joke — he never fails to chuckle when he cracks funny — concedes with a shrug and a laugh that the taxpayer is paying more, in much higher postal rates, for less mail service.

But even the elephant-hided Kierans appears to feel some embarrassment in his indecent haste to chuck off his title as postmaster general and take on the camouflage of "minister of communications."

But the worm — the federal government which so far has been so submissive to strikes and strike threats, — now may be turning.

It stirred once before, two years ago, when the then Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp in his last budget speech spoke of what he called his "alarm" over the collective bargaining powers of the federal civil service unions, and went on to say, quite flatly, that "it has to be restrained."

This was so, he said — and was it not nice of him — because the government has an obligation to both the taxpayers and the economy as well as to its own civil service staff.

Then, the government's personnel administrators have been told by Ronald Donovan, professor of industrial and labor relations at New York State's Cornell University, that they were "ridiculously soft bargainers," and almost "casual" in their protection of the public — the taxpayers' — interests.

Further, two respected experts in government-staff relations have said that the waging of "economic war" — with the strike as the ultimate weapon — is unacceptable in the operation of the public service.

The two government-staff specialists: the late Supreme Court Justice Ivan C. Rand, author of labor's Rand Report which recommended that labor be given the right of check-off in collection of union dues, and Ontario Judge Walter C. Little.

But there have been more, and the pendulum continues swinging from the civil service's to the taxpayers' side of the issue.

Only the other day, in a formal submission to Labor Minister Mackasey, business and industrial leaders petitioned for revocation of the right of strike that former Prime Minister Pearson gave federal civil servants three years ago.

While neither Mr. Mackasey, much less the cabinet, had time to take a position on the issue, it can be stated as a fact of government-life that limitation, if not revocation of the strike right has some ministerial support.

And this support could expand into something substantial — especially if the postal workers again play their give-in-or-else game.

For them, the final score could read: "Three strikes and out" — out, that is, with the right to strike.

There is some ministerial support, and perhaps growing, of prohibition of strike activity, at least in the "basic and essential" public services, on at least three grounds.

1. Because the government in providing "essential public services" is in a monopoly position, there is no "market test," no competitive gauge by which it can determine the cost to the Treasury of resisting or knuckling under to a strike threat.

2. The government is in an impossible bargaining position because it is denied the defensive weapon or deterrent of the lockout against a strike threat. It is prepared to shut down an essential public service or continue its operation with a new employees — something no administration as yet has been brave, or, if you like, reckless enough to try.

3. There is no really fair collective bargaining in the public service because the government usually submits in the militants in the lack of any strong expression of public opinion from the always far-too-silent majority.

But things may be changing for the better for the taxpayer.

To help the change along, write your MP.

"The main reason I do this is because it's tax-free !"

Letters to the Editor

Young People Need Friendship, Understanding —Not Criticism

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Will the real Mr. and Mrs. Concerned-About-Youth please stand up.

Almost every day we hear through the press, radio, TV or perhaps a neighbor, some new pronouncement about the "state of Belleville's youth."

Parents are deeply upset because of the great silence or the open antagonism that exists between them and their teenage sons and daughters. Teachers are finding the strain of classroom encounters and disorders too great and are either looking for another profession or having as little as possible to do with the students. Churches are frantically trying out new gimmicks to "attract" young people to church-centred activities in the hope that some good may result. Civic committees are studying youth problems. Service clubs are trying "to do something for youth." So many people are trying so hard to do something — and my guess is that they aren't quite sure what that something is. No one seems to think of consulting the young people themselves. No wonder the young people leave home. Students are expelled from school, the church youth groups are few, the civic committees are non-committal and the service clubs are frustrated when their schemes fail.

Has anyone really tried to discover the qualities and potential of the young people themselves?

This is the time when all adults who have any skill in the art of friendship should feel commissioned for service. Our young people need adult friends — not critics, censors or dictators. They want to believe in us but we are so inconsistent. They would like to spend time just sitting and talking — with equal rights of discussion — but we are so busy.

We have heard enough complaints about the crowding on Front Street and up the Royal Bank Steps. Let us look into why these young people do not find their homes a compatible place to spend time with their friends. Have we ever wondered how many of these young people have been suspended from school for minor infraction and so literally have nothing to do and no place to go? We have heard much too, about the extensive drug use in our city. Let us listen for a while to some of our young people as they express their disillusionment over the parents who have taken them in a drunken temper and turned them out of their homes in the middle of the night. Let us prove to the young person who has never been able to express a viewpoint in his family circle without being told he didn't know what he was talking about, and who may be seeking some personal identity in non-conformity, that he is important for what he thinks, and that someone cares about what he thinks.

Abraham Lincoln once said, "He has the right to criticize who has the heart to help".

Let all those Belleville citizens who care only for their own views and who speak so loudly, sit down and remain quiet. And will all those who have the heart to help, stand up and, start right now along the road to genuine understanding and friendliness toward any Belleville youth we may have the privilege to encounter.

Railroads in the Red

Montreal Star

History or sentiment, of course, cannot dictate the expensive decisions which must be made about the future of Canada's railways. But there are strong practical reasons as well why the Canadian Transport Commission should take a hard look at any plans to abandon trans-continental passenger service.

The most telling argument is that the service is still used. While air travel has eaten into much of the railways' passenger potential, there are still thousands of citizens who prefer, for reasons of economy or temperament or convenience, to travel by train. They have reacted warmly to the efforts of Canadian National Railways to woo them as passengers and they have refused to be put off by the distaste with which the CPR has long regarded its passenger service.

The CPR has already abandoned one of its trans-Canada passenger trains and the CNR has received permission to drop one of its.

Despite the government's commendable distaste for subsidies, the trans-continental passenger service is clearly one which should be maintained in the public interest. There is no reason why the railway should not pay its share of maintaining it. The CPR was rewarded generously by Canadian governments in the form of land grants and tax concessions, for providing the service in the first place. It should not now object to paying its share of keeping it going.

Biafrans Should Be Evacuated

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Planes returning from Biafra after delivering relief supplies should evacuate children to safe areas where food and medical care can be provided.

In time, fewer relief flights will be needed.

Canadian initiative to organize members of the United Nations and relief agencies is urgently required.

How about it Pierre?

Apartments Draw Attention

German Features

STUTTGART — A futuristic apartment building complex, designed by Belleville native Claus-Horst Dollinger and certain to arouse worldwide construction interest, is soon to be built near Saarbruecken, Germany.

The project, being dubbed "The City of Ladder Towers" because of its ladder-like look, will supply apartments for 30,000 people. The apartments would be threaded vertically into three supporting masts with heights of 200 and 400 feet, form the imaginary steps of the ladder.

Other designs, also belonging to modernist Dollinger, are to be used in the "New Saar" complex.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nov. 18, 1863 . . .

The first incorporation of standard time in North America began at midnight 86 years ago — in 1883 — in eastern Nova Scotia. Scottish-born Sir Sandford Fleming, a surveyor in Canada in 1845, probably had more to do with the introduction of standard time around the world than anyone else. He first publicly proposed the international standard time measurement at Toronto in 1879.

1936— The Toronto Globe bought the rival Mail and Empire and merged the two papers as The Globe and Mail.

1939—The Board of Broadcast Governors announced regulations governing television broadcasting.

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—the United States 3rd Army infantry entered Metz; street fighting raged in Antwerp; RAF bombed the German rail centre of Muenster; German troops were reported to have evacuated Tirana, capital of Albania; U.S. carrier-based planes destroyed 110 Japanese planes and three enemy merchant ships in raids on Manila harbor and nearby airfields.

NDP and International Unions

Winnipeg Free Press

Illogically, the NDP's distaste for all things non-U.S. and 46-100 per cent Canadian failed to extend to the labor movement from which the party draws much of its financial support via international unions. The convention approved a change in the constitution to provide for the addition of members on the federal council from each of the 12 affiliated unions with the largest number of affiliated members; they include the United Steelworkers, United Automobile Workers, International Woodworkers of America, United Rubberworkers of America, textile Workers Union of America, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, International Association of Machinists, Glass and Ceramic Workers of America, and others. The lead officer in the United States. American influence and infiltration apparently is bad for Canada as the executive board only.

The resolution adopted in place of the Watkins manifesto says: "Unions should be free by all available means, the New Democratic Party calls on Canadians to free their country from foreign domination of its economy, of its cultural development and of its international policies." In the latter instance, the party moved fastest when recognizing Canada's international responsibilities than it ever has in the past, by approving a resolution calling for this country's total withdrawal from NATO, from NORAD, and from joint U.S.-Canada defence production sharing arrangements. This was the logical end of the international road down which the NDP has been going. Only a week before some of its most respected members in a rather unenviable position. The defection of 22 members at Ottawa is far from unanimous about Canada's international role. Andrew Brewin, the party's foreign affairs critic, does not subscribe to total withdrawal from NATO. But if this is party policy then Mr. Brewin will have to voice it in Parliament or have the job of foreign affairs critic over to another member of the caucus.

Astronauts Will Devote Most of Time On Their First Moon Walk to Science

HOUSTON (AP) — Except for six minutes to erect a United States flag and eight minutes to place a color television camera in position, the Apollo 12 moon explorers plan to devote all their time to science on their first moon walk Wednesday.

Astronaut Charles Conrad plans to be outside three hours 14 minutes during the initial stroll while Alan Bean is expected to be outside two hours 23 minutes.

Wednesday's excursion will begin with Conrad backing out of the hatch of the moon-lander Intrepid at 8:02 a.m. EST. A second stroll begins at 11:32 a.m. Thursday, when Conrad and Bean visit the unmanned Surveyor III spacecraft, which soft-landed in 1967.

First color television should begin at 4:43 a.m. Wednesday after Conrad, standing on a ladder, opens a compartment in which the camera is mounted. Bean will turn the television on to show Conrad's descent to the moon's surface.

While Bean films Conrad with a 70-millimetre movie camera, the Apollo 12 commander will spend six minutes getting used to the low gravity, jumping up and down and testing his balance.

Using a scoop with an extension handle, Conrad will pick up a sample of rock and soil, put it in a bag and hook the handle to a container up a clothesline-like conveyor belt to Bean.

Conrad then will snap still photos as Bean starts down the ladder at 6:32 a.m.

After Bean familiarizes himself with the one-sixth gravity, Conrad will spring open an antenna which looks like an upside-down umbrella. Officials hope the antenna, to be activated for the second moon walk, will improve communications with earth.

Bean will mount the TV camera on a tripod 20 feet from the lander. Then he and Conrad push a staff into the ground and attach a nylon flag to it..

Bean will point the TV camera at a compartment on the back side of Intrepid, where the solar experiment instruments are stowed.

As Conrad continues to align the antenna, Bean is to erect an aluminum-foil "window shade" attached to a staff. Scientists hope the shade will capture atomic particles streaming from the sun.

Conrad then will pick up the panoramic view of the moon's surface while Bean photographs the landing craft's four footpads.

From the experiment compartment, both astronauts then will take out the scientific instruments contained in two packages. Using a long-handled tool, Bean will open a cask containing plutonium-238, an atomic fuel element, and insert it into a nuclear electric generator that powers the instruments.

Bean, carrying the experiment instruments and generator, and Conrad will walk to a site about 1,000 feet west of the moon-lander. There, they will deploy the instruments.

After photographing the experiment site, the astronauts will return to the landing craft and collect rock samples with long-handled tongs en route, stowing them in saddle bags attached to their waists.

Back at the Intrepid, Conrad and Bean will put the saddle bags in a box, then Bean will drive a core tube several inches into the moon's surface to collect a vertical profile of the lunar soil. It will be placed in the rock box.

Then Bean will re-enter Intrepid.

Using the conveyor belt, Conrad will transfer the rock box and cameras into Intrepid, now Conrad will re-enter the craft to rest and relax for 15 hours.

Science on the Moon

Drawing, based on a NASA drawing, shows how Apollo 12 astronauts plan deployment for ALSEP 1 — Advanced Lunar Surface Experiments Package. The array of scientific instruments is expected to beam data to earth for at least one year and perhaps two. The package includes a seismometer; a lunar ionosphere detector; a magnetometer; a solar wind spectrometer and a lunar atmosphere detector. (AP Drawing)

TV to Again Show Moonwalk

HOUSTON (AP) — Once more a white boot will crunch into the soil of the no longer-unridden moon and television will be there, live and in color.

It won't be like the first time, of course, yet the moon walks of Charles Conrad and Alan Bean Wednesday still will be unique and exciting, television—at 6 a.m. EST.

All three television networks plan to broadcast until well after the lunar lander touches down safely at 1:53 a.m. NBC says it will stay on all night.

ABC will open its moonwalk coverage at 5 a.m. when the astronauts are making final preparations for their climb down the spacecraft ladder. CBS will begin its telecast at 5:30 a.m.

Bean's first moon walk of the Apollo 12 mission will last until about 9:30 a.m. The second will stay on until 12:30 a.m. EST Thursday and also should last 3½ hours.

In July, when Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin made their historic Apollo 11 walk, the showing was in black and white and the system produced jumpy ages that had the jerky motion of early day movies.

When Intrepid, as the Apollo 12 lunar lander is called, carries a color camera in a storage compartment near its base.

Federal Anti-hate Bill Assailed as Too Strong and Too Weak

OTTAWA (CP) — More doubts were raised Monday about the federal anti-hate bill, which would make group defamation a crime, as it was debated and given second reading in the Commons.

Melvin McQuaid (PC—Cardigan), former attorney-general of Prince Edward Island, suggested that one clause might make it an offence to thumb your nose at an identifiable group.

Creditiste Rene Matte (Champlain) said the potential for abuse is "extraordinary." What seemed like a reasonable position to one man might look like promotion of hatred to another. He thought the courts would be overworked.

But Steve Otto (L—York East) pointed to some of the holes in the bill and said it would be ineffective. And Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) said cloudy terms like "wilful," historically difficult for the courts, should be removed or prosecutions would be unlikely.

Mr. Matte said a strong potential for abuse is the fact that provincial attorneys general will decide whether a charge will go to court.

Mr. Matte said that Quebec Justice Minister Remi Paul already is trying to get behind bars anyone who doesn't agree with him.

Mr. McQuaid and Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) also rejected the sections that put the fate of charges in the hands of the attorneys general.

Justice Minister John Turner said the bill was drafted "warily but wisely" to fill the holes in the Criminal Code. It would create three new offences:

—That of inciting or promoting genocide against any identifiable group.

—That of public incitement of hatred or contempt likely to lead to a breach of the peace.

—Wilful promotion of hatred or contempt for an identifiable group.

An identifiable group would mean any section of the public distinguished by color, race, religion or ethnic origin.

All parties gave support to the principle in the section on genocide. Mr. Woolliams recalled Hitler's butchery of European Jews 25 years ago and Mr. Brewin noted that a pro-Nazi group in Canada has been spreading anti-Semitic and anti-Negro propaganda.

The debate were raised about other sections of the bill.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) said hate can't be legislated out of existence any more than hard drinking can. But it could be controlled by law.

Mr. Winch, catching the almost general mood, said he isn't enthusiastic about the hate bill but is bound to support it.

David Lewis (NDP—York South) said the bill is essential because of the racial and religious prejudice just under the surface in most people. .

Quebec Seeks Control Of Family Allowances

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government is seeking complete control of the family allowance system as a first step towards new social welfare legislation.

Jean-Paul Cloutier, minister of family and social welfare, made public Monday a white paper which he said will form the basis for future discussions with the federal government.

Since the start of the Quebec Family Allowance Plan in 1967, the annual cost to the province in this field has been $80,000,000.

The federal government, meanwhile, hands out another $170,000,000 a year.

The white paper suggests that federal income tax exemptions for dependent children be abolished and the increased revenue be channeled into the proposed Quebec scheme.

Dr. Cloutier told a news conference the province plans to introduce a scheme to stimulate Quebec's declining birth-rate. This would be accomplished largely through increased benefits for larger families.

"Despite several representations to Ottawa, no agreement has been reached on Quebec's recommendation that it assume full jurisdiction for family allowances.

Given control, Quebec would revamp the allowance plan so that it covered the material needs of each child from the fourth up.

The cost would be met by taxing the amount of the family allowances themselves, taking into account the family's economic circumstances.

Dr. Cloutier said the current federal scheme—paying $6.00 monthly for each child under 10 years of age and $8.00 for those between 10 and 18—had serious weaknesses.

The current Quebec plan provides from $2.00 annually for the first child to $70 annually for every child after the fifth.

Last spring, legislation which would streamline all public aid services was introduced in Quebec's national assembly by Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand.

While grouping all social assistance statutes in a single act, Bill 26 would base its welfare payments on the difference which exists between the needs and the income of the family.

Street Cleaners Said Better Paid Than Civil Servants

TORONTO (CP) — Street cleaners employed by Metropolitan Toronto make more money than the majority of Ontario civil servants, the legislature was told Monday.

Most of the day was taken up with debates on salaries, prices, cost of hospital service insurance and the export of raw materials outside the province.

George Ben (L-Humber) told the house 64 per cent of Ontario civil servants make less than $6,000, while C. G. Pilsky (NDP-Oshawa) said one third or more of the civil service was living at or below the poverty line.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch said the government has a moral obligation to ensure wages are as high as possible while in line with what is being paid in the private sector of the economy.

"We are, for the classifications involved, paying what a good employer would pay in the private sector," he said.

On the question of prices, Premier John Robarts said his government has no intention of establishing a tribunal to review wages and prices increases.

Ontario to Stop Boost In Nickel Ore Exports

TORONTO (CP) — Mines Minister Allan Lawrence warned the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. Monday the government will not allow Inco to increase the amount of mineral products it exports is an unrefined state.

In a letter to Foster Todd, senior executive vice-president of Inco, the minister said he drew attention to a newspaper report that said the company plans to ship more of its nickel oxide production to Wales for refining and to market a higher proportion of its unrefined nickel.

"Both aspects of the published story are very decidedly contrary to the announced policy of this government," Mr. Lawrence said in the letter, which he read to the legislature.

Ontario recently passed legislation which requires mining companies to process in Canada 100 per cent of minerals mined in Ontario.

Although the new legislation officially comes into force next Jan. 1, most companies are expected to be granted temporary exemptions from the 100-per-cent rule and instead will be told they must achieve 51-per-cent processing in Canada during the next five years.

Mr. Lawrence said later in an interview that Inco, which now exports about 18 per cent of its Ontario production to Wales for refining and a lesser amount to Japan, has applied for a blanket exemption from the 100-per-cent rule.

The government has not made a decision on the application, but the mines minister said: "In no case will a company be allowed to exceed the 1968 exports of unprocessed minerals."

Contract Accepted

PORT COLBORNE, Ont. (CP) — Members of the United Steelworkers of America employed at the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. refinery voted overwhelmingly Monday in favor of accepting a new three-year contract.

Still Under Study

Davis Declines to Give Separate School Policy

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis resisted opposition attempts Monday to get from him some indication of the Ontario government's plans for Roman Catholic separate schools in the province.

Stephen Lewis (NDP—Scarborough West) said during a debate before the legislature's committee on education that the committee could only assume from the minister's silence "that the government intends to do nothing."

If the education department is seriously undertaking a study of separate school requests for additional public support, he said the minister would be able to give the public facts and figures on which a reasonable conclusion could be made.

The NDP caucus has approved for submission to a convention a report which advocates payment to separate schools, to the end of high schools.

The Liberals in a caucus statement have urged immediate equality in grants payable to Grades 9 and 10. They want a select committee of the legislature appointed to consider all aspects of extending public support to the end of high school.

The last statement from Premier John Robarts was that the status quo would be maintained while the government investigated the costs and other factors involved.

James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) warned the committee that unless the issue is settled in bipartisan fashion by the three political parties before the next provincial election, "you will have introduced into that campaign a most regressive issue."

"It isn't a religious question. It is one of justice—are our children not to be treated equally no matter what the religion of the parents?"

Mr. Davis said he is unable to answer questions about the costs of an extension of grants or the number of pupils actually involved.

"In fairness, and I am not ducking anything, this is a tough problem for the government and the province to face," Mr. Davis said.

"This really is government policy, and to engage in a discussion now might be misinterpreted."

Mr. Davis did indicate his sympathy for the equalizing of grants to the end of Grade 10.

Until 1964, provincial grants to separate schools extended only to the end of Grade 8. In 1965, through a new distribution of corporation taxes, they were extended to Grades 9 and 10, but did not achieve equality.

"Why resist the proposition that it might be a government responsibility to place the projected cost analysis of an extension in the public arena for debate?" asked Mr. Lewis.

"It may be that it will be," Mr. Davis replied.

Mr. Lewis said there are "enormous discrepancies" between the two educational systems which are "so profound in the later grades as to violate all tenets of equalitarians of opportunity."

"The gaps are so great as to require some response from government. Either let them know there is no viability in the separate school system or that there is some hope."

Shooting Accidental

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Monday that Gordon Clark, 19, of Toronto, died July 29 as the result of the accidental discharge of a shotgun in the possession of John Peter Bouwerneris, an admitted drug peddler, after both youths had taken drugs.

Bouwerneris, 18, of Toronto, testified under the Canada Evidence Act that he had been high on drugs every day for two weeks before the shooting and that he sold drugs in the Yorkville hippie district for two years.

The jury recommended the institution of regulations and stiffer penalties for the illegal manufacture, distribution and use of harmful drugs.

Belly Dancing Routine Performed in Edmonton Nightclub

EDMONTON (CP) — Sam T. Jack's was a popular Chicago night spot in 1892, when men flocked in to see a "hootchy-kootchy" dancer called Little Egypt.

A year later at the World's Columbian Exposition in that city, the rest of the world heard about Little Egypt when she introduced belly-dancing to North America.

Today, much of the "striptease" atmosphere surrounding this hypnotically exciting dance is gone. Instead, it's considered an art form, a folk dance. For Sylvia Ashton, it's both a job and a way of life.

Under the name Asmara, meaning "the dark one," she has been a hit at an Edmonton nightclub, and says she is one of a small group of North American dancers who is trying to remove the burlesque reputation from her dance.

"The dance is very ancient and it's changed a lot from what was just a folk dance to begin with . . . so it can be used as a dance in cabarets," she explains.

"One story is that it was originally a dance for women. They performed it for other women who were about to give birth and the dance consisted only of the stomach undulations.

"I don't know if it's true, but it's plausible."

Asmara, who has a BA in English literature from a small college in Wisconsin, now dances primarily at the Casbah in San Francisco, a major centre—if there is such a thing—for authentic belly-dancing.

"In the Middle East, they've become more Western. They're wearing costumes like gold heels and hairdos up to here.

"We're trained to be authentic, even to where we'll wear tattoos on our foreheads and dance in bare feet."

She first saw belly-dancing while visiting Egypt and Morocco in 1967 and was able to try it in the privacy of peoples' homes.

"When I went back to San Francisco, I took formal lessons."

And, she says, her main teacher was a man.

"There are several there. There are male belly-dancers in the Middle East too. In fact, they haven't had female belly-dancers in Morocco except in the last 20 years."

"It's the dance," she says, with the emphasis on "the," "... Just like the waltz in Austria and the bolero from Spain."

Although parts of the dance feature rhythmic movements of the stomach muscles and hips, much of the dance is reminiscent of Spain's graceful segadilla.

Instead of castanets, Asmara sometimes uses slinky fingertip cymbals, to match her movements which alternate between seductively slow and frantic beats. One part of her routine is done on her knees.

"This came from the Bedouins. They saw this dancing done by other Arab tribes and they tried to do it in their homes. But they had a problem. They lived in low tents and were forced to dance on their knees."

Her costume too tells a story.

It consists mainly of a halter, wide belt and harem pants. The halter and belt are studded with small gold or brass coins.

"They're Egyptian coins and the story's something like this . . .

"There are dancers along the Nile that they call the Gawazi. These are very young girls who, when their parents think they're going to be beautiful, train them to be very agile.

"They usually come from poor families, and these girls wouldn't have a chance to get a good meal with the money they'd have for a dowry.

"So they are trained and if, when they become teen-agers, they continue to be lovely, they'll begin to dance.

"There's a tradition of tipping . . . people throw money. When a girl has enough money for a dowry and a good husband, she'd go home and get married off and be fat and sloppy.

"That'd be the end of her career."

Belly-dancing in North America has always had a seamy aura here. Anne Corio, a stripper now called the Queen of Burlesque, said Little Egypt "never saw the Nile but could teach Cleopatra a thing or two."

Asmara's parents, when she began her career, were not pleased.

"But it's better now," she says. "The more they see me dance, the more they've talked to other people, the more they're impressed with the fact that it's more of an art and people are trying to do it because they're sincerely interested not because they're exhibitionists."

In San Francisco, "belly-dancers have another so-called cultural group to compete with—topless dancers—but Asmara has never considered the idea.

"It has no appeal. I've never seen one.

"Dancing means movement and I wouldn't think it would be very pleasant. I don't think it's very beguiling and it's not too mysterious."

REVIVES BELLY DANCING—Sylvia Ashton of Milwaukee, Wis. is one of the small number of North American dancers who profess to be serious students of the Middle Eastern art of belly-dancing. Currently appearing in an Edmonton night club, she dances under the name Asmara, meaning the dark one. She first saw belly-dancing while visiting Egypt and Morocco in 1967 and later studied under a male teacher in San Francisco. (CP Photo)

Women's Council Replaces PC Group

The Progressive Conservative Women's Association was voted out of existence last night at the general meeting held at the Kiwanis Centre but now will play an even more vital role as part of the combined association.

The general meeting of the Association, including young conservatives and the men's group voted unanimous acceptance of a resolution to form a joint association.

A women's council will be retained for social and financial reasons, with Mrs. Joyce Rendell as chairman. Mrs. Rendell was the president of former Progressive Conservative Women's group.

"The women will still be keeping their identity through the women's council, plus the fact that there will be an equal number of men and women on the executive," related a spokesman.

At their meeting, the women voted on a resolution to be presented at the Ontario Provincial convention, Dec. 6, 7 and 8 in Toronto.

The resolution recommends that the provincial party set up a study present succession duties, which can force a widow or her heirs to liquidate assets to meet duty payments.

The final meeting for the Women's Association as such will be on Dec. 10, at which time members are urged to bring toys to be given to the underprivileged children.

U.C.W. Meeting

DESERONTO UCW

DESERONTO — The November meeting of the Afternoon Unit of Deseronto UCW was held at the home of the leader, Mrs. Georgt Stuart who opened the meeting with prayer, and then read an article on "doing what is right."

Mrs. W. H. Sills, conducting the devotional period, was assisted by Mrs. Lloyd Gaylord and Mrs. Norman Davis. Mrs. Sills herself read an article on the early church.

Mrs. Merton Cummings, the secretary-treasurer, read the minutes and gave the financial report. Both were approved. She also called the roll. The offering was received including a special one for missions and was dedicated by the leader.

The topic for the month, "how to improve our church' was introduced by Mrs. Sills and a lively discussion followed. It was decided that the over-worked minister should have assistance, and that women could help by visiting older people and shut-ins and reporting to him. A plan to appoint two women for each month was approved, and will be submitted to the evening unit for their approval.

Also, the women felt that the UCW could come to the help of the stewards by paying the caretaker. The question of such a small UCW with a membership of approximately 35, being called on to pay an allocation was brought up but no action was taken.

Mrs. Harold Trantue asked for assistance in collecting articles for the bazaar 'touch and take' table of which she is the convener.

The formal meeting closed with prayer by the leader, after which refreshments were enjoyed. Hostesses were Mrs. Stuart, her daughter Patty, Mrs. Ethel Vandewater and Mrs. Merton Cummings.
